Rev. Harry E. Rickey, Natchitoches, La.: "Natchitoches parish went dry on Feb. 26. We signed Alcohol's death warrant by 83 majority, but will not hang him until the first of January, '96. The saloon must go, and not many years hence it will be like the auctioneers's call, 'going, going, gone.' . . . Our circuit—Melrose, Provencal, Natchitoches—has been organized, and, we trust, is clothing itself with new power. The Lord is needed to bare his mighty arm here. . . . The Shreveport district bids fair to spring into newness of life under the quickening touch of Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard. We believe he is a spiritual dynamo that will thrill us with revival shocks when the days of weariness come. . . . A flying trip to Shreveport revealed Dr. LaPrade hid away in a gem of a parsonage. Neat, bright, tasteful, winsome, so very home-like, it captured our heart and won our fancy. The learned Doctor has a heart-grasp and brain-clinch on his flock. Like a watchful shepherd, he leads them towards home revival, where they will feed on green pastures. We saw there the organization of the 'City Mission' into 'Jordan Street Church.' Henceforth this trim little craft is launched out on the Centennial seas under the hopeful pilot, Bro. Lula, to fight her way against the winds of conflict, the waves of worldliness and the undertow of collections. God speed her safely! . . . A stop over at Mansfield gave us in a picturesque perspective the big-hearted pastor superintending the re-roofing of the parsonage. In this weather-tight dwelling the worthy brother no longer sleeps between drips. . . . We saw things many that will keep for future delivery. As Shreveport district preachers possess no itch for writing, I come out to say for them as the watchman of the night, that 'all is well,' and, 'best of all, the Lord is with us.'"

DR. STEELE IN COLUMBUS.

We have had a revival here. The people were warmed up notwithstanding the cold, with the thermometer registering 2½ above zero. Though the streets were like glass, the meeting was very well attended.

I, for one, say that if Dr. Steele could warm them up under the circumstances, it is, it must be genuine! I don't expect to hear of any of them "falling from grace;" but they had better be careful of the elevations.

I am as near "grace," or being graceful, as I will ever be; but I came down the steps from our front gallery like an avalanche.

Dr. Steele preaches the gospel, and appeals to the heart and conscience of a man, not to his feelings. Who can estimate the good done here? It will only be known "when the books are opened, and the secrets of all hearts are revealed."

May God bless him in his work, and may he ever feel underneath him the "everlasting arms." A LISTENER

OBITUARIES.

FRENCH—CHARLES ARCHIE, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. French, was born Aug. 25, 1893, and died Jan. 24, 1895, after only a few days' suffering with croup.

The only boy of the four children, he soon became the centre of affection in that home, its chief joy and pride. His life, though short, was not a useless or an idle one. He was busy bringing mirth and happiness to everyone in that home, and his little baby fingers reached way down into those fond hearts and seized with immortal hold the best affections there. Then God called him, and, with his hands full of hearts, he went to heaven to lay them, a priceless offering, at Jesus' feet.

The little chair and cradle are empty now, the little shoes and dresses are put away; the patter of little feet, the accent of baby lips are heard no more. But little Archie is not dead. No! no! Secure from evil and distress, he is enjoying perfect and eternal life. We should not wish him back again from his delightful home. Indeed, he can not come to us, but we can go to him. By the beautiful gate he will wait and watch for the coming of those he loved, and glad and glorious will be the greeting as, one by one, the family assembles at the throne of God.

Archie dear, good-by, but only for a little while. Look for us, for we are coming when 'tis time.

H. M. ELLIS.

BRISTER—The Woman's Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, South, of Greenwood, Miss., met Tuesday evening, Feb. 4, 1895, for the first time since losing one of their most earnest workers in the death of Mrs. S. L. BRISTER, and passed the following resolutions:

Whereas, Our heavenly Father, in his infinite wisdom, saw fit on Nov. 21, 1894, to take home to her reward Mrs. S. L. Brister; And, whereas, She had long been one of our most zealous missionary workers, and, until detained at home by feeble health, a faithful and efficient officer; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, her bereaved friends and sisters, bow in humble submission to this mysterious dispensation of Providence, knowing that 'he doeth all things well," and fully realizing that our loss is her gain. The Father hath only called home one of his loving, trusting children. "He giveth his beloved sleep."

Resolved, That her death deprives us of a kind friend, our church of an earnest Christian, our society of an enthusiastic missionary worker. Though modest and retiring in manner, after "putting her hand to the plow" she looked not back; but we are assured the Master's commendation, "She hath done what she could," will be the sweetest music of her heavenly home.

Resolved, That we, her sisters, will cherish her memory and continually strive to emulate the bright and loving qualities which so adorned her character and endeared her to all with whom she came in contact; and we trust her burning desire for the spread of his kingdom may inspire each of us with renewed zeal and energy in our labors for the advancement of the glorious cause of missions.

Resolved, That we tender our sincerest sympathy to the sorrowing husband, parents and relatives in this their sore bereavement, and we pray that God may sustain them by his grace. MRS. W. S. SHIPMAN.

That Tired Feeling

The great benefit which people overcome by That Tired Feeling derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla proves that this medicine "makes the weak strong." J. B. Emerton, a well known merchant of Auburn, Me., says: "About 5 years ago I began to suffer with very severe pain in my Stomach, gradually growing worse. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, being convinced that I was troubled with Dyspepsia and Liver and Kidney troubles. I improved at once and am very much better and feel more like working.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Free Speech.

Tuesday night of last week, Prof. Slattery, an ex-priest in the Catholic Church, delivered a lecture in the Masonic Temple, Savannah, Ga., and during the lecture a mob of about 5,000 Catholics surrounded the building, broke in the windows, and attempted to get in to mob the lecturer. The entire police force and ten companies of militia were called out to quiet and disperse the mob, but did not succeed until after midnight. That is a pretty spectacle in free America. A Catholic can speak and lecture when and where he pleases, but let it be announced that a Protestant, or ex priest, will lecture on Catholicism, and at once a mob is organized to prevent it. And this Savannah mob was organized and headed by the Ancient Order of Hibernians, a Catholic secret organization. Here is a church holding first allegiance to a foreign potentate, the Pope of Rome, seeking to prevent free speech in a country in which they have found homes and liberty. The time has come when Protestants should open their eyes to this outrage, and prepare, in some peaceable manner, to put a stop to it. It is such conduct as this that seems to call for the A. P. A.'s, a society for the protection of our American free institutions, and the perpetuation of our liberties as a people. The question is: Shall Rome rule America? It will do it unless America rules Rome.—Central Methodist.

No prerogative of American citizenship should be more jealously guarded than that of free speech. This is absolutely essential to the perpetuity of our American institutions. Of course, there are limits to the freedom of speech; but those limits are fixed by law. The man who utters malicious falsehood for the purpose of working injury to any man or class of men can be held to account at the bar of justice. No limits other than those set by law can be tolerated for a moment. The man who resorts to violence for the purpose of suppressing free speech on the part of his fellow-man is as perfect an outlaw as the highway robber. Yea, he is a more dangerous criminal. The one appropriates his neighbor's gold; the other takes that which is of infinitely greater value than gold. Yet it seems that there are many citizens of this great republic, "the land of the free," who belong to this class of high-grade criminals. In several cities recently mob violence has been resorted to for the suppression of free speech. A man who proposes to expose what he regards as the follies and sins of Romanism escapes a violent death only by the timely interposition of the strong arm of government. We do not know what the ex-priest, Slatterly, says in his lectures. We do not know whether his utterances are true or false; and it makes not a particle of difference so far as this question is concerned. If he utters falsehood, his misstatements can be corrected by speech and pen. If he maligns his fellow-citizens, there are the courts; let them implead. These cases of mob violence bring into bold relief the difference between Catholism and Protestantism. Of course, we do not say that the authorities of the Catholic Church are responsible for these outbreaks, or that all Catholics approve them. We know that there are many Catholics who deprecate anything of this sort as sincerely as any Protestant; and yet the fact remains that the thousands who composed these bloodthirsty mobs were Catholics—not Protestants. Protestants do not resort to that method of answering their antagonists. A man may go to any city in America and utter the most malicious libels against any denomination of Protestants without the slightest danger of mob violence. Protestants would either let such a man severely alone, or else they would reply by speech and pen. If the Catholics of the United States propose to resort to this sort of tactics whenever their church is assailed, then they have a huge contract on their hands.

Avoidance of Disease.

If we would only take half the trouble to protect our souls from impurity that we take to protect our bodies against small-pox, yellow fever, and such like, how much more saint-like we would be. Unless afflicted with poverty, men will not let their bodies suffer for lack of food and clothing. The wise are careful to observe the laws of health and, as far as possible, avoid living in unhealthy climes. Men, one and all, earnestly covet vigor and health of body, and shun contagious diseases.

How much more important it is that we should observe the conditions necessary to spiritual health. Do we refrain from needless contact with the morally unsound? How much truth there is in those oft-quoted lines:

"Vice is a monster of so frightful mien
As to be hated needs but to be seen;
But seen too oft, familiar with her face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

Are we careful to company much with those strong in the faith and abundant in good deeds? Do we continue in prayer? Are we watchful of our own hearts? If so, we will call in the aid of the Great Physician so soon as we detect the least symptoms of pride or sinful desire. Are we careful to take the medicine of repentance and self-denial when we have been overtaken by a fault, whether great or small? Do we feed each day upon food convenient for us? upon the Word of God, which is the Bread of Life? Do we also make use of those helps to spiritual knowledge, religious books and papers? Do we take spiritual exercise in the way of visiting and praying with the sick, in ministering to the needy, in warning men of sin, in striving to lead our fellowmen to Christ, in building up one another in the faith? He that doeth these things will be spiritually strong. The infection of sin will have no power over him, but he shall rejoice in the Lord always.

Miss Belle Kearney.

Under the heading, "the Frances E. Willard of the South," the St. Louis Advocate, of a few weeks since, in reporting the proceedings of the Y. W. C. T. U. Convention held in that city, has this to say concerning Miss Belle Kearney:

During the days of the convention, which was held in the Pilgrim Congregational Church, the weather was about as severe as we have ever seen it in Missouri, nevertheless the interest and audience increased to the very last, when the room overflowed, a large number unable to enter.

There were several from other States whose consecrated culture, brains and general ability astonished us, but the greatest surprise of all was a young lady from Mississippi, of whom we had never heard. [That is what a man gets by not reading the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.—EDITOR.] We know this admission is to argue the writer unknown; but how such a brainy and brilliant young woman could develop in Southern Methodism, without the church at large knowing more about her or utilizing her talents, is another illustration of our overweening conservatism. Her speeches in the convention gave her such a sudden fame in the city, that she spoke three hours on Sunday in three of the leading churches of St. Louis, to immense and enraptured audiences. The rising generation of the young women of our land will be an important factor in driving the wine cup from society, if not the saloon from politics. We are very sorry to admit that there are a few back numbers in Southern Methodism, who still have wine on their tables. To any of our churches so afflicted, we suggest that you give a hearing to this rising star of the South. And to our female colleges of the South, we suggest that you leave some of us awkward men at home this season, and invite to deliver your commencement address Miss Belle Kearney, of Flora, Mississippi.

The Harp of the Senses.

This writer has never had the pleasure of listening to a more entertaining or helpful lecture than the one recently delivered in Natchez by Prof. John B. De Mott on "The Harp of the Senses; or, Character-building." For nearly two hours and a half his audience listened with breathless attention to a steady stream of wit, wisdom and eloquence, rendered more entrancing by the introduction at frequent intervals of stereopticon views and rare scientific experiments. As a synopsis of this admirable lecture may be of interest to many of the ADVOCATE readers, we shall attempt to give some account of what we saw and heard. Our ability as reporter, however, is hardly equal to the task of doing the lecture full justice.

Prof. DeMott began by remarking: "I do not see you; neither do you see me. I see only the house in which you live, and you see only the house in which I live." He then went on to show that the soul, the real self, that part of us which feels and reasons and wills, can not communicate with the outer world save through the medium of the senses. Thought, intangible as it is, must be made cognizable by the material senses of hearing and vision before other beings can know and be uplifted by the beatific visions of the poet or the transports of the orator.

The wonderful mechanism of the organs of sense was made clear by experiments and pictorial illustrations embodying the latest discoveries of science. The nature of sound, of heat, and of light was discussed in turn, and each of these physical phenomena was shown to consist of vibrations, which, affecting appropriate media, finally reach the brain, and thus inform us of matters external. It was most vividly demonstrated that our knowledge of externals is due to the communications of force or energy from some outside source to the sensory nerves, and not by the transference of material particles; and that all impressions perceptible by the organs of sense are caused by vibrations, which, on reaching the nerve centers, are telegraphed to the brain.

The senses were thus shown to compose a harp of many strings, which are responsive to the touch of the external universe. Some of the strings of this human harp appear to be broken, for between certain limits no impression is made upon the organs of sense. For instance, between the sound and the heat waves there is a large number of vibrations which neither the eye nor the fingers can perceive. "Some day, perhaps, in another world these broken strings shall be repaired, and the harp will respond to harmonies that now are unperceived."

The most striking, as well as the most instructive, part of the lecture was the discussion of the physical basis of habit. In this connection Prof. DeMott did not give hastily formed conclusions or questionable facts. He is evidently a close student of human nature, and what he presented is the result of years of careful investigation and experiment. "Science has clearly demonstrated," he said, "that no act we perform ends with itself. It leaves behind in the nerve centers the tendency to do the same thing again." The connection between voluntary and involuntary action is so intimate that it is impossible to tell where one ends and the other begins. The ganglia, or nerve centers, correspond to telegraph stations that receive messages from and transmit them to the grand central office, the brain. When a nerve center has responded to a call made upon it, the track is worn smooth, so to speak, so that the next time a similar message comes, the response is easier. After a nerve center has made several such responses it becomes like an obstinate, heedless operator. No longer does it wait to hear from the brain before sending out orders to the muscular system, but it acts on its responsibility; and thus in a little while that which required effort and the close attention of the brain becomes habitual and involuntary or mechanical. We never do our best work until our nerve centers have become trained in this way. It is not the skilled musician who has to look at each note carefully. The difference between genius and mediocrity is largely a matter of trained nerve centers.

The lecturer then told of a pathetic accident which recently came under his notice. Two friends were out hunting. One of them started up several ducks, which were about to fly away unperceived by the other. Calling to his friend, he said: "Quick! quick! there they go!" Turning suddenly and seeing the game in full view, the huntsman involuntarily pulled the trigger before perceiving that his friend was dangerously near, and with fatal effect. He would not have killed his friend for worlds, but finger muscles had responded so often before in the excitement of the chase, that they acted of themselves without consulting eye or brain.

We wish every youth in the land could have heard Prof. DeMott's earnest warning against "sowing wild oats." "Nothing more false was ever proclaimed," he said, "than that a man can indulge in evil, and then be as good and as useful as if he had never allowed his passions to run riot." He then cited an illustration, the case of a father, who, grieved at some evil deed that his son had committed, bade the boy drive a nail into a new board, draw it out, and then draw out the hole also. Science as well as Scripture authoritatively declares that "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." One of the most pathetic sights we meet with in life is that of a man struggling to repair the evil done to body and soul by dissolute habits in the days of youth. When we come to God in all earnestness, he graciously forgives the past, and gives us grace to lead new lives; but our bodies are the same. The bird with the broken pinion never soared as high again. Many a young man, Prof. DeMott thinks, wastes energy that, properly utilized, would transform him into a genius, or render him immortal.

The only safe course, the lecturer said, is to watch the beginnings of evil. Science, speaking from the material side, declares that there is no such thing as a sudden fall from the path of honesty and virtue. In every case the descent is gradual. First, petty thieveries, small sins covered up, lustful thoughts entertained, followed by offenses a little graver in character, till finally the world is startled by the commission of some outrageous crime. Criminals are not born in a day, but are developed. A number of illustrations of this truth were cited, one of which we give in brief:

In a certain jewlery store, in which Prof. DeMott himself clerked when a boy, there was employed a young man of excellent reputation, who, one day being in need of money, extracted fifty cents from his employer's drawer. This trifling theft led to other and larger stealings. His dishonesty being discovered, his employer, out of pity, agreed to retain him on condition of his reformation. But the habit of dishonesty had become so fixed that in a few months he was again caught stealing from his employer. This time he was sent to the penitentiary for a term of years. On serving out his sentence his old employer was kind enough to try him again. His wife and friends were now sure that he was effectually cured of dishonesty. But, alas! they knew not the power of habit. Though receiving a good salary, though conscious that another theft meant ruin for himself and those he loved, the man fell again. "A clear case of kleptomania," says one. "Nay, for the man began by taking only what he needed, which is seldom true of kleptomaniacs." On being reproached for his folly and perversity, the poor fellow acknowledged that once he was master of his will, but that now he would steal in spite of himself. Cases like this are far more numerous than is generally supposed.

In the conclusion of his discourse Prof. DeMott made a stirring appeal in behalf of young men. He charged society with being kind to her daughters, but cruel to her sons. Girls from infancy to womanhood are shielded from all contaminating influences, while boys of tender age are turned loose in the world to become familiar with vice of every shade and form. Strangely enough, it is thought all right for a young man to become a moral leper. If a young man goes to a large city on a pleasure trip, in about nine cases out of ten he will come back with a blistering memory. He thinks that while there he must see and enjoy everything, the good as well as the bad. And so on his return it takes one-half of his mentality to keep the other half from telling on him. But how different the experience of the average young lady who takes such a trip. Save for a few annoyances and disappointments, she has only the most pleasant recollections. No regrets, no stings of conscience for her. She can talk without reserve about everything she saw and heard. There ought to be the same safeguards thrown about the youth of both sexes. Until this is the case, it is folly to expect our boys to be as pure as our girls. If anything, women are morally stronger than men, better able to withstand temptation.

The present attitude of society toward boys Mr. DeMott compared to the conduct of a father who would dress his son in combustibles from head to foot, put powder and dynamite in his pockets, and then send him out where the air is ablaze with sky-rockets and roman-candles, saying to him as he leaves the door: "Son, go out and have a good time; but whatever you do, don't catch on fire."

The closing sentences contained the following epigrammatic bits of advice: 1. Conserve your energy. 2. Have an inward reverence for your body. 3. Thoughts are deeds, and may become crimes.

Would that Prof. DeMott could deliver this inimitable lecture in every city and hamlet in the land.

McKENDREE M. BLACK.

I am glad, however, to say we have now but little drunkenness in the army; less indeed of it in our ranks than in any other class of her Majesty's subjects. To this fact I consider we owe much of the improvement in every respect that has been steadily going on amongst us for the past twenty years."

The Advocate for One Dollar.

We can not take subscriptions at this rate and then wait until Conference for the money. Let all our preachers make this offer known as rapidly as possible.

Brother preacher, it would neithor compromise your dignity nor desecrate the Sabbath if you should make this offer known to your people from the pulpit. Let laymen also lend a helping hand by spreading the news of our liberal offer. Let it be known that subscribers to the ADVOCATE, at whatever price, become beneficiaries of our various premium offers—"Earthly Footsteps of the Man of Galilee," as well as the rest.

New Bible Map.

It should be borne in mind that this map is the very latest publication of its kind, having been specially prepared to accompany the new Holy Land series entitled, "Earthly Footsteps of the Man of Galilee."

This work was justly considered so important, from a Biblical, historical and geographical standpoint, as to warrant the labor and expense involved in the preparation of an entirely new map to illustrate and explain its manifold interesting features, but a most important special purpose is served from the fact that it traces in red the journeyings of the Savior and his apostles from Egypt through Palestine and Asia Minor to Greece, Rome and the Archipelagic Islands.

It becomes, therefore, a most useful supplement to the complete and comprehensive work of which it forms a part.

A copy of the map accompanies each one of the twenty-four parts which form the series, and it is, therefore, most convenient for reference and study in an inspection of the superb photo-engravings, and a perusal of the interesting and instructive descriptions which accompany them.

"Earthly Footsteps of the Man of Galilee" has proved itself one of the most highly prized publications of the last year, not only in America, but also in England, over 250,000 copies of the various parts having been ordered for that country.

It is equally appreciated by Bible scholars, students of history and lovers of art, from many of whom earnest expressions of congratulation and commendation have been received.

By special arrangement, we are able to offer this magnificent religio-educational, fine art work to our readers, on the exceptionally easy terms which appear elsewhere in this issue, and it should also be remembered that a handsome and durable portfolio holder will be presented to everyone completing the entire series of twenty-four parts.

It has never before been our privilege to make so liberal an offer, and we feel assured that our readers will bestow the fullest measure of appreciation.

Mission Rooms, M. E. Church, South.

[We invite attention to the following from our Missionary Secretaries.]

DEAR BROTHER: Bishop Galloway returns profoundly impressed with the possibilities in the East. Japan a new force, Korea under reconstruction, and China humble and teachable as never before. The Emperor in Pekin seeks in the Christian's Bible the hidden springs of national power.

Rev. C. F. Reid, in Shanghai, has received 150 probationers since Conference. The oldest missionaries are unanimous in their opinion that the hour for China's redemption has come. The church must now go forward.

Our fiscal year closes with the last day of this month. If the church advances during the year to come, we must have immediate returns from all our pastors. Can you not take a cash collection on your assessment at once and forward the same with what you already have in hand to your Conference treasurer, so as to reach him not later than the twenty-eight of March? Yours in Christ,

H. C. MORRISON,
WALTER R. LAMBUTH.

Nashville, Tenn., March 9, 1895.

Veterans' Day.

Brother preacher, have you kept it? Are you keeping it? We must have $1 500 by April 1. Can we not send forward twice that much, so that the Board will not be under the necessity of issuing another call until August?

Remember that if things are close with you and your people, they are still more distressing to your old comrades. Remember that the church has made you the steward for the superannuate, the widow, and the orphan. What account are you making of your stewardship? "As ye would that men should do unto you," let this be the rule of our action.

On the first Sunday at a country appointment, the chairman raised $25 for this cause. Dear brother, give your people an opportunity to contribute to this holy cause. Set them an example in cheerful giving. Roll together the dollars and the dimes until every claimant is paid in full and enough over to give to each a Christmas present.

Let us hear from you, brethren of the Brookhaven district, about "Do-without Week" and "Veterans' Day." Brother Hopper raised half of his whole assessment for his charge of five churches. I might add he had Rev. J. W. Chambers, the all-round Methodist preacher. Good on a circuit, fine at the head of a college, and fills the place of his presiding elder finely. Remember our motto: "A revival in every church on every charge," and "Every dollar on every assessment." Why not?

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. ARDENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE SIN-OFFERING.

(Lev. iv, 1-7; Heb. ix, 7, 12-14; Heb. x, 3-12.)

The sin-offering differed from the other sacrifices in that it was made for sins committed through ignorance. For sins of this nature of the laity and clergy

1. There exists much ignorance about matters of religion. "Hid from your eyes," says Christ of the inhabitants of Jerusalem. Ignorant.

(1) This ignorance is frequently so dense that it partakes of the nature of folly. "The fool hath said in his heart, there is no God."

(2) Many are ignorant in regard to the design of the Christian religion, viz.: To make us children of God. Are content with empty ceremonies.

(3) Ignorant as to the nature of the new birth, believing in baptismal regeneration.

(4) Ignorant as to the relation of faith to works. That by faith we are saved; but that faith without works is dead.

(5) That faith comes by hearing the Word of God. That it is hence our solemn duty to attend divine service.

2. Man is not guiltless because of ignorance. He sinned in not ridding himself of ignorance.

(1) Free schools in large number throughout our land.

(2) Men of opulence assist gladly in giving worthy young men even a college education.

(3) Books and periodicals cheap. Money spent for them is well invested.

(4) Lectures on important subjects very frequently.

(5) The pulpit is an excellent educator. The regular attendant on divine service can not remain ignorant in regard to his religious obligations.

3. Our merciful Father in heaven is willing to forgive our sins of ignorance. He will abundantly pardon.

(1) St. Paul found forgiveness of his sins, of which he says that he had ignorantly committed them. (I. Tim. i, 13.)

(2) The Psalmist prayed for forgiveness of presumptuous sins—i. e., sins of ignorance.

(3) So we pray, pray daily for forgiveness of sins of which we are not aware. It is indeed lamentably true that relative ignorance adheres to us throughout life. So long as we are not omniscient we will err. Error and sin are yoke-fellows. Thus the best will have to pray daily: "God, be merciful to me, a sinner."

Under the Knife

Of the surgeon there is no more acute suffering than people endure every day with Rheumatism. Distorted and withered limbs mark its ravages everywhere. Dr. Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism has a remarkable record of cures—not only relieving the pain, but restoring all the functions of the crippled limbs. Send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and the full month's treatment of two large bottles will be sent to your express address. Agent wanted.

A Good Investment.

I mean that any Methodist, preacher or layman, who has a daughter to educate can find no better investment than to buy one of Bro. Chambers' school bonds. Brookhaven has faith in the college and its president, and has shown her faith by taking $1,000 worth of these bonds. Let our district show its faith in and esteem for Whitworth by taking $5 000 worth of these bonds. My brother, take a bond, if only for $10 or $25. Don't wait too long or you will be too late. Bonds well secured.

R. D. NORSWORTHY.

The out-and-out Christian is a joyful Christian. The half-and-half Christian is the kind of Christian that a great many of you are—little acquainted with the joy of the Lord. Why should we live half-way up the hill and swathed in mists when we might have an unclouded sky and a visible sun over our heads if we would only climb higher, and walk in the light of his face?—Dr. Maclaren.

MY MOTHER.

Who led me from her gentle breast,
And hush'd me in her arms to rest,
And on my cheek sweet kisses prest?
My mother.

When sleep forsook my open eye,
Who was it sung sweet lullaby,
And rocked me that I should not cry?
My mother.

Who sat and watched my infant head,
When sleeping in my cradle bed,
And tears of sweet affection shed?
My mother.

When pain and sickness made me cry,
Who gazed upon my heavy eye,
And wept for fear that I should die?
My mother.

Who ran to help me when I fell,
And would some pretty story tell,
Or kiss the part to make it well?
My mother.

Who taught my infant lips to pray,
To love God's holy Word and day,
And walk in wisdom's pleasant way?
My mother.

And can I ever cease to be
Affectionate and kind to thee,
Who wast so very kind to me?
My mother.

Oh, no! the thought I can not bear,
And, if God please my life to spare,
I hope I shall reward thy care,
My mother.

When thou art feeble, old and gray,
My healthy arms shall be thy stay,
And I will soothe thy pains away.
My mother.

And when I see thee hang thy head,
'Twill be my turn to watch thy bed,
And tears of sweet affection shed,
My mother.

Interesting Women.

BY MISS MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

If I were a girl anywhere along in the bright years which lie between fourteen and twenty, I would set it before myself as a goal worth striving for—to become an interesting woman. The interesting woman is always sought for, always welcome, always gives pleasure and finds chances to be useful. It does not make much difference whether she is pretty or plain, she possesses a secret of more value than beauty, and a charm which always makes homeliness peculiarly attractive.

I can think at this moment of several interesting women whom I have known. One, a dumpy, dark, little woman, with irregular features, and the worst taste in dress that I ever saw, was so bright a talker, so quick in repartee, so full of cheery jests and of agreeable stories, that whenever she came into a room a ripple of expectation ran all through it. "There's Mrs. V——," people would say, "now things will be stirred up." Once I saw her at a picnic, seated on a moss-grown log, telling in her own bright way some reminiscences of her girlhood among the Welsh Mountains, and children stopped their play to listen to the story; the older people grouped around intent and amused; the minister took out his note-book and pencil behind her back, and entered a suggestion or two for a future sermon. There she sat, in her blue satin bonnet with yellow flowers, her brown delaine gown with gay figures sprinkled over it—an ill-dressed, elderly, but fascinating gentlewoman. To the latest day of a long life she remained interesting to everybody, most so to her own husband and her children and grandchildren.

Another woman I think of is still young and in no way remarkably endowed, except in this same quality of captivating people's hearts and pleasing people's fancies. "She is worth her weight in gold," said a fellow-member of the literary society lately, "and yet you would not call her clever—I don't know how to define it—but, to my mind, Miss K—— is so delightfully interesting."

If some girl ask how she is to set about attaining this advantage, I can assure her that the recipe is quite within her reach.

She must stop letting her life centre around herself. Think little of yourself, dear girl, and dwell on the needs of others. Try, as Ruskin says so well, "to please people and to serve them in dainty ways." Live an altruistic life, but live it right in your own home, in your own street, in your own church.

The interesting girl, by which I mean, as you have, of course, gathered by this time, the girl who interests, goes through the world with her eyes open. A wide-awake lassie, no bit of knowledge escapes her; she garners from her reading, from her social opportunities, from her walks and her daily work, a store of incident and information, which she has on hand when needed.

The interesting girl, who will be an interesting woman, by-and-by, does not have false standards of value. She will not judge, as some silly girls do, of a man's merit by his clothes only. Neither a cutaway coat nor pointed shoes, nor an elegant distinction of evening dress with manners to suit, will prove passports to her favor, unless there be a true man behind the apparel. The girl who has mind enough to be interesting has mind enough to go under the surface when choosing her companions and friends.

There is, believe me, nothing specially occult or difficult about this thing. You can be as interesting as ever woman was since the world began, if you will elect to be so. And neither good looks nor good family, nor even good feeling and good principles will suffice to keep you from being stupid and monotonous, unless each is supplemented by sweetness of manner, kindness of heart, tact, intelligence, and the desire to please, which make people interesting.

I ask thee for a thoughtful love,
Through constant watching wise,
To meet the glad with joyful looks,
And wipe the weeping eyes;
A heart at leisure from itself,
To soothe and sympathize.

The Faculty of Not Noticing.

BY KATE UPSON CLARK.

Gen. H. K. Oliver upon being asked to what one faculty more than to any other he attributed his success as a disciplinarian, replied promptly, "To my faculty for not noticing." In connection with this the response of a bright woman in answer to a question concerning the tendency of women to constantly say "Don't" to their children may come in point.

"The reason why so many women are continually checking their children seems to me," she said, laughingly, though with an undercurrent of seriousness, "because women have usually so little chance to exercise authority that they like to display whatever shred of power they have. They usually stand in sufficient awe of their servants not to pester and tease them with continual remonstrances; but their children they feel at liberty to check and direct, or try to do so whenever they feel like impressing people."

Now did anyone ever see a woman with the peculiarly alluded to who was a good disciplinarian? I think not. The women who can hardly see their children move without saying, "Be still," "Don't," or "How can you!" are almost invariably the weak sisters, and their incessant "dinning" at their helpless subjects soon brings their words into disrespect.

Gen. Oliver's wise words will bear pondering upon by every teacher and every mother, for every mother is in one of her most important capacities only a teacher too.

Take pains not to see every little thing. That is, see it, but don't say anything about it. If a child seems to have no malice, but only to be heedless, do not observe him every time that you see him doing something a little out of the way. Discriminate carefully between the acts that require instant and sharp reprimands and even severe penalty, and the little misdemeanors which may be passed over in love and mercy and wisdom. In other words, never make your chidings so cheap and so frequent that they become meaningless to your child. But never pass over a flagrant offense. A little boy once said to his younger brother, "You'd better not do that. That's the kind of thing mama always whips you for; she never skips once."

Never "skip once" anything in which a moral principle is violated. But there are scores of disagreeable things of which a child must be broken eventually, but which it won't do to see every time. It is an art, this learning how to "not notice," but it is one which it will pay everybody in authority to learn.

The Backward Child.

The backward child may indeed be deficient in application, not in capacity. Should this be so, arouse him not by a hailstorm of nagging or a downpour of fault-finding, but by a system of rewards lovingly adapted to his disposition and character. Suffer no discouragement to creep into your own heart concerning him, and do not allow him or her to feel that there is reason for any doubt about the reaching the top of the ladder in due season. The top, mind, not the middle rounds; anyone can reach these. Set a definite aim before your child, cultivate a high and noble ideal, but be willing to climb slowly. Haste is at the root of many a failure, haste and lack of thoroughness as one goes on.

With a tender regret for lost opportunities, who has not sometimes seen a mature woman timid, self-conscious, handicapped from youth to gray hairs simply because she was a "backward" child once, and, therefore, was snubbed and ridiculed and pushed into the background, while her sisters and brothers bore off the honors and were the objects of universal estimation? A wrong for life was done to the little daughter, and her daughter may perhaps suffer from the same old mistake, for wrongs are far-reaching. Be pitiful and just to the backward child in your home.—Margaret E. Sangster.

Where Are We Drifting?

Are not the children of the church growing up without parental restraint? Are they not allowed their own way too much, and often, altogether? What has become of parlor and table manners in children? What has become of reverence to old people, and with it refinement and old-fashioned good breeding, and the catechism in the family?

Boys and girls, nowadays, avoid the company of old people. They do not engage in conversation with their seniors, with the view of mental improvement and moral advancement. Promenades between the sexes, along some lonely road, often at night; nocturnal buggy rides; swinging in the hammock that hangs in the remote corner of the yard, and sitting in the shaded grotto, impenetrable to the rays of the sun and moon and to mortal ken, are some of the indulgences of the present age. Gentlemen and ladies who engage in such formerly forbidden pastimes may be as pure as the driven snow, but who knows it?—Christian Observer.

"God Will Know You."

One evening about Christmas a gentleman was strolling along a street in Toronto, with apparently no object in view but to pass away the time. His attention was attracted by the remark of a little girl to a companion in front of a fruit stand: "I wish I had an orange for ma."

The gentleman saw that the children, though poorly dressed, were clean and neat, and, calling them into the store, he loaded them with fruits and candies.

"What is your name?" asked one of the girls.

"Why do you want to know?" queried the gentleman.

"I want to pray for you," was the reply.

The gentleman turned to leave, scarcely daring to speak, when the little one added:

"Well, it don't matter. God will know you anyhow."—Epworth Herald.

Some of the greatest poets and greatest preachers, as we know from their own testimony, have had revealed to them, by intercourse with humble folk, truths which shine in song and sermon like newly-discovered stars. Talents, the gift of expression, may be needed to give utterance to these revelations of God, but the truth itself—the living of it, the feeling of it, and the knowing of it—comes to each of us, according to the depth and sincerity of our lives.

Is it not an inspiring and ennobling thought, that none of us is devoid of the prophetic function; that we are all discoverers of truth and interpreters of life, by the very nature of our beings and by the method of Providence? The essence of prophecy is discernment—not the power of foreseeing, nor the gift of proclaiming. Every man may have in himself the essentials of an Isaiah or a Browning. If he lives earnestly, thinks seriously, endures bravely, there may come to him a message, sacred and resplendent, for which the world has been waiting all these centuries.—Zion's Herald.

Hygiene.

Total Abstinence and Long Life.

Hon. J. N. Skinner, of England, in the Alliance News, after giving medical testimony against the use of alcohol, says:

"The medical testimony is confirmed by the experience of life assurance societies. Only carefully selected moderate drinkers and abstainers can assure their lives. Nearly a dozen offices now recognize the increased vitality of abstainers. One office (the Scottish Temperance) admits abstainers at ten per cent. lower premiums than non-abstainers. In the United Kingdom Temperance and General Provident Institution, where the two classes are kept separate, during the past twenty-eight years 8,440 non-abstainers were 'expected' to die, and 8,266 actually died, being only two per cent. short of the 'expected.' In the abstainers' section during the same period 5,814 were 'expected' to die, but only 4,131 of the stubborn teetotalers died, leaving thirty per cent. alive. At the last division of profits (covering five years) the non-abstainers received a bonus of £8 15s. per £100 assured, as against £11 10s. paid to the abstainers. Robert Burns tells us, 'Facts are stubborn chiels that winna ding,' and I feel bound to place the inexorable logic of hard facts before mere theories about so-called 'harmless drinking.'"

Eating Apples.

The medicinal properties of the apple are regularly discussed with every fresh harvest of this delicious fruit. Its advocate this Winter is a little bolder than any of his predecessors, for he advises its eating just before going to bed. An exchange prints an interview with this radical man—a physician he is, too—and quotes him as saying that "no harm can come to even the most delicate system by the eating of ripe and juicy apples just before retiring for the night."

The doctor goes on with his estimate of the value of the apple, therapeutically, in the following strong way: "It is," he says, "an excellent brain food, because it contains more phosphoric acid in easily digestible shape than any other vegetable known. It excites the action of the liver, promotes sound and healthy sleep, and thoroughly disinfects the mouth. This is not all. The apple agglutinates the surplus acids of the stomach, helps the kidney secretions, and prevents calculus growths, while it obviates indigestion and is one of the best preventives known of diseases of the throat."

If all this be true, and its persistent reiteration certainly argues a large faith, the knowledge can not be too widely disseminated.

The Cuisine.

Conducted by L. A. B.

Chocolate Cake.—Four eggs, two cups brown sugar, two cups flour, one-half cup sweet milk, one-half cup butter, one cup grated chocolate (Baker's), one teaspoon baking powder (heaping), one teaspoonful baking soda, one tablespoon cornstarch. Flavor with vanilla. Put together with boiled icing. When mixing, sift flour, cornstarch, soda, and baking powder together.

Cheese Straws.—Grate three tablespoonfuls of any kind of cheese. Add three tablespoonfuls of flour, a little red pepper and salt. Add to dry ingredients one tablespoonful of melted butter, one of water and the yolk of an egg. Roll thin as for cookies, cut in strips five inches long one-half inch wide. Bake fifteen minutes. Serve on plate and fringed doily. Build the straws up like a log-cabin. They are delicious with salad.—Selected.

Gingerbread.—Work a cupful of butter until creamy, then mix with it a cupful of brown sugar. Separate the whites and yolks of four eggs, and beat both until light, frothing the whites. Stir the eggs with the butter and sugar, and add a cupful of sour cream mixed with a cupful of molasses; before putting the molasses and cream together add to the cream two teaspoonfuls of soda dissolved in a little warm water. Measure four cupfuls of flour, and mix with it a teaspoonful of salt and a tablespoonful of yellow ginger. Add this to the batter. Do all the mixing as quickly and lightly as possible. Bake thirty minutes with a moderate heat.

I was but the shadow of a person, so thin and haggard, without one moment's ease; had suffered for years with my stomach and liver, and this spring had a very severe attack of La Grippe, I their commenced using the "Discovery" and my recovery was wonderful. I am forty-five years old, and feel as well and strung as I did when sixteen years old; my sleep is as sound as an infant's. I remain,

OBITUARIES.

WHATLEY.—Phineas Whatley was born in Franklin parish, La., March 7, 1815, and came with his father to Catahoula parish, La., when he was thirteen years old, and settled on Trout Creek, where he grew up to manhood, was married to Elizabeth Tovery in 1838; joined the M. E. Church, October, 1839, and died in Catahoula, La., Feb. 1, 1895.

An acquaintance of more than fifty years of the time associated with him in the ministry and in the church I can safely say he was always true to the church. He was faithful in the stewardship, and sometimes acted as trustee of church property, in every relation he sustained to the church was ever found faithful to the trust reposed in him, and was continued in official relations until enfeebled by age, he was unable to attend to the business of the church and was relieved from duty.

Brother Whatley, by industry and economy, accumulated considerable of this world's goods, and was ready with the same to assist the needy, especially God's ministers, they received a hearty welcome under his hospitable roof. On protracted and quarterly meetings in his vicinity his custom was to give an invitation to all present to go to his house for entertainment. For several years before his death he was unable to go a distance to attend these meetings, and would, through his love for the Quarterly Conference to request the place of its next sitting near his residence in order that he might once more enjoy the communion service again with his brethren.

The writer has had frequent interviews with Brother Whatley in regard to his religious condition, and can testify that, notwithstanding his feeble condition, he was always cheerful in submission to the divine will, and expressed entire confidence in the promises of the gospel, waiting for the summons, which came tenderly on Jan. 21. He died surrounded by many of his family, and was buried in the family graveyard.

We would say to the sorrowing family that he is only gone before, and is now in the home of the good, safe from sin and decline. Y.

SHUTT.—Miss Lear L. Shutt, daughter of Lucinda Shutt, was born in Sabine parish, La., April 28, 1870, and died at Marthaville, La., Jan. 19, 1895. Reared by parents who spared no pains to impress on her mind the great importance of earnest piety and full consecration to God and his church, at an early age she gave her heart to God and was received into the church at Bayou Scie. From that time until her death she lived a consistent member of the church.

Bro. Shutt had just moved his family to Marthaville, in order to educate his children, when she was attacked with pneumonia, and, in spite of all that could be done by her physician and loved ones, after seven days' illness she passed away. She was unconscious most of the time while sick, but she lived right, and was ready when the summons came. She leaves a father, mother, four sisters, two brothers, and a large number of relatives and friends to mourn her loss; but we mourn not as those who have no hope.

The writer was her pastor in 1887 and 1888, and was in charge of the circuit again at the time of her death, but did not see her during her last illness.

On the morning of the twenty-first we preached her funeral to a large congregation, and laid her body in the Bayou Scie Cemetery, there to await the resurrection morning.

To the bereaved we would say: Weep not; she has only crossed over the river to join loved ones on the other shore. Let us meet her in the kingdom above.

S. S. Holladay.

BROCK.—Sister Sarah C. Brock, whose maiden name was Green, was born in Holmes county, Miss., Feb. 17, 1858. She was happily converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1869, and was a devoted, faithful member as long as she lived. On Jan. 28, 1878, she was married to Mr. E. R. Brock, of Carroll county, Miss., with whom she lived in mutual love and esteem until the sad day she died, which occurred Jan. 21, 1895. She was a joy and comfort to her husband, and during their wedded life, in a gentle, quiet way, she made his home a happy place. Nine children blessed their union. Seven survive the departed mother; two had gone before her.

Sister Brock was a good mother. She taught her children to love God and his church, to esteem and reverence ministers of the gospel. Her pastor was ever welcomed to the hospitality and rest of her peaceful home. Her deep piety was manifest in her Christian department as well as in her meek and humble conversation. Her influence was silent, but powerful. She eminently revealed the effects of grace divine on her own heart, and its influence could be seen on her family.

Her death was triumphant. She bid adieu to her devoted husband, and one by one she blessed her children, and sweetly passed from this to a better world.

May the good God have the sorrowing husband and loved ones always in his holy keeping!

R. M. Davis.

SKINNER.—Mrs Martha Ann Skinner (nee Belk) was born in South Carolina, July 13, 1819, and died Jan. 12 1895.

She was the daughter of Rev. Mr. Belk, a pioneer Methodist preacher. She professed religion and joined the Methodist Church in her thirteenth year. She was happily married April 23, 1854, to Francis Skinner, to whom she was as true as Rebekah to Isaac.

Bro. Skinner has lost a treasure in womanly devotion, in Christian excellence and wifely helpfulness that can only be told by him who has lived with her nearly sixty-one years, witnessing her patience, charity, and faith.

We have known no one more careful in her talk, farther from foolish jesting, and who practiced, more carefully speaking, the truth from the heart, than Sister Skinner. She was true to the right; a thoughtful neighbor, always remembering the poor and the sick. As a mother, her love was undying. Her words to her children were like "apples of gold in pictures of silver."

No preacher and his wife who have been on the Hebron circuit in the last thirty years but will have pleasant remembrances of Sister Skinner's Christian hospitalities at her home.

Though she was afflicted many years, no words of complaint escaped her lips. She said the will of the Lord was hers. No wonder she died without a struggle, and with a smile beaming from her face. May we all overtake her in the "sweet by-and-by!"

J. W. Bann.

DUNCAN.—Infant Sarah J. Duncan was born Oct 10, 1893, and died Feb. 21, 1895, aged one year four months and eleven days.

Little Sarah suffered more than tongue can tell. The good Lord saw fit, in his wise providence, to remove her from this earth to heaven, to live with himself. May the Spirit of God prove a true comforter to the bereaved parents!

"Touching Incidents and Remarkable Answers to Prayer."

Very few people can read this book without weeping. Christians of all denominations recommend it in the highest terms, and the unsaved read it with delight. Many pastors are securing this book and circulating it among their people, and the people are anxious to buy. Clergymen find the sale of it a great help to their support.

B. Fay Mills: "A wonderful book, an excellent book."

Central Congregationalist: "Many of the incidents are exceedingly pathetic, and can scarcely fail to stir any tender heart to tears. CHAPTER XLIII.

Jacob unwillingly sendeth Benjamin. 16 Joseph entertaineth his brethren. 29 Himself at seeing Benjamin.

Before CHRIST 1707

AND the famine was sore in the land.
2 And it came to pass, when they had eaten up the corn which they had brought out of Egypt, their father said unto them, Go again, buy us a little food.
3 And Judah spake unto him, saying,

Gen. 41. 54. 57.

16 And when Joseph saw Benjamin with them, he said to the ruler of his house, Bring these men home, and slay, and make ready; for these men shall dine with me at noon.
17 And the man did as Joseph bade; and the man brought the men into Joseph's house.
18 And the men were afraid, because they were brought into Joseph's house:

It is impossible to give in this limited space more than a brief description of this beautiful American Edition of the Bible, and we now say that this is the first time it has been possible to OFFER IT AS A PREMIUM.

The publisher's retail price of this elegant book is $4.50; and it is cheap at that. Many Bibles no better than this are sold at a price ranging from one to two dollars higher. We will send it postpaid to any address on receipt of price. We will do a great deal better than this for our subscribers. We will send it postpaid to any new subscriber (we mean one who subscribes after this date) for $2. Old subscribers can have it at the same rate, provided they will pay up to June, '96, and provided they have not had the benefit of any previous offer. Those who have had the benefit of other offers can avail themselves of this also by paying up to December, '96. Better still, any subscriber who will pay his own subscription to June, '96, can secure it free by sending us four new subscriptions at the regular rate, $2. Moreover, we will give to each new subscriber thus secured a copy of any one of the fifteen poets, or a copy of any book in the Hand-Volume series. If you can not secure four new subscribers, get one or two, and we will allow fifty cents on each.

Better still: For the benefit of those who desire a genuine Oxford Bible at a still lower rate we have made arrangements with one of the leading Bible publishers in America whereby we can offer a beautiful Oxford Bible, four by five and a half inches, pearl type, French Seal, divinity circuit, round corners, as a premium for only two new subscribers. In order to get the benefit of this offer one must be himself a subscriber and must have paid his subscription to June, '96. We will send this Book, postpaid, to any address on receipt of $1.62.

We make no promise as to how long this offer will last. Therefore, don't delay.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The new Carnegie Music Hall, now approaching completion in Pittsburg, is to cost $2 000,000.

Services were held in the various Methodist Episcopal Churches in New York City, on March 10, under the auspices of the deaconesses.

The steamboat "Longfellow," while leaving the wharf at Cincinnati, on March 8, struck a pier of a railroad bridge with such force as to break in two. Twelve lives were lost in the wreck.

The New Jersey State Board of Health has drafted a bill for the establishment of a State laboratory for the production of anti-toxine. The bill provides for an annual appropriation of $10,000.

Every effort is in progress for the suppression of the small-pox infection in Hot Springs Ark. Compulsory vaccination is being enforced. The mayor has issued a proclamation requiring all persons to be vaccinated.

Major-Gen. Nelson A. Miles, U. S. A., commanding the department of the east, was in the city on March 10. He inspected the Jackson Barracks in this city. He proposes to improve Forts Jackson and St. Philip, which command the entrance to the Mississippi river.

The Indiana Legislature broke up in a wild riot on March 11, in which nearly every member participated. The Republican members prevented a veto message from the governor being read by using revolvers, knives and fists. One member of the Assembly was injured.

The chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations has announced that a careful compilation of the appropriations of the last Congress show a total of $990 338,691 as compared with $1,027 000,000 appropriated by the Forty-second Congress, and $1,005,000,000 by the Fifty-first.

An armed mob of striking longshoremen and screwmen, on March 9, overpowered the watchman at the West India wharf, in this city, and, breaking open the building in which the tools of the colored union workers were stored, threw a lot of the tools into the river. On the arrival of the police the mob scattered. Some of the rioters were arrested.

During the past week there has been quite a substantial improvement in the price of cotton compared with the extreme low prices previously ruling. The cause of the improvement has been a growing belief that cotton is cheap at the prevalent prices, and that the consumption has been stimulated to a much greater extent than commonly believed by the cheap cost.

The levee troubles in this city still continue. The white strikers, on March 11, set upon a number of negroes who were passing down the wharves and two of them were shot down. The rioting continued on March 12, when armed mobs of strikers patrolled the wharves and shot defenceless negroes. Four negroes were killed, and many wounded. The purser of the British steamship "Engineer" was fatally wounded. The militia has been ordered out.

The fourteenth International Christian Endeavor Convention will be held in Boston in July. An important change in the programme has been effected in that, for the first time in the history of Christian Endeavor Conventions, there will be no Sunday services. This will necessitate a change in dates from July 10 14 to July 10 15. This feature of the convention will emphasize the stand the society has taken in regard to Sunday observance, and will avoid the necessity for Sunday travel to delegates.

Last week the United States government received an invitation from the German government to send men-of-war to represent the United States at the grand opening of the North Sea Canal, which is to take place on June 20 of the present year. Secretary Herbert, on behalf of the United States, has accepted the invitation of the German government to have this country represented with some men-of-war on the occasion; and he has designated the "San Francisco" and the "Marblehead" to represent the United States.

The bounty payment upon the crop of 1894 will be prorated in view of the insufficient appropriation. What the percentage will be is conjectural, as no one as yet can say with any degree of accuracy what is the total crop of Louisiana for 1894. It is thought the basis will be about 65 100 of a cent instead of eighth-tenths, as the law directs. According to the proposed plan no bounty payments will be made until all the claims have been filed and passed upon, when a general average will be struck and settlement made with the sugar producers upon that basis.

FOREIGN.

It is said that Speaker Peel, of the English House of Commons, will resign.

The value of the liquor consumed in the United Kingdom last year was $493,689,140, more than $17 per head to the population.

During the progress of a religious service at the Protestant Church at Leompani, Bulgaria, the building was invaded by a mob of members of the orthodox Greek Church, who assaulted the worshipers, tore up the prayer books and completely wrecked the interior of the church. Several Germans and Americans were among the worshipers, who were seriously injured during the disturbance. The Americans are under British protection.

The United States government has demanded satisfaction of Colombia for the stopping of telegrams to its representatives on the Isthmus.

The Cuban insurgents attacked and captured Vinales, thirty miles from Havana, last week. The funds in the city treasury were confiscated by them.

"BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES" are an effectual remedy for all Bronchial Affections.

The present epidemic of influenza has been more severely felt in London than in any other part of England; and the death rate has risen during the past week from 21 per 1 000 the normal rate, to 38 5 per 1,000, a remarkably high record.

"Earthly Footsteps of the Man of Galilee."

A new work of Bishop Vincent, and Dr. J. W. Lee (of St. Louis). A great publishing company is just bringing to light the fruit of much toil and outlay of money. They sent an artist photographer, under the guidance of Dr. Lee, to the Holy Land, there to secure the most exact and perfect pictures of the salient scenes of the earthly life of Christ and the Apostles. We have examined a portion of the work and unhesitatingly pronounce it by far the best thing of its kind ever seen by us. The method of photographic reproduction employed is faultless.

The forthcoming book will contain some four or five hundred of these splendid pictures, 8x10 inches in size. The work will be issued in twenty-four parts, pages 11½x13½ inches, with chronological charts and colored maps. Each part will contain sixteen pictures, besides the enchanting pen pictures of these renowned writers. The series will run through twenty-four weeks, one a week, at a regular price of 25 cents each. But the ADVOCATE has made a special arrangement by which it will furnish all its subscribers, new and old, for 10 cents a number. Less than half, but very little more than a third of what you will have to pay if your name is not on our subscription roll. The entire series in this way will cost only $2.40; otherwise it will cost $6. This rule of the publishers of this book is the strictest that only to our subscribers can we make this special offer. For $2 40 you may get what another must pay $6 for if you are a subscriber to the ADVOCATE. Send $2.40, and each of the series will be mailed you as fast as issued. Or ten cents (stamps taken) for one issue—any way you prefer.

Don't Put It Off.

The necessity of a Spring medicine is universally admitted. This is the best time of year in which to purify the blood, to restore the lost appetite, and to build up the entire system. The great popularity attained by Hood's Sarsaparilla, owing to its real merit and its remarkable success, has established it as the very best medicine to take in the Spring. It cures scrofula, salt rheum, and all humors, biliousness, dyspepsia, headache, kindey and liver complaints.

Most wondrous Book! bright candle of the Lord!
This Book—this holy Book—on every line
Marked with the seal of High Divinity,
On every leaf bedewed with drops of love
Divine; and with the eternal heraldry
And signature of God Almighty stamped
From first to last; this ray of sacred light,
This lamp from off the everlasting throne
Mercy took down, and in the night of time
Stood, casting on the dark her gracious bow
And evermore beseeching men, with tears
And earnest sighs, to read, believe and live!

Delhi, the Ancient Capital of the Moguls.

BY BISHOP CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

A visit to India would be quite incomplete without at least a day or two in Delhi, the once-splendid capital of the great Mogul Dynasty, and yet one of the leading cities of the Empire. Dating back to the year 57 B. C., when the foundations of the first Dilli, or Dhili, were laid by Rajah Dilu, eight or ten miles from the present city walls, it has witnessed the struggles of more contending armies, the rise and fall of more pretentious dynasties, the success and defeat of more would-be emperors, and the shedding of more human blood, than possibly any other capital in all Asia. In looking over the history in order to refresh my memory, with this visit in view, I have been amazed at the continued story of storm and carnage; of intrigue, revolt, conquest, and massacre. Within a few miles of the present city, which was originally called Shahanabad, built by the Emperor Shah Jehan in 1648, are the ruins of seven or eight other great capitals, with their magnificent citadels and strong fortresses and brilliant palaces. As I passed out over that weary waste of dismantled and buried grandeur, it seemed like a veritable dwelling among the tombs. Here the violent and vandal Genghis Khan, with his conquering invaders, came to plunder and destroy, and here came the perfidious Tamerlane to set up his throne for a season, and wield a sceptre of iron. And on through the centuries this record of blood continued, closing with the sad chapter of the Sepoy rebellion at the Cashmere Gate, Sept. 15, 1857. During the invasion of Tamerlane, it is said, over one hundred thousand inhabitants of Delhi were cruelly murdered, and in other wars her streets were made to flow with human blood.

We arrived during the night from Agra, and after some hours of needed rest started out to see the historic capital of Shah Jehan, as well as "the desolations of former generations."

We first visited the ancient fort, within which is the famous palace. This was built by the Emperor Shah Jehan in 1638, and at an expense of fifty lacs of rupees, and was twenty years in progress of construction. (A lac is one hundred thousand.) The walls, one and a half miles in circumference, are of red sandstone, with fifty turreted pavilions of the same material on the corners and at other intervals. Over the magnificent Lahore Gate, the one we entered—a grand Gothic arch—there is a tower and pavilion in which were the apartments of the officer of the Palace Guards. They are now occupied by a British officer connected with the battery, whose great guns frown from the parapets of the Mogul fortress. Many of the splendid buildings which once adorned the grounds inside, and used by the members of Shah Jehan's court—probably the most brilliant in the world—have been removed; but the palace remains, with the halls of audience, and the marvelously beautiful little pearl morque, where the royal family were supposed to offer their daily petitions to Allah and his prophet.

We first stopped at the Hall of Public Audience, a large building open on three sides and supported by immense pillars of red sandstone. It is said these were formerly adorned with gilding and stucco work. Against the wall is a marble throne, eight or ten feet high, covered by a marble canopy, and adorned with mosaics in precious stones of the flowers, fruits, birds, and beasts of India. Just in front of the throne was a large white marble slab somewhat raised above the floor.

The Hall of Private Audience, for the reception of kings and nobles, is a pavilion of white marble, open on all sides, and supported by massive columns of marble, which, with the graceful arches, are elaborately ornamented with inlaid flowers and birds of precious stones. The ceiling was once thickly covered with filigree work in silver; but when the Mahrattas captured Delhi, in 1759, it was melted down and coined into money, amounting to £170,000. On the interior cornice, at each end of the hall, are gilt letters, said to be in the Persian language, which, being translated, are: "If there is a paradise upon earth, it is this, it is this." The arch over an entrance gate of marble screen work is ornamented with a pair of golden scales. Whether they were intended to represent the principles of justice which should be the habitation of a Mohammeden throne, or the golden generosity with which he would dispense gifts to his loyal subjects and allies, the symbol was appropriate and the adornment most beautiful. Had not my dictionary of adjectives been exhausted on Agra, I should be tempted to linger in this gorgeous palace. In this hall was the celebrated Peacock Throne of Shah Jehan, so called from the fact that it had the figures of two peacocks standing behind it, with expanded tails, and so inlaid with sapphires, rubies, emeralds, pearls, and other stones, as to seem like real life. The throne itself was of solid gold inlaid with diamonds, emeralds and rubies. The canopy was of gold, supported by twelve pillars, adorned with jewels and fringed with pearls. Between the two peacocks stood the figure of a parrot of ordinary size, said to have been carved out of a single emerald. Upon this gorgeous work of art the emperor expended over £6,000 000 This throne, with almost incalculable treasures, were carried off by the Persian invader, Nadir Shah, in 1739 A model of it, I am told, is preserved at Lucknow, which would have been visited had I known it in time.

Adjoining this hall are the royal baths, all in white marble, and ornamented with inlaid stones on a scale of splendor equal to that displayed throughout the palace. But the hand of the vandal has been at work; many of those rare jewels have been picked out, and are, no doubt, set in the rings and pins of the wealthy in many climes.

After breakfast we drove out the Delhi gate and visited the tombs and ruined palaces of the six or eight great cities that lie buried on the hills for many miles. The dusty road was crowded with curious little canopied vehicles, filled with natives and drawn by bullocks, while donkeys and women trudged along beneath their heavy burdens. But however filthy and burdensome her load, every woman was bedecked with rings and bangles.

About four miles from the city is Emperor Humayon's tomb, the father of Akbar the Great, and built by his widow, Haji Begum. This is claimed by competent authority to be "the earliest specimen of the architecture of the Mogul Dynasty," and undoubtedly furnished the model for the matchless Taj. The building, which rests on two broad terraces, is of red sandstone inlaid with white marble, while the magnificent dome is entirely of white marble, and is a marvel of majestic grace. The upper terrace was once entirely surrounded with marble screen work, but that has nearly all disappeared. In the center is the sarcophagus of the emperor in beautifully cut marble, while other royal Moguls sleep in the adjacent rooms. The place was shown us where the last Mogul emperor was captured in 1857, and near by where his sons were arrested and shot.

Near Humayon's tomb is a wilderness of mosques and mausoleums. Some of the latter contain distinguished dead, and are kept in a fair state of preservation. There is the Sixty-four Pillared Hall, built of marble throughout, the pillars supporting twenty-five domes. The out marble screen which once inclosed it has been almost entirely destroyed. Here rest in marble sarcophagi some of the illustrious members of the royal families. But a few paces away is the beautiful tomb of Jehanara Begum, the daughter of Emperor Shah Jehan. She is said to have been an estimable princess, and, on account of Emperor Aurangzeb's treatment of their brothers, soon refused to share the splendors of his court.

We drove down Chandni Chouk, the long and wide street of the city, with a row of shade trees in the center, and celebrated for its brilliant shops and picturesque scenes. But apart from the crowds of curiously and gandily dressed people who thronged the thoroughfare, many of them attracted thither hoping to see the Viceroy, there was nothing to commend special attention. I had read accounts of the moving masses of richly-dressed natives "riding on caparisoned horses, lounging on elephants, or borne along in party-colored palankeens," and expected to be dazzled with the oriental splendor. But all that has passed away, never to return. I did not see an elephant, and only a few poorly-fed camels moving meekly under their immense burdens. Thus the Occident encroaches upon the Orient. The dazzling glories of the India of history will soon fade away. Every day marks a change, which is little else than a downfall. I would be glad to think that the incoming is better than the receding order of things. But we must not mistake a so-called Christian civilization for Christianity. And in this connection I must express my profound sorrow over the reported indifference, if not hostility, of the English official classes to Christianity. They are an obstruction to missionary work, and a stone of stumbling to the heathen, who interpret Christianity through them. I have heard of one to whom a servant, under conviction of the Spirit, applied for counsel, actually advising him not to give up his religion and become a Christian. Told him the sacrifice was too great; he would lose caste with his own people, and have no corresponding or compensating place with the Europeans. Of course, there are honorable and honored exceptions, but the great body of them are nothing more than heathen representatives of a Christian government.

As Delhi was one of the storm centers of the Sepoy mutiny, and with its recapture the rebellion ceased, we visited the field of battle which so signally displayed the superiority of courage and intelligence over mere force of numbers. A force of less than 10 000 effective men besieged and captured a strongly fortified city defended by 60,000 armed soldiers. We alighted from our gharry at the Cashmere Gate and read the inscription on marble reciting the story of how one leaf of that gate was blown open at sunrise on the morning of Sept. 16, 1857, immediately followed by storming battalions, who soon gained complete possession of the citadel. On the high ridge beyond stands the lofty "Mutiny Monument, 110 feet high"—an open Gothic structure of red sandstone of chaste and elegant design. Around its pedestal, inscribed on inlaid white marble, are the roll of officers who commanded the British forces, the number of regiments and men in the ranks, the list of casualties, and the names and dates of the terrific battles in which brave men went down to heroic death. We climbed to the top by a spiral stairway, and had a magnificent view of the country for many leagues. From that height we looked down upon the ruins of eight cities and the buried civilizations of more than twenty centuries. In the distance, eleven miles away, was Kootub Minar, the highest pillar in the world, standing like a sentinel over the sacred tombs of ages, and wearing a gilded helmet furnished by the slanting rays of the evening sun.

The last place visited was Jumna Musjid, the most famous mosque in the East, and the largest in the world. It is located on a high rocky elevation within the city, half way between the Cashmere and Delhi Gates, near the celebrated Chandni Chouk on one side, and not far from the fort and palace on the other. It is the most conspicuous and massive building in the city, and its tall minarets of red stone and white marble are first to greet the coming of every visitor to the ancient Mogul capital. There are three great gateways of red sandstone, and each is approached by a long flight of stone steps. These lead into an immense quadrangle of 450 feet, in the center of which is a large marble reservoir, where the worshiper must stop and wash his hands, mouth, face and feet each three times before he enters the house of prayer. On the west side is the mosque, 201 feet long and 120 broad, surmounted by three domes of white marble, each crowned with a gilt spire. This is faced and paved with marble, each slab on the floor, bordered with black, forming a kneeling-place for a worshiper. There is a small recess in the wall, which fronts toward Mecca, and by it is the marble stair pulpit. The two minarets are 130 feet high, made of stone and marble placed in vertical layers. The other sides of the quadrangle are inclosed by long stone colonnades, and on each corner is an octagonal pavilion of white marble. This magnificent pile was built by Shah Jehan at a cost of over £100 000, and is said to have employed 5 000 workmen for six busy years. I am told that not less than 4,000 persons crowd this spacious and sacred hill at one time on Fridays, when the muezzin chants the call to prayer.

The building, confiscated after the Sepoy mutiny, was restored to the Mohammedans, and repaired by the government on condition that all Europeans should be allowed free access. At other Mohammedan places of worship we have tried to visit—in Madras and elsewhere—privilege was only given to stand without and afar off, lest Gentile feet should profane the sanctuary which looks toward Mecca, and echoes the prayers to Allah. As we turned away from the massive building, so wonderful in architecture and faultless in finish, the falling twilight shadows seemed to sympathize with my sorrow that it did not represent a purer faith and was not the shrine of a holier and more intelligent worship. The day surely will come when every Mohammedan morque and Hindoo temple will become a place of Christian worship. The conquering Christ not only claims, but intends to, have the heathen for an inheritance. However firmly the foe may be intrenched, and however devoted the heathen millions may now be to their false gods and foolish superstitions, the day of deliverance will come, and Christ will be crowned Lord of all. That hope has been kindled afresh as I have strolled, often with a sorrowing heart, the great mission fields of the East.

Missions in Louisiana.

MR EDITOR: After consultation with the president of our Conference Board of Missions, I have resolved to present to the brethren for their consideration some facts concerning the needs of our church in Louisiana. It is not my purpose, nor will it be the purpose of the Board, to relax even the feeblest effort for our foreign work. As I believe, in the press for this department of our duty, we have neglected the domestic field. There has nowhere been any concentrated effort—no exhortation to duty nor urging to action—in furtherance of our local missionary operations. Heretofore little over 50 per cent. of the assessment for domestic missions has been raised in the Conference, while about 75 per cent. of the assessment for foreign missions has been raised.

While in the Northwest an average of $290 per capita for every effective preacher is contributed by the General Board, and in some instances as much as $500 or $600 to one man, here at home we are trying to evangelize a priest-ridden people on support measured from $25 to $150 per annum.

In the northern portions there is not so much need for missionaries in Louisiana as in the southern and southwestern portions of the State. From the Jetties west, along the coast of Louisiana, a distance of, perhaps, more than 200 miles (to Mermentau river), there is not a single Methodist preacher off the line of the S. P. R. R. whose field touches the coast settlements. (Bro. Porter's work may touch the coast, but I think not.)

In all that portion of Louisiana lying west of the Mississippi river and east of the Atchafalaya river I know of only three preachers outside of the suburbs of New Orleans—at Lower Coast, Plaquemines, and Grosse Tete. This is a densely populated section of country, and the "garden spot" of our State. True, it is a Catholic country, but so much the more necessity for its occupancy by the Methodist Church. It may be said, "There is nothing there for us." The same may be said as to Mexico or Brazil, but would be untrue in either case.

Last year Bro. Berwick—our French-speaking preacher—received (I think) over fifty persons into our church, and most of them were Catholics.

If the brethren will see after this collection for domestic missions, and bring up the assessments "in full," they will glorify God and bless humanity in so doing.

TO THE PRESIDING ELDERS.

Please write to the ADVOCATE your need for more support for men in order to the enlargement of your district by taking in unoccupied territory.

How much missionary money could you judiciously apply next year?

Very respectfully,

J. A. PARKER,
Sec. Board of Missions, La. Conf.

Louisiana Conference Parsonage and Home Mission Society.

The report of Mrs. John H. Campman, treasurer, shows that during 1894 there was raised by the ladies of this society the sum of $469 19, that being an excess over the previous year of $152.26, or more than 48 per cent. This fact is full of encouragement, and we should not be surprised if these devoted, zealous Christian women were to register in the next Minutes an increase of more than 100 per cent for 1895 Under the leadership of Mrs. D. J. Lyons, they are thoroughly alive to the necessity of helping to build parsonages and furthering the home mission work. There are 113 pastoral charges in the Louisiana Conference and only 81 parsonages. There are, then, 32 charges without a home for the pastor. There are four of our seven districts that are without a home for the presiding elder. The annual rent, taken out of the meagre and amazingly conservative allowances made for the support of most of our preachers, renders incumbent upon their part the most heroic economy, and deprives them of needful books and other helps in their work, and their families of all save the barest necessities of existence. We trust that it will not be many years before every district, circuit, mission and station within our bounds will be supplied with a handsome, roomy and comfortable parsonage. This could, all be easily accomplished in a year or two, if only the laity where they have no parsonage were to have "a mind to build," and go at it, no matter how hard, financially, the times might be. Anyhow, looking at the good women and seeing them so deeply in earnest, we have an idea that, if these more than thirty sorely needed parsonages are not had within the near future, it will not be the fault of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society.

Drover—Driver.

It will be remembered that at the last session of the Louisiana Conference, held in this city in December, an applicant for an admission was a preacher who called himself S. M. Drover, who had been a resident of Amite City, La., for a few months, and had been preaching there for the Presbyterians, and also at Osyka, Miss. (where the writer first heard him), at Magnolia and McComb City; also at Greensburgh, La., and vicinity, attracting much attention, and making many friends by his fluent preaching and forcible illustrations.

After his admission to the Conference an investigation made by Rev. S. S. Keener, as I was informed, led to the motion being reconsidered, and the final withdrawal of Drover's name by the presiding elder who recommended him; the withdrawal made at Drover's request. The writer and a delegate to the Conference from St. Helena parish felt somewhat annoyed at the action of Rev. S. S. Keener, and thought him too exacting and particular, and that he had prevented the admission of a good preacher into the Conference; but, after a thorough investigation made by the writers, they have to commend the vigilance of Rev. S. S. Keener in preventing the admission of said S. M. Drover into the Conference.

"The Rev. S. M. Driver, who was expelled from the California Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church at its last session, Sept. 13-18, 1894, for immoral conduct, was a man of medium height, about 5 feet 6 or 7 inches. He was fleshy, and this made him appear shorter than he was. He was of smooth face, no whiskers or moustache, full cheeks, inclined to droop, had a small, sharp hazel eye, sharp nose, the hair receded somewhat at the front, giving the appearance of large forehead. His voice was a little husky. He was quick of speech and somewhat fluent. He had a short, quick step, and, because of his ill shy shoulders and a downward look, the appearance would be at times as if he were round-shouldered. His manner was somewhat abrupt, and he would follow some free mode of speech with a little laugh that would suddenly end in a very sober expression. He had a wife and four children, whom he left in the parsonage, when he is reported to have run away with Mrs. MacMillan and her two little daughters. I have heard since that Mrs. MacMillan has deserted him, and that his proper wife is now with him. His family consisted of a daughter about 16 years of age, a boy about 15, another girl about 13 or 14 years, and a babe that will be 2 years old the fourteenth of next August."

This excellent description of Rev. S. M. Drover was followed a day or two later by a photo, which, though dim, was sufficiently plain to show that S. M. Driver and S. M. Drover were the same person; and as the lady who passed for his wife had but two little girls, she is, no doubt, the Mrs. MacMillan referred to by Rev. Needham.

[We deem it important to publish a description of this man for protection of our church in other localities. We have reason to believe that this villain is now operating in the role of a preacher within the bounds of Southern Methodism under another name. Let our brethren of the press take notice and govern themselves accordingly.—EDITOR]

In the Living Present.

Some fear that the church is drifting away from the masses. Is an exclusive and in many cases aristocratic corporation, not only not attractive, but even repulsive to the struggling millions. In business that man meets with success who understands to adapt himself to the ever changing circumstances. Should not the church learn wisdom from the world? No, our religion changes not; but the method of introducing it to the people could be remodeled.

Our laws, some complain, are made for lawyers, ambiguous, abstruse, complicated. The old adage about laws being a growth, that they should never be arbitrarily made, is antiquated. At present laws multiply to an alarming extent. Laws for all social ills. But the ills increase. We need safeguards against law making.

The faculty of Harvard University by a large majority decided that intercollegiate foot-ball ought to be discontinued. We have grieved because of the prominence given to athletic sports at our institutions of learning. The average student cared little about lore. His ambition was to be considered a first-class boxer, rower or base ball pitcher.

Song books for Sunday-schools and prayer meeting multiply. In many cases the poetry of the hymns is doggerel and the music distracting jingle. We clip from a popular publication, giving the punctuation as in the book:

"Jesus bids us shine with a clear, pure light,
Like a little candle in the night;
In the world of darkness, so we must shine—
You in your corner, I in mine."

It strikes us the 'walking delegate" is the principal mischief-maker. Hostile agitation, fomentation are his business. He a horny-handed toiler? Nay, he wears kid gloves. His salary is made up from the monthly contributions of the duped workmen.

Many large business enterprises adopt the co-operative system. That is, the employees become share-holders. There is a monthly retention of part of their salary until a few hundred or thousand dollars have accumulated. Thereafter they do not only receive their salary, but also dividends. A solution of the labor problem.

Holman, of Indiana, for thirty years a member of Congress, but not re-elected, advises young men not to meddle with politics. Merchandising and farming would prove far more remunerative. Maybe so. But politics should not be abandoned to rogues. Such abandonment has already taken place in too many communities.

WEARY IN WELL DOING

BY CHRISTINA ROSSETTI.

I would have gone; God bade me stay,
I would have worked; God bade me rest;
He broke my will from day to day,
He read my yearnings unexpressed,
And said them nay.
Now I would stay, God bids me go.
Now I would rest, God bids me work.
He breaks my heart, tossed to and fro;
My soul is wrung with doubts that lurk,
And vex it so.
I go, Lord, where thou sendest me;
Day after day I plod and moil,
Sot, Christ my God, when will it be
That I may let alone my toil
And rest with thee?

"Christian Life and Experience of Rev. W. W. Hopper."

My attention has been called to an article in the Kentucky Methodist with the above caption, written by Bro. Hopper. I have known and loved Bro. Hopper for quite a while, and have known of the troubles he has had in the two Conferences to which he has belonged. It had never occurred to me that he has suffered persecution. The following quotations from his article will, doubtless, occur to those who have been closest to him as overdrawn. Speaking of the beginning of his life of sanctification, he says: "Fierce persecution began, and has continued till this day." "Wounded and crushed by Conferences and Bishops." "Many unkind speeches have been made against me upon the Conference floor." "Some things said publicly against me would shock the reader if put in cold type." "The clouds hung heavy over me, and I knew of no preacher anywhere to whom I could go for counsel and communion."

The above is only a small part of what he feels he has suffered. It is nice, however, to hear that he has treated his persecutors so well, for he says: "To all these aspersions of my character and harsh criticism I have never made any reply." "I draw the mantle of charity over these personalities."

Bro. Hopper thanks God for persecution, and understands now why he has had to suffer so. "It was my heavenly Father's plan to raise up a man to send out to the church to preach this great doctrine of sanctification."

I feel it to be my duty to correct the statement as to why he left the East Texas Conference. He says: "They (the brethren) gave me to understand that they did not want a man who preached sanctification as a second definite work of grace, and that I could get no appointment from them."

Bro. Hopper knows that when he came to the East Texas Conference there were already in it second-blessing preachers. Bro. Hopper knows that at the session of Conference from which he transferred there were received by transfer two preachers who "preached sanctification as a second definite work of grace." Surely, then, he did not state the true cause for his going.

Of his three years' work in this Conference, Bro. Hopper makes mention only of his success in Nacogdoches. It is, perhaps, true that he accomplished more in that town than in all other places where he labored in this State. There he laid a good foundation; there his work abides; but, strange to say, yet true, this, his best work in Texas, was done at a time when he was not in the enjoyment of the second blessing.

This statement of himself, "I have made many mistakes," accounts for most of his troubles. One of his "many mistakes" is in supposing himself greatly persecuted. In spite of his "many mistakes," his brethren have loved him, and it is not a kindness for him to write, "Wounded and crushed by Conferences and Bishops." Nor is it easy to understand how any man, surrounded, as he has been, by such noble men as are to be found in the Mississippi Conference, could "know of no preacher anywhere to whom he could go for counsel and communion."

Our Sunday-School Periodicals.

The character of literature used in the Sunday-school is a matter of no little importance, inasmuch as its potent influence on the minds and lives of those who use it is for good or evil, according to its quality. In order, therefore, that the results aimed at in the Sunday-school work be achieved, the literature should be sound in doctrine, chaste in diction, attractive in style, and so graded as to be adopted to all ages and classes for instruction and salvation.

We are glad to note the fact that our church, through the agency of its Publishing House, is making and sending forth that which fully meets these conditions. The Sunday-school Editor and the Book Agents are magnifying their offices in this line of work. The periodicals which they are providing for our Sunday schools are unsurpassed for ability, adaptation, mechanical execution, and cheapness. These publications have ever been good, and have fulfilled their purpose well; but recent improvements — especially on the Magazine and Visitor—are worthy of note, and should commend them more than ever to those for whom they are designed. There are six of these periodicals, four of which are strictly lesson helps, so graded as to suit all ages and minds, from the little child to the adult. They are the Senior Quarterly, Intermediate Quarterly, Illustrated Lesson Paper, and Our Little People. With these our schools are generally pretty well supplied; but the others—viz., the Sunday-school Magazine and Sunday-school Visitor—have not the circulation that is deserving and needed. To these, therefore, I desire to direct special attention.

The Sunday school Magazine is a 64-page monthly, devoted to our Sunday-school interests in general. Each number abounds with information and instruction which all feel their need of who are heartily engaged in this service. The editorial, contributed and selected matter in the several departments is of inestimable value for the intelligent and effective promotion of the Sunday-school work. Besides the "Miscellaneous Department," which contains pertinent articles on various topics, there is the "Normal Department," by Prof. H. M. Hamill, and the "Worker's Exchange," which is made up of practical ideas and illustrations of the work from experienced workers. These two divisions are worthy of special study. A special feature for this year is a series of articles by Dr. Tillett on, "What Our Church Believes, and Why." Two-thirds of the Magazine each month is devoted to the Lesson Department, in which we have on the current Sunday-school lessons "Explanatory Notes," "Practical Applications," "Doctrinal Teachings," "Orientalisms," "Blackboard Exercises," "Primary Class Teaching," etc., by various competent writers. With so rich a bill-of-fare, the reasonable presumption would be that none of our preachers or Sunday-school workers are without it. "Yet it is a sad fact," writes Dr. Kirkland, "that not more than one-third of our teachers take the Sunday-school Magazine." However "sad the fact," may not the same report be made of our preachers and superintendents? "No wonder," continues Dr. Kirkland, "there is complaint of inefficient teachers and poor teaching." Let there be amendment in this matter at once. Let us not rest satisfied until a copy of this helpful and much needed periodical is in the hands of all for whom it is provided. To this end each pastor and presiding elder should possess, read, and recommend it. This they should do as exemplars to their flocks and for their own profit, that they may keep in line with the thought and spirit of the Sunday-school work of their church. It costs only fifty cents a year.

The Sunday-school Visitor is a weekly paper, beautifully illustrated, and brimful of the choicest reading matter for children, youth, and grown people. There is not a handsomer, brighter, or more entertaining paper of the class made. The editor promises a rare treat for this year in original articles on interesting and useful topics, such as, "Methodist History and Biography," "The Boyhood of Great Men," "The Great Churches in the World," "The Great Industries of the World," "Boy-Life in Ancient Times," "The Home of the President;" or, A Sketch of the White House," and incidents in the lives of its occupants, "Stories of Missions and Missionaries," etc. Surely this charming and wholesome publication ought to go into the homes of all our people, either through the Sunday-school or by individual subscription. Price, single subscription, sixty cents; in clubs, forty cents. So mote it be. G. W. BACHMAN.

J. M. Weems on Voltaire

In a recent number of this paper Bro. Weems criticised my article on Voltaire in the November-December number of the Methodist Review. The brother totally misapprehended the intention of the article. It is simply amazing that any man could read that and call me a "special pleader," and think that I was apologizing for a man whom I described as immoral, as unscrupulous in his use of falsehood, as an open violator of the marriage law, and utterly unfit for a teacher of his age. Let the brother read the article again carefully. I think the bitterness of Voltaire against the church was due, in a great measure, to the corruption and savage cruelty of the Romish Church. There was nothing lovely in it; it was hard and cruel, and he hated it.

But let Bro. Weems procure Parton's "Life of Voltaire," in two volumes, published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., and read it. It will give him a wide outlook on Voltaire's age. It is an intensely interesting book, and will richly repay perusal. I had not only pondered the subject well before I wrote, but I affirm again, in the light of the Protestant Christianity of the nineteenth century, such a career is impossible; such open immorality would not be tolerated. Correspondence.

A Broad View.

MR EDITOR: I have read your recent editorials in defense of the Bishops and the church, and in rebuke of "Editor No. 2," etc., with no small interest. I am in perfect accord with you as to "rings" and "cliques." Most of us get more and better than we deserve, but men are not usually driven and forced into place and measures long at a time. The Methodist Church is a great compact, and every member, clerical and lay, in entering into it yields something of his personal privilege that he may thereby advance the kingdom of God in the earth. The preacher, in yielding his right to select his field of labor, and the layman his right to name his pastor, does so not in the recognition of royalty, but in his devotion to the only plan that can carry the gospel to all men; and whenever they are persuaded that their concession is used not to the furtherance of the spread of the gospel and the salvation of souls, they become restive and are not willing that concession after concession shall be required of them, and that sometimes in the face of the most successful work and earnest devotion. Men are called to place in the church, not because either they or the place have come unusual sanctity, but the place has been made and the men selected for the furtherance of the kingdom and the glory of God; and Methodism will never lose sight of the fact that the kingdom is greater than either places or men.

Petty prejudices are not to be tolerated for a moment anywhere, and surely not in the high places. Men are placed in command, not simply to command the forces, but to study them as well, and to place them where the most effectual work may be done. Great commanders have exhibited, perhaps, their greatest ability just at this point. How foolish the world would think a man who would discharge and humiliate if possible a great cavalryman because he loved his charging steed more than the pedestrian's measured tread. I believe in law and in the wise administration of law. When I was quite younger than I now am I heard one of those great souls who lead Methodism in many a great victory say: "Our law is always sufficiently flexible to meet an emergency." Some of our great men have not seen that fact. A little care would have saved us much sorrow. Where is the wisdom of our fathers? Great statesmen lay their hands on all the elements, and marshal them for the battle against an invading foe; but here, with everybody anxious to dethrone the wrong and enthrone the right, everybody anxious to call men from sin to God, we are not able to adjust ourselves and present an unbroken front to the common enemy. Points of doubtful law and personal prerogatives had better be yielded by the highest and lowest among us rather than see the humblest instrument for good in the kingdom of God suffer. No two wrongs ever made a right, and sometimes in the journeyings of life men come to places where the greatest thing possible to say is, "I was wrong." In the humble opinion of a million or more of good faithful Methodists who love God and the souls of men, there are just a few men in high places who ought to get together and say, "I am wrong," and let the confession go round and round until the whole church would catch the inspiration and sing a funeral dirge at the burial of these personal grievances which would thrust themselves upon the whole church. This whole matter is wrong, and can never be righted by condemnation on the one hand or the other. Neither side has by any means a monopoly of the right.

God's Plan and My Place upon It.

BY REV. F. B. MEYER, B. A.

One chief thing that Christians need to be specially anxious about is to be quite sure they are on God's plan—because if they are where God would have them be, God is responsible for everything that concerns their maintenance and their qualifications for their post. These matters need not disturb them for a moment, they are not worth a single sleepless night or solitary anxious hour, if only God's will is being done by them on earth as it is done in heaven.

When angels are sent forth to perform some new and unexpected errand, the novelty and unprecedented character of the commission does not abash or impede them. They do not stay to calculate their powers, to count up their resources, or to measure their strength against their task. It is enough for them to know that God has willed to entrust them with a certain piece of work, and they are sure that he would not have done so unless he knew that they were able for it, or that he was prepared to furnish them with all the supplies of grace and wisdom and strength adequate to their need. The more difficult and impossible their work appears, the more evidently must God appear to their deliverance.

Difficulties are God's opportunity for the making bare of his arm. Faith resembles some strong swimmer, who delights to meet the crested billows, rolling before and under him in their pride, because as they come they only lift him higher, giving him glimpses of the shore, hearing him nearer heaven. Faith rejoices in difficulties, because they only afford the greater scope for the exercise of omnipotence. "They that go down to the sea in ships, these see the works of the Lord, and his wonders in the deep." Ah! troubled believer, thou hast an opportunity of seeing sides of God's character, which thou couldst never know didst thou not ride in the same boat with him over the storm-swept sea.

This is surely what our Master meant when he said, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." The point lies in what is to be the first object in life. The Gentiles, the nations of the earth, those who know not God as their Father in Jesus, seek first for food and clothes and home; they are anxious and troubled about these, they shape their plans by the expectations of gaining more than before of the treasures which thieves steal and moths corrupt and flames consume. Children of God, on the other hand, made it their first consideration to ascertain the will of God about their life. What square on the chess-board will he have them occupy? What office in the household would he have them fill? What post on the great battlefield would he have them hold?

How, then, may we know that we are on God's plan, and where he would have us to be? The answer is: God's place for each of us is to be just where we are, unless he is clearly showing us that it is our duty to remove elsewhere. "Let every man abide in the same calling wherein he was called." And the direction for us to go elsewhere comes in the concurrence of an inward consciousness, based on the Word of God, and coupled with the trend or current of the circumstances in which we are placed.

Here is an example: "See thou make all things according to the pattern shown thee in the mount." Such were the strict instructions given to Moses, and he found that where he literally obeyed as he was commanded, the material was provided all ready to his hand, whilst skilled and gifted workmen stood prepared to execute his designs. he had no care or anxiety so soon as he was willing to be, not an inventor, but an executor of the divine purpose. And well will it be for us to spend more time on the mount with the Master to see what he is doing. So we shall work out on earth and in our lives some reproduction of those glorious designs on which he has set his heart, and to accomplish which he is working through the centuries. —Truth.

God knows what steep places lie before us. He has provided the "shoes of iron and brass" for us to put on. They are truth and honesty and faith, and courage and prayer. A clear conscience will keep the head cool. And up along the hard road there is a signboard, on which is written in large, bright letters, "He that walketh uprightly walketh surely."—Dr. T. L. Cuyler.

It is well to keep in mind that no day leaves us just where and as it found us. We are with each departing day older in time and nearer the grave. Some addition for good or ill is made to the record of life. We are made better or worse. Habit becomes a little stronger. Our opportunities in life lessen. The need of despatch in the work of life increases. We have less time to waste. The danger of delay augments.

Prayer should be just what one feels, just what one thinks, just what one needs; and it should stop the moment it ceases to be the real expression of and the need, the thought, the feeling. —Beecher.

Be very sure of this, that no human creatures will be found saying sincerely "our brothers" on earth unless they have said previously "Our Father which art in heaven."—Maurice.

A humorist says that a man may run into debt, but he seldoms come out at anything faster than a walk. Many a church, as well as many a man, has found that to be a serious joke.

Accept your lot as a man does a piece of rugged ground, and begin to get out the rocks and roots, to deepen and mellow the soil, to enrich and plant it.

Ask God to show you your duty, and then do that duty well; and from that point you mount to the very peak of vision.—Edward Everett Hale.

Great souls are portions of eternity.

"Miss Brewster, after an absence of two months in Kentucky on a visit home, is again in the camp work. She will this year divide her time between Fort Sill and our new mission station near Mount Scott, forty miles southwest of this place. We built a little church there recently, and the Indians are earnestly begging that we send somebody down there to stay and teach them the good way. I could not secure a preacher for that church to make his headquarters there, and so I decided in answer to the demand that I would send Miss Brewster there. She—under God, I trust—will save that place to our church. It will be a difficult work for her, and accompanied by much privation; but she has a purpose, and shrinks from nothing that will glorify God and further his cause.

"It is my purpose, as soon as I am settled for the year, to organize a Bible and training-class with such Indians, both male and female, as I can get interested in the matter, and give them such training as will make them efficient in telling the story of Jesus as they go out among their own people. I hope to accomplish much in this way in permanent good. . . . I want to say that much can be done to aid us in the school by different societies if they would send us barrels or boxes of clothing, second-hand or new, ready-made or unmade, for both boys and girls. Our expenses this session for clothing are greater than any previous session, on account of the increase in the school, and we need help. A number of societies have taken a girl or boy to clothe, and we find this is quite an inspiration to the pupil thus selected, and also to the Indians at large. It would be well if other societies would do likewise."

Let us not forget that the time of the next annual meeting of our Conference Society is the Friday before the third Sabbath in June, one week earlier than heretofore; that auxiliary treasurers collect and remit to Conference treasurer $1.20 dues, and 15 cents Conference contingent fund, being very careful to keep these amounts separate; that it was suggested that a voluntary contribution is by far the best way to collect the auxiliary contingent fund.

"The seventeenth Annual Meeting of the Woman's Board of Missions will be held in Meridian, Miss., on the tenth of May, 1895. This is almost one month in advance of the usual time, and it will be necessary for all reports to the secretary of Home Affairs, and especially for all remittances of money from the missionary societies, to be sent promptly, that the Conference treasurer may remit to the general treasurer not later than the first day of April. The fiscal year closes by the first day of March, and surely a report from every society may be in hand by the first day of April." (Woman's Missionary Advocate.)

The general treasurer reports the receipts for the third quarter were $15,548.29, and disbursements, including amount paid for Petropolis, $46,000. Mrs. Butler said: "This would not be a discouraging fact if it were not true in regard to each quarter of this fiscal year. Disbursements have exceeded receipts every quarter. A little time yet remains. Let each of us whose eyes have been opened to see and understand the truth of Christ's message, and whose hearts have been softened by his love, make one more offering—a genuine love-offering for Christ before the books are closed. How many of our members there are who could give one hundred, or even one thousand, dollars, and never feel the slightest change in their living! How many five, ten, and twenty-five dollars could be poured into our treasury without the loss of a single comfort or luxury! Christ is still sitting in the 'court of the women!'"

Mrs. Caroline Sewell, of the Baltimore Conference, made a bequest of one thousand dollars, and Mrs. Mary Levi, of Louisville, Ky., one hundred and fifty dollars, to the Woman's Board of Missions. May the Holy Spirit move the hearts of the women of our Conference to do likewise—aid us in honoring the Board, who honors us by their next session; and honoring our heavenly Father, who honors us by putting us "in trust with the gospel," and his gold!

We publish below the address of the president of the Auxiliary of the W. P. and H. M. Society of Bay St. Louis, from the recent "woman's edition" of the Sea Coast Echo, a valued copy of which we have on our desk. The paper was kindly tendered by its generous and Christian-spirited proprietors to the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society to make of it what they could. Their acceptance of the offer resulted in the production of an excellent edition of the paper, neatly executed and well edited, and a substantial increase in the treasury. "Honor to whom honor is due." We wish to pay to the Bay St. Louis Auxiliary a well-earned tribute of praise by saying unhesitatingly that it is the banner society in the Conference. We do not say this because of their success in the paper venture, but because they "abound in good works." They labor indefatigably and always to a purpose, and have accomplished much good and builded monuments of their earnest zeal. We beg to compliment them upon their continued successful labors in the Master's cause, at the same time bidding them God-speed. And we congratulate the society at large for having such an efficient Auxiliary. We commend them and their methods to other and less energetic Auxiliaries, and bid them, "Go thou and do likewise." Most earnestly do we wish that such Auxiliaries were legion.

My Sisters: From the gratifying reports of our secretary and treasurer you see that this Auxiliary has not been idle the past year, but, at the command of our Lord, we have tried to "go forward." We have been able to build this year the long-wished-for chapel at the canning factory—a church which is indeed a lighthouse to the seafaring people of that community.

Already its light has beckoned souls away from the shoals and rocks of sin, and they have entered that blessed harbor—a living faith in a living Christ. Our factory Sunday-school has over fifty names enrolled, and the average attendance is more than thirty. The little organ is a great attraction. We should never regret that investment. I wish you could all see the little ones as they gather around it; sometimes a little tot pounding the keys while I try to play, and all singing "Blessed be the name," "Standing by the cross," "What a friend we have in Jesus." I felt last Sunday, as I listened to them, "Surely out of the mouths of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise."

We should always keep in grateful memory the substantial assistance given us by Bro. Harmon in securing for us a liberal donation from the Board of Church Extension, and arranging with the contractors for the easiest payments on the building; and, just here, I suggest that, in recognition of his services, we call the house Harmon Chapel. I wish every Auxiliary had the hearty co-operation of the pastor that we have.

Besides the work of raising money for church and parsonage building, the members of the society have furnished bed clothing, dresses, coats, underwear and food to many who were in need. They sent a package of bed clothing to the presiding elder; they have visited the sick, the poor, and the stranger. One member, with thoughtful kindness, quietly secured contributions and purchased a beautiful new clock for the parsonage. We are under obligation to Rev. J. W. Harmon for the cozy little study at the parsonage. When he saw it was impossible for the women to do it, with the work already on their hands, he, with characteristic enthusiasm, stirred up the men of the church to help, and soon it was done.

I long for the day to come when, instead of building houses, we can employ a city missionary for Bay St. Louis; when we can have our own industrial school in connection with our mission. Other societies have done this with the most blessed results. Every month our official paper, "Our Homes," has some good news of the work done by the city missionaries of Nashville, St. Louis, Louisville, New Orleans, and other places. It tells of schools kept up in the mountain districts. The Holston Conference Society has an orphan asylum under its care. A mission has been started among the Cubans at Tampa, Fla., and why can't we have an industrial school here? Consecrated young women are being trained at our Soarritt School for this very purpose. I hope some day to find this wish of my heart gratified. Surely the need is great, and our heavenly Father is able to supply all our needs.

We have reason to be grateful for the mercies extended to us the past year. Our lives have been held precious in the sight of the Lord. Some have been called to pass through the deep waters of affliction; but, through all, his hand has led us safely. Let us pray him to give us this year not only money for his work, but such a spiritual anointing as will fit us to be better and more consecrated workers in this field he has chosen for us, "The Parsonage and Home Mission Society."

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. H. E. Partridge: "Prospects for a good spiritual year with us are good. The people have received us very kindly, and I am laying myself out for a full year's work. Have met all appointments and made a hundred pastoral visits."

Rev. J. P. Drake, Edwards, Miss., March 9: 'Sister M. M. Snell has been with us preaching the Word with power. Her 'prophesying' is indeed unto edification, exhortation, and comfort.' Her mode of presenting a 'full salvation' was scriptural and above criticism by any but Antinomians. A great outpouring of the people to say farewell gave special witness to the favor she had won by her Christly ministry. More anon."

Rev. E. G. Kilgore, Mt. Pleasant, Texas, March 10: "On last Sunday night we closed a gracious revival of religion at Pittsburg, Tex. About one hundred and fifty conversions were reported, and one hundred and seventeen united with our church. One saloon keeper was converted; closed his house, and will join the Presbyterian Church. The opera house has been ordered closed, as another result of the meeting. Bro. Calhoun and his people are happy. We are now in the midst of a glorious work of grace here. Many are being saved. Glory to God! Pray for us. May God bless the ADVOCATE and its editor."

Rev. W. S. Lagrone, Senatobia, Miss., March 11: "It may be interesting to some of your readers to know what we are doing up here. Well, we are doing our best for Christ, and we feel that he is with us. The church here is getting to be as busy as a bee-hive. The second Quarterly Conference just past was a blessing to all of us. We give a few items of interest reported then. Sunday-school, an increase of 40 per cent.; an Epworth League of more than 60 members, and growing; the prayer meetings large and growing in interest; congregations good, and services encouragingly hopeful; the collections ordered by the Conference all in cash and subscription, except a small amount; 16 new subscribers to the Advocates. We have two missionary societies doing well: 'The Laura Raiford Workers,' and a juvenile society. The people have a mind to work, and, by the help of God, we will take this town for Christ. The Lord is with us. We are happy. Let everybody pray for us."

Rev. E. N. Evans: "I am again at my post of duty after an absence of nearly three weeks. The bad weather first of February laid me up with rheumatism and I returned to Hot Springs for relief, which was prompt and, I trust, permanent. The widespread and largely unnecessary alarm of small-pox caused me to retire to the mountain resort of Potash Sulphur ten days before returning, and then tour round through Texas to get back here, where we are all quarantined against the dreaded pest. The situation here is now quite hopeful; only one case, and he is improving rapidly. With universal vaccination, and the measures of our able Board of Health, we feel no great alarm. My church was about full yesterday, and the schools are resuming work. We hope yet for a good year. The outlook for a new church is hopeful. We have a fine membership, and, with a good church-building, we will come to the front. We only made one little pull, and about one-half the necessary amount went on paper, and a competent committee was appointed. Bro. White did some noble work here, and left a goodly heritage for his successor. His selection of the Board of Stewards was superb. We had much good material left after choosing the ablest and best Board it was ever my good fortune to serve. They do church business on banking principles, and it seems to suit the people as well as it does the preacher."

Rev. W. W. Morse: "We were appointed by Bishop Keener to the China Grove circuit for this year. We landed in Tylertown the last day of the old year, and were kindly received and royally entertained for a few days at the home of D. N. Ball, one of our stewards. He and his interesting family will ever have a warm place in our affections. The people in Tylertown—in fact, all round the circuit—are very kind to us. They know that we are among them. There have been but few days since we have been here that some token of appreciation has not found its way to our home. May we be as able to feed their souls as they are willing to care for our bodies. This is a good circuit, consisting of four appointments: China Grove, Tylertown, Holmesville, and Water Hole. The people are courteous, kind and generous; but, oh, how they do need Holy Ghost religion, that will make them pray in their homes, work in the church, and take and read the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE! May many accept your generous offer! We are trying to plan largely and wisely for development along all lines—materially, financially, and spiritually. Our motto is: 'All the collections in full,' and a gracious revival in every soul, home, and church in the bounds of this circuit. Doctor, join me in prayer for this. All my appointments have been filled, notwithstanding the severe cold weather. Our prayer meeting in Tylertown is largely attended every week. Bro. J. J. Magee, superintendent, and his corps of efficient teachers are doing good work in Sunday-school class in Tylertown. More anon."

DELTA ITEMS

We have been spending some weeks here in the Delta helping our brethren in revival meetings, and looking after the interest of our Grenada Collegiate Institute. We have had "times of refreshing from the presence of the Lord." God was with us at Clarksdale and Friar's Point in great power. The churches were greatly revived, and nearly 200 were converted and joined the different churches. There are not many people in this valley (comparatively speaking), but those that are here are a big-hearted set, and I love to work with them. The church is in a better condition than ever before, perhaps, and improving every day. Methodism has a strong hold in the Delta. Our preachers are doing a great work for the church in this part of the vineyard. These Methodist preachers who are doing the work in these hard fields are a brave, heroic set, and will have many stars in their crowns when God makes up his jewels. It was so delightful to work with Bros. Wyatt and Brown. We have never yet failed in any meeting where we had a consecrated pastor, that had his work well in hand, to help us. How much easier and more satisfactory it is to hold meetings for some pastors than for others! Wyatt and Brown were ready for us when we arrived. And then, too, we felt when we left their charges that they would care for the new converts; and that always gives us great joy and comfort. It makes us sick to leave our converts in the hands of one who is not a good shepherd.

We are now at Jonestown—a hard place—assisting Bro. Gibbs in a meeting. This is the hardest people to reach I have ever met, save Bay St. Louis. The people are intelligent and kind, but many of them intensely worldly. However, we think we have about bored through the flint, and will soon strike water. The church has been considerably revived, and quite a number, up to date, have been reclaimed and converted. We are in for the fight, and we propose, by the help of God, to take the town for Christ. Bro. Gibbs and his lively wife are indeed consecrated to God and the work of the church. We have found no pastor and his wife who look after all the interests of the church more closely than they. The people here are perfectly devoted to them, though both of them are strict believers in the Wesleyan doctrine of entire sanctification. What a delight it is to be associated with such men and women of God, if some people are afraid of them!

In conclusion, let me say that there is a place in God's great army for every soldier who really wants to fight; therefore, let us, who are enlisted under the blood-stained banner of the cross, study well the thirteenth chapter of first Corinthians, that we may have more of that charity that thinks no evil; so that we will criticise each other less, and be more united in our fight against sin and the devil.

Praying the blessings of God upon the ADVOCATE and its readers, I am,

Yours fraternally,

W. M. McINTOSH.

Jonestown, Miss.

COLUMBIA, LA.

On Jan. 2 I wrote to the ADVOCATE. In my letter I stated that our parsonage here (Columbia) was in need of repairs, and also said that I hoped that our preachers would make an effort to keep our parsonage in good condition. I also said it was a deplorable fact that some of the preachers seem to think that all that was necessary was to make it do while they were there; or if the next preacher wanted any repairs done, he could do it. I am not ready to retract any part of the statement yet, notwithstanding the inference from a letter written by my successor, Rev. W. T. Woodward, of the Simsport charge, that I was preaching one thing and practicing another. Now, Mr. Editor, the tree is known by its fruits. Bro. Woodward says if he understands the meaning of words, that Bro. Roy shot nine whistlers at his predecessor. It seems to me if his statement be true, that he got the shot intended for the other. I would say just here that I did not mean anyone; but people of a kind stick together. I meant kindly to the brethren when I said they ought to build up instead of pulling down. Bro. Woodward said, "It strikes me that people who live, or have lived, in glass houses, shouldn't throw stones;" and then adds, "At this juncture it might be well to include the gardens." I would be glad for the brother to explain himself. I don't think he exhibits the spirit of Christ when he makes the statement that he has. No other inference can be drawn than that my work at Simsport was to destroy. I know that I am frail; but through Christ we can do what is right. The work proves itself. Reader, go to the past Minutes and see for yourself. When I went to the work (Simsport) I found no parsonage property, though a house and lot had been promised by a good brother, but had not been deeded. So when I arrived I set myself to work, together with the good people on the work, and we soon had furniture and other necessaries to make a home comfortable, and we left it in a very good condition. I did some little improvement; the fencing all up, though I did not clean the weeds of the garden. I thought that would be good exercise for the next preacher, though some of the brethren don't like out-door exercise—that is, if it is called work. I reckon that is why the brother replied. But if a man don't like to work, it would be wisdom, in my judgment, for him to be silent when some one else is trying to do something; or if he must speak, confine himself to facts. It is not supposed that a preacher can do everything that ought to be done, because means are not always available; but he can keep together what there is on a place.

Well, Mr. Editor, I had no thought of being criticised, especially by a preacher, when I wrote in reference to home industry, but so it is. A preacher ought to be the last man to discourage church work. I would not have replied to the brother's remarks, but he failed to make a correct statement. Now, I don't think the brother meant to do wrong; but he did it all the same. So I hope and pray the Lord's blessings upon him and his, also the work. I trust he may do a greater work than has ever been done.

We are very busy at this time repairing the parsonage here; that is, doing general improvement, such as fencing. We will do some work on the parsonage. We have the material on hand already. We will try to have it in good condition by Conference. We have met every appointment but one, and then I was providentially hindered; was in bed sick. We have a good people to serve. May the Lord bless them abundantly this year. Brethren, pray for us.

Were the scrofula sores on my poor little boy. They were especially severe on his legs, back of his ears and on his head. His hair was so matted that combing was sometimes impossible. His legs were so bad that sometimes he could not sit down, and when he tried to walk his legs would crack open and the blood start. Physicians did not cure. I decided to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla. In two weeks the sores began to heal up; the scales came off and all over his body new and healthy flesh and skin formed. When he had taken two bottles of

A VERY REMARKABLE OFFER!

A $40 Sewing Machine for $20, and the N. O. Advocate Thrown In!

This may seem surprising, but we mean what we say. The machine which we handle is "The Favorite High Arm Singer," the manufacturer's catalogue price of which is $40. Read the following description taken from the manufacturer's catalogue, and then read our offer.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer Sewing Machine, as you will perceive, is very attractive in appearance, the cut being an exact representation. It is strongly constructed from the best grades of material produced, and its adjustment perfect; also combines simplicity, durability and workmanship of the highest order; and in point of finish, light-running and sewing qualities, is unsurpassed. In addition to the above-mentioned qualities, our Favorite Improved High Arm Singer has the latest, most useful and practical improvements, such as a perfect Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, positive Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self-Setting Needle, Tension Liberator and Loose Pulley, and is without any exception the best machine ever produced for the money.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer is the only Singer style machine using a Cylinder Shuttle. The bed of machine being sunk flush with table and nicely hinged so it can be turned backed to admit of oiling and cleaning under works without the least inconvenience.

"Automatic Bobbin Winder, used on the Favorite Improved High Arm Singer, is positive in its operation, and works to perfection, winding the thread on bobbin as evenly as thread is wound on a spool.

"Flat Tension Spring. Every lady who has used machines with coil tension spring, knows the value of having a machine with flat tension, 'same as used on the Favorite Improved High Arm Singer,' for the reason that when tension is once set it always remains the same and does not alter while machine is in operation, requiring operator to stop every little while and re-adjust same.

"The Cabinet Work is of the very latest design, made of the best quality of Oak or Walnut, as preferred. Unique and attractive in style, and elaborate in finish. The rich nickel-plated trimmings harmonize with the general handsome appearance of the machine.

"Furnished free with every machine are the following-named accessories: One Foot Hemmer, one Screw Driver, one Wrench, one Oil Can and Oil, one Gauge Screw, one extra Check Spring, one Package of Needles, five Bobbins and one Instruction Book.

"Extra Set of Attachments also free with each machine, consisting of the following: One Tucker, one Foot Ruffler, one Set of Plate Hemmers, four different widths, up to seven-eighths of an inch; one Binder and one Thread Cutter.

Thursday, March 21, 1895.

The world of fashion is always sailing along the lee shore of envy.

The worshipers of mammon are afflicted with the blood poison of avarice.

The Dead Sea of intemperance swallowed up 90,000 human souls in the year 1894 in these United States.

Far too common is the practice of magnifying our own troubles and temptations and of minifying those of others.

Rottenness in society and corruption in politics are inevitable when men in high position discard the Bible and ridicule the religion of Christ.

Not a few people long for a salvation that depends upon no effort of their own. They want God to do everything, and imagine that he will drag them into heaven.

When some cherished plan is thwarted, we perchance sulk, and, like Ahab when Naboth refused to sell him his vineyard, foolishly fancy that life has no further charms for us.

You visit people who belong to your set. How many do you visit for the sake of Christ? Some are ashamed to be seen in the company of the lowly, not because it is a disgrace from a moral standpoint, but because society says it is not the thing to do.

Never in the history of the world have the Sacred Scriptures been the center of so much thought, and so much world-wide discussion. The scholarship of the world is paying court to the word of God. "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me."

With all the criticisms of wicked men, and all the higher criticism of religious men, the Scriptures have not been removed one hair's breadth from their foundations. The gospel is still "the power of God unto salvation" to all souls that are earnestly seeking the way of life.

All that is necessary for a Christian's faith is to believe in a "historical Christ," and the "historical church" based upon this Christ! One of the brilliant adherents of this school says: "The church has now learned to walk without the crutches of the Scriptures." Indeed! We fear they will walk into hell.

Louisiana As a Mission Field.

We invite special attention to the communication of Dr. James A. Parker on our first page. It treats of a subject that merits the very careful attention of Louisiana Methodism and of our General Mission Board as well. South Louisiana, as all the world knows, is a most magnificent country. Nature seems to have done her best in fitting up this region as an abode for civilized man. Yet this garden spot of the State is in a large measure given over to Rome. Our church in this region, instead of advancing, seems to be actually receding. Lafourche circuit, Houma circuit, and other pastoral charges, if we are correctly informed, have disappeared from the Minutes of the Conference altogether. This ought not to be. Not contraction, but expansion should be our policy. It is too late to discuss the propriety and necessity of attempting to evangelize countries where Rome holds away. That has been the policy of our church for many years. If there is a necessity for sending the gospel to Mexico and Brazil, the same necessity exists for sending it to South Louisiana. Rome is Rome everywhere. Of necessity she changes her tactics slightly in different localities. In America it would be the height of unwisdom for her to pursue the same policy in every respect as in semi-civilized countries. But, notwithstanding this, her principles are the same in Louisiana as in Mexico or Spain. It would be well to inquire why our church has had no larger success in South Louisiana. As we have already said in the columns of the ADVOCATE, we think the chief reason is that we have not pursued the wisest methods. French is the vernacular of South Louisiana, and in order to achieve large success among the Catholics of this region our missionaries must speak French. All the reasons that apply to the use of the Spanish language in Mexico, and the Portuguese in Brazil, apply with almost equal force to the use of French in South Louisiana. And here comes in the necessity for aid from the General Board. It is simply impossible for the Louisiana Conference at present to furnish men properly equipped in this, as well as other respects, without aid from the General Board. We ask the attention of the General Board to this matter. We firmly believe that this field, with proper cultivation, will yield as large a harvest as any mission to a Catholic population. If the Board of Missions will take this field under its care, it can easily find gifted, educated, consecrated young men who will make it their business to fit themselves for this work just as our missionaries fit themselves for work in foreign fields. Will Drs. Lambuth and Morrison make a note of this and use their influence with the General Board in favor of a liberal appropriation to South Louisiana.

Vote, Louisiana Lottery.

Whatever may have been the mistakes and shortcomings of the last Congress, it did one thing which entitles it to the thanks of good citizens everywhere. We refer to the passage of the Anti-Lottery Bill. This bill amends the law of 1890 so as to prohibit express companies from handling lottery matter—tickets, circulars, advertisements, etc. This law will put a quietus upon the Louisiana Lottery, so far as the United States is concerned. The Louisiana Lottery, however, is only one phase of the great gambling evil as it exists among us. Much else must be done in the way of legislation, and in the way of the enforcement of law, and in the way of agitation and education, before the people of this country will have a right to felicitate themselves upon their achievements in this direction. The NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE will have something to say in the near future on several of the forms of the gambling mania of our day, the causes that have produced it, and the remedies for it.

Why Is It?

Universalism, as an ecclesiastical organization, has always been insignificant. In numerical strength it has never assumed such proportions as to make it a formidable competitor with the great orthodox denominations. Even at the present day, when it seems as if men are readier than ever before to embrace every new-fangled ism that comes along, Universalist Churches are, like angels' visits, "few and afar between." And yet it is a strange fact that Universalism proclaimed from the pulpit of an orthodox denomination seems to be a winning card. If a preacher wishes to fill his pews, let him preach that there is no hell, or that, if there is, it is quite a temporary and trivial affair not much to be dreaded, and the task is done. He is sure of an audience who will be enthusiastic in his praise as "an advanced thinker," "a man of liberal ideas," etc. Why it is that men are so ready to embrace Universalism when preached from a Protestant pulpit, and yet are so averse to joining a Universalist Church, we are unable to say.

The Revival Needed.

The revival most needed at this hour is a revival of interest in, and loyalty to, our Methodist press. Wesley was never wiser or more practical in his counsel to his ministers than when he said to them, "It is impossible for a people to grow in grace unless they give themselves to reading." The Methodist weekly best supplies to our people the intelligence and inspiration which they ought to receive; and yet only in a pitiably small minority of our homes—one of the Advocates says in only one out of ten—is any Methodist paper taken. A large proportion of the officiary of our churches do not subscribe for any religious paper. The results which are so much desired in spiritual quickening and in larger usefulness can not come save as this lamentable condition is changed. Will not the preachers lead a general reform in this matter?—Zion's Herald.

Christian people are in a measure responsible for the non-attendance at church of certain classes. It is not every church member who acts and dresses in such a way as to make the poor feel at home in God's house. In some quarters there is far too much extravagance and love of display. Do we go to church to show off our finery and good looks, or do we go there to worship? Let each answer for himself.

It is painfully evident that the purpose of the Higher Critics is, not to vindicate the truth of the Bible, but to deny its credibility wherever this is possible. They are engaged all the time in picking out its faults and flaws, and are never happy unless they can find some defect which they parade before the world, as an evidence of their learning.—Truth.

Sabbath desecration, intemperance, gambling, licentiousness, extortion on the poor, political corruption are rampant in the land. God will not spare us.

We invite special attention to the notice of Bro. J. W. Malone. The cause he presents is a worthy one. All our colleges ought to have good libraries, and our male colleges usually do have. The female colleges, however, are not so well equipped in this regard. Let the friends of Grenada Collegiate Institute do what their hands find to do to supply this lack.

BOOKS.

THE BOY IN GRAY. By Geo. G. Smith. 12 mo. 267 pages. Price, $1. 1894. Macon Publishing Co., Macon, Ga.

Numerous war stories have been written, some of them good, many of them flat and unprofitable. In our opinion, however, "The Boy in Gray" does not belong to the latter class of stories, but has many of the marks of genuine merit. The author, who is not a novice in fiction-writing, says in the preface: "It is needless to say that it is not a true record of personal life; it is no more history than 'Robinson Crusoe' or the 'Pilgrim's Progress.' The facts stated as historic are to be relied upon. Many of these came under my own eye."

The book begins with a vivid description of plantation life in South Georgia before the late war, and follows through some thrilling experiences the varying fortunes of the Lawson family, worthy representatives of the old type of Southerners. Roger Lawson, the hero of the story, though frank, courageous, incorruptible, self denying, yet is not an improbable character. Northern as well as Southern readers will be pleased with the tone of the book. It contains nothing that will revive prejudice or stir up bitterness on either side; but, on the contrary, much to foster the spirit of peace and brotherly kindness. The author uses chaste and beautiful English, and displays considerable constructive skill as well as descriptive powers of no mean order. Few readers, whether young or old, will want to skip a single page of this helpful, breezy story, which, among other things, teaches incidentally the worth of integrity, truthfulness, and filial obedience. It will delight the boys especially. Write to the author at Macon, Ga., for a copy.

M. M. B.

A DICTIONARY OF SCIENTIFIC ILLUSTRATIONS AND SYMBOLS. 8 vo., 420 pages. 1894. Wilbur B. Ketcham, Publisher, 2 Cooper Union, New York.

The following felicitous description is found in the preface: "This book is an assemblage of striking and interesting scientific facts, arranged so as to be of immediate use to men who require a suggestive topic, a forcible analogy, a cogent symbol, or a suitable illustration. It may also be pleasant reading to busy lovers of nature, who are glad to spare half-hours from time to time in contemplating the marvels of creation. Anecdotes have long been used to illustrate moral truth; but scientific facts are often preferable. Clergymen are finding out that their hearers are somewhat tired of such of the former as are drawn chiefly from the sentimental side of life, and do not rest upon reliable historical foundation."

We heartily commend this book to the public, especially to speakers and writers. A wide-awake preacher may derive invaluable assistance from it. The illustrative facts here given are in accordance with the latest discoveries of science, and have all the charm of freshness. There is appended a partial list of the authorities quoted from, which may be of service to some.

PERIODICALS.

There are a number of special features in the Century, for March. The frontispiece is a rare and interesting portrait of the Empress Josephine, and there are other illustrations of Prof. Sloane's life of Napoleon, in which the record of the Corsican period is closed and Napoleon's stirring life in Paris taken up—his reception in Paris society, his appointment as General of the Convention, the day of the Paris Sections, and his marriage with Josephine. There is the first of three papers by Miss Harriet Waters Preston of a new field of travel entitled "Beyond the Adriatic," being an account—the first in American magazine journalism—of the beautiful region on the east side of the Adriatic from Trieste to Albania, which is likely to become a favorite resort for travelers in Europe; also a fully illustrated paper on the late Jean Carries, sculptor and potter, thought to be the first account in an American magazine; fine portraits of Ysaye, the violinist, and of Helmholtz, with appreciative and critical articles; a beautiful engraving in Timothy Cole's Dutch Masters series. There is also the usual miscellany in the departments, including this month a story in not-too-difficult Chinese dialect, entitled, "Chan Tow, the Highroh," by Chester Bailey Fernald; three fine sonnets, by Edmond Clarence Steadman ("Proem to a Victorian Anthology"), William Prescott Foster ("Katahdin"), and Henry Jerome Stockard ("As Some Mysterious Wanderer of the Skies"); and short stories by George A. Hibbard and Harry Stillwell Edwards.

One of the most important projects ever undertaken by Scribner's Magazine begins in the March number with the first installment of President E. Benjamin Andrews' dramatic narrative, "A History of the last Quarter-Century in the United States." Each installment will be filled with what was once the sensational episode of the day, and which has been proved by time to be of great historical importance. The first installment deals with the United States at the close of Reconstruction, and among the incidents described are the Chicago Fire, the Tweed Ring, the Rise of the Liberal Party, the Ku-Klox Klan, Black Friday and the Treaty of Washington. Each incident is accompanied with a unique series of illustrations, drawn from the best sources and supplemented with the accounts of eye-witnesses, so that the story of the quarter-century will be told pictorially from month to month. In fiction this number is remarkable. It contains the first of a two-part story by W. D. Howells, entitled "A Circle in the Water." This in every way is one of the most earnest and pathetic short stories that Mr. Howells has written.

NOTES.

Grape Street Church—Rev. H. H. Ahrens, pastor—is undergoing repairs. It will be completely renovated inside and out.

***

Dr. G. W. Rembert has removed his family to the city, and is living at 740 St. Charles St. (old number 182). New Orleans Methodism is to be congratulated.

***

Dr. Norman Kerr, an eminent specialist, gave his opinion recently that the drinking of intoxicating beverages was on the increase among the women of Great Britain.

***

The Methodist ladies of Biloxi will get out this week an edition of the Biloxi Herald. The entire net proceeds of the edition will be used for the benefit of the church.

***

Rev. R. M. Powers, of the North Texas Conference, preached two excellent sermons last Sunday at Carondelet Street Church. He is in the city on a visit to his wife, who is here under medical treatment.

***

Miss Addie McKnight has been elected by the New Orleans Epworth League Union as a delegate to the Epworth League Convention, to be held in Chattanooga in June. Her alternate is Miss Barbara Lucas.

***

If any man says anything against your church or your religious creed, raise a mob and put him to death, if the State will allow you to do so. This will, of course, show that you are on the way to heaven and that your church is the only true church on earth.

***

Why don't some of our Methodist editors announce that they believe in the New Testament and the Apostles' Creed? There is as much need of such an announcement as of some other things that are announced in a pompous, look-at-me sort of way.

***

A certain Southern Methodist editor announces with a great flourish of trumpets that he is opposed to "favoritism, rings and combinations." Of course, this is one of his distinctive peculiarities. All the rest of the editors, wicked fellows, favor these things. Whew? What next?

***

Peace reigns in New Orleans, but it is the peace of the bayonet. Wholesale murder is prevented only by the presence of a large force of State troops on the river front. The commerce of this port has been immensely damaged by the mob rule of the last few weeks. How long this state of things is to continue no mortal knows.

***

Congress should have full credit for passing in the closing days of the session an Anti-Lottery bill, which is drastic enough to put an end to the Louisiana Lottery, no matter under what name disguised or in what place located. This law makes it a misdemeanor to use the mails or express companies for lottery purposes, and makes it impossible to employ the flotions which have served to keep the evil alive. There was a strong effort made to defeat the bill, but in vain.

Luther Benson lectured in the auditorium of Carondelet Street Church on Sunday afternoon, and again on Monday night. He is the same inimitable Luther Benson that he was when we first heard him, ten years ago. His lectures bristle with argument, illustration, wit, wisdom and pathos intermixed in such a way as to hold the attention of an audience almost indefinitely. He got a much better hearing than temperance orators are wont to get in the Crescent City, his audience on Monday night being quite a good one.

***

F. A. Dicks, of Natchez, Miss., has removed to this city and formed a partnership in the wholesale drug business with Mr. A. K. Finlay, formerly of the firm of Finlay & Brunswig. Mr. Dicks is well known in business circles throughout Mississippi and adjoining States as one of the largest wholesale and retail druggists in Mississippi. He has remarkable gifts in a business way, and is a man of sterling integrity. He is a thorough Methodist. He and his family will be valuable acquisitions to the social and religious life of the Crescent City.

***

We very frequently receive letters in which the writer omits his name, or his postoffice, or both, thus causing delay and sometimes trouble. The climax in this direction, however, was reached a few days since, when a brother wrote us a business letter and signed another brother's name. Fortunately, the contents of the letter were of such a character as to prevent mistake or perplexity on our part. When the brother reads this note he would doubtless become very indignant if some one should say to him, "Thou art the man."

***

There are many good people who would dearly love to read the ADVOCATE, but who are utterly unable these hard times to pay for it. This affords a fine opportunity for the exercise of philanthropy in a telling way. It is impossible to estimate the good results of the weekly visits of a high-toned religious paper into a family. Let our readers reflect and see if they can not do something in this way. We have already donated during the current year about a hundred dollars in this way; and we feel that this is our part. If brethren wish to contribute in this way, we will start an ADVOCATE helping fund, and will publish in the ADVOCATE from time to time a report of moneys received. Our friend, Dr. I. W. Cooper, of the Mississippi Conference, not long since paid the annual subscription of five of our superannuated preachers. Bro. J. D. Millsaps, of Hermanville, has for several years paid for several subscriptions for poor people. May these noble examples prove contagious!

***

We had the pleasure of meeting during her recent visit to this city Miss Will Allen Dromgoole, and renewing the acquaintance of years agone. Through the courtesy of Mrs. M. J. Ferguson, president of the Arena Club, we also had the pleasure of hearing Miss Dromgoole in the reading which she gave under the auspices of the club. But for the invitation we could not have had that pleasure, as this club gives no pay entertainments and admits no one except on special invitation. We had an agreeable surprise in store for us. We knew, of course, of Miss Dromgoole's abilities as a writer, but had never heard much said of her as an elocutionists. Great was our surprise, therefore, to find that she takes rank among the very best readers of the day. The pieces she rendered were all her own productions as published in different magazines. Her audience—a very select one—was greatly delighted. She was the recipient of much social attention during her stay in the Crescent City.

***

Of Bishop Galloway's address at his reception in New York, the New York Advocate says: "A more admirable address from every point of view we have not heard. Reverently thanking God that he had not been delayed nor encountered a serious accident, and had been kept in perfect health, he devoted himself for a time—all too short—to the impression made upon his mind of the progress of Christ's kingdom and of the work of Protestant missions in the countries which he had visited. He spoke, among other things, of the emotion with which he looked upon the church that was built by the men that buried Thomas Coke in the sea. Passing to the subject of fraternity, he sailed smoothly between Scylla and Charibdis. Without an expressed or implied concession that his fathers were not sincere, he conceded to our fathers' purity of motive and the exercise of the best judgment they could command. Asserting his devotion to the principle of fraternity, he illustrated its operation in foreign fields, and pleaded for its application nearer home. During the entire address he avoided the errors too common of introducing controverted subjects on a festive occasion, and of flattering another church at the expense of his own."

The Advocate for One Dollar.

To all new subscribers whose names are sent in with the cash before May 1, 1895, we will send the ADVOCATE from now until Dec. 31 for one dollar. When we say "for cash," we do not mean that every preacher must in every case send cash with each name. Let the names be sent in as rapidly as possible, and let the cash follow soon afterward. We can not take subscriptions at this rate and then wait until Conference for the money. Let all our preachers make this offer known as rapidly as possible.

Brother preacher, it would neither compromise your dignity nor desecrate the Sabbath if you should make this offer known to your people from the pulpit. Let laymen also lend a helping hand by spreading the news of our liberal offer. Let it be known that subscribers to the ADVOCATE, at whatever price, become beneficiaries of our various premium offers—"Earthly Footsteps of the Man of Galilee," as well as the rest.

P. S.—When we say "premium offers" we mean those now running in the ADVOCATE—not those which were running a few weeks ago.

A Pure Baking Powder.

A baking powder that can be depended upon to be free from lime and alum is a desideratum in these days of adulterated food. So far as can be judged from the official reports, the "Royal" powder is to be the only one yet found by chemical analyses to be entirely without one or the other of these substances, and absolutely pure. This, it is shown, results from the exclusive use by its manufacturers of cream of tartar specially refined and prepared by patent processes which totally remove the tartrate of lime and other impurities. The cost of this chemically pure cream of tartar is much greater than any other, and it is used in no baking powder except the "Royal," the manufacturers of which control the patents under which it is refined. Dr. Edward G. Love, formerly analytical chemist for the U. S. Government, who made the analyses for the New York State Board of Health in their investigation of baking powders, and whose intimate knowledge of the ingredients of all those sold to this market enables him to speak authoritatively, says of the purity, wholesomeness and superior quality of the "Royal":

"I find the Royal Baking Powder composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder, and does not contain either alum or phosphates, or other injurious substance."

Prof. Love's tests, and the recent official tests by both the United States and Canadian governments, show the Royal Baking Powder to be superior to all others in strength and leavening power. It is not only the most economical to use, but makes the purest, finest flavored and most wholesome food.

The Grenada Collegiate Institute Library and Literary Society Hall.

We are glad to announce to our friends that we have just completed the handsomest art studio in the State, if not in the South. Our library is growing. The college has bought over one hundred volumes, and about half that number has been contributed. These books are the very best to be had. Every good book sent us by the brethren and friends will be placed where it will do much good, and will be highly appreciated by the college. Just now we are making a strenuous effort to fit up the room for our library and literary society. This can be done at a cost of $150. It is our purpose to make the literary society a special feature of the Institute, but to do this a good library and neat society hall is a necessity. Who will help us? Let the brethren and friends send us contributions in money or books without delay.

Address, J. W. MALONE Pres.,
Grenada, Miss.

"BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES" will quickly relieve Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh and Throat Diseases. Sold only in boxes.

Mrs. Jas. A. Godfrey.

The many friends of our dear mother, Mrs. Jas. A. Godfrey, will doubtless regret to know that she is not expected to live many days. She has been in very feeble health for the past two years; has had two severe attacks of "la grippe" within two years, and resulted in that dreadful malady, consumption. Her home is with her son, who lives near Bradley, Oktibbeha County, Miss. I write this to inform a multitude of interested friends, and request their prayers in behalf of the dying ones. E. F. EDGAR.

About Our Bible Offer.

Some of our new subscribers under the $1 proposition seem not to understand exactly how to avail themselves of our Oxford Bible offer. The plan is very simple. These subscribers have already paid to December, '95. One dollar more will extend their subscription to June, '96. They will then be entitled to our offer, which is to send them a $4.50 Bible for $2. Let it be noted, however, that the $2 for the Bible is in addition to the subscription. We will not sell the Bible to one who is not a subscriber for less than the catalogue price, $4.50. Non-subscribers who write us expecting to get it at $2 are simply wasting postage stamps.

The Fearn Mission.

The amounts received as specials to send out Rev. J. B. Fearn, M. D., as a medical missionary to China are as follows, viz.: Reported previously, $601 25; Rev. T. W. Adams, $10; Rev. W. W. Simmons, $10; Lady in Jackson, $1; Rev. H. W. Featherstun, $20, Farewell Offering in Yazoo City, $33.55; Mrs. A. F. Watkins, $25; Rev. J. T. Nicholson (additional), $5; Miss Mamie Griffith, $1; Rev. J. A. Bishop, $5; Friend in Jackson, $1; Lady in the North, $3; Rev. M. H. Moore, $11; Wesson Sunday-school (additional), $5; Columbia Church (additional), $5; Farewell Offering in Vicksburg, $35 25; Mrs. W. M. Stanton, 50 cents; Mr. John A. Lewis, $5; Miss Lillie Moore Kittrell, $1; Farewell Offering in Memphis, $10; Rev. J. G. Sibley, $12; Woman's Missionary Society, Central Church, Meridian, $20; George McDonald, 50 cents; Mrs. H. S Kearney, $2; Mr. J. D Rowan, $2; total, $835 05.

By the advice of friends interested, the farewell offerings from Yazoo City and from Vicksburg were given to Dr. Fearn for his individual outfit, leaving $766.25 for his traveling expenses and one year's outlay in China, $766.25. Subscriptions uncollected amount to $191. We must realize from the unpaid subscriptions and from other contributions the amount of $233.75 within the next three months, in order to meet our obligations to the Board of Missions.

Dr. Lambuth writes that $200 additional could be very judiciously expended upon his outfit. Every one must see how necessary it is for him to have the most approved surgical instruments and medical books, as well as a collection of standard religious works. These things can be sent on to him. What a capital investment is here offered to those who desire to do good with their money!

Very interesting farewell services have been held in Yazoo City, in Vicksburg, in Central Church, Memphis and in Nashville. In every place Dr Fearn made most favorable impressions upon the large audiences assembled to give him the parting hand.

Dr. Lambuth, who never saw or heard him until the farewell meeting in Jackson, writes: "He has impressed me very favorably. The highest qualification of a missionary is that of soul winning. This he seems to possess in a large degree. His address at Jackson made a fine impression."

By the advice of the missionary authorities, Dr. Fearn has been spending some days in Nashville, getting acquainted with the methods of procedure in the Home Office. He will leave Nashville, Saturday, March 16; spend two days in St. Louis, and will sail for China by the steamer China, March 26. I earnestly ask that the prayers of the faithful may accompany him. C. G. ANDREWS.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

CLEAN AND UNCLEAN.
(Lev. xi, 47; Ezek. xxii, 26.)

The personally clean may be morally unclean; but the morally clean can not remain dirty in person. Cleanliness is next to godliness. The ancient Romans were heathen; but their numerous baths recommend them to our favor. We see

1. That the morally dirty may be clean, and the clean dirty.

(1) The returning Prodigal Son was restored to favor. The Publican found justification.

(2) An artist was charged to paint ideal purity. He painted a lad, the embodiment of beauty. Subsequently he received an order to paint a representation of vice. He visited a prison. There he found a man whose debauched mien expressed what he sought. His portrait filled the canvass. Inquiry revealed that this man and the beautiful lad were identical. The clean had become dirty.

2. Only the blood of Christ can make the morally dirty clean.

(1) Reformation is good; but it can not remove the guilty past.

(2) Church life is commendable, but it is only the means to an end. Not the end itself.

(3) The blood of Christ cleanseth from all sin. This blood can make the foulest clean. This blood cleanses as the water of Jordan cleansed Naaman of leprosy. Cures, as looking to the brazen serpent cured the dying Israelites. Heals, as the troubled water of Bethesda healed those precipitating themselves into the liquid deep.

3. To keep clean requires persistent effort. We are made clean without our aid. But to be kept clean strenuous individual effort is necessary.

(1) Having been washed in the blood of Christ does not bestow capital which enables to live off interest.

(2) No matter how clean a house may be, if not daily water and soap, brush and broom are employed, spiders, moths, roaches and mice will soon secure homestead at such place.

(3) Only diligent employment of the various means of grace can keep the clean heart clean. Watch and pray.

4. Heart purity secures happiness here and hereafter.

(1) "Blessed are." Present tense. Goodness and happiness are inseparable.

(2) The pure in heart shall see God. Face to face. Live in his presence forever.

Peculiar, But True.

Standing is not comfortable or healthy for ladies, and yet many are compelled to stand for hours at a time. It brings on Uterine Ailment. CREOLE FEMALE TONIC is a splendid remedy for that large class of diseases peculiar to ladies.

The Savior's Footsteps.

The attention of our readers is earnestly directed to the new series of Holy Land Art Portfolios which we are now offering. From the plan and scope of the work, as well as from its accuracy, beauty and utility, it is sure to find a permanent place wherever the beautiful life of the Savior is studied and loved. The work is aptly entitled "Earthly Footsteps of the Man of Galilee," since from his birth to his ascension every incident of his beautiful life is piously, yet vividly told by two distinguished religious writers—Bishop Vincent and Dr. Lee. The former has made two distinct tours of Palestine and the East, while the latter only last year, accompanied by a celebrated photographer, Mr. R. E. M. Bain, again retraced the footsteps of the Savior, and the three have now recorded in narrative and picture all the principal events and scenes in his life and the lives of his apostles. The work thus becomes most valuable for personal possession and study, and is certain to be so considered by every person who secures it.

It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. TILL DEATH US PART.

BY DEAN STANLEY.

[Written after the death of Lady Augusta Stanley.]

"Till death us part,"
So speaks the heart
When each in each repeats the words of doom;
Thro' blessing and thro' curse,
For better and for worse,
We will be one, till that dread hour shall come.

Life, with its myriad grasp,
Our yearning souls shall clasp,
By ceaseless love, and still-expectant wonder;
In bonds that shall endure,
Indissolubly sure,
Till God in death shall part our paths asunder.

Till death us join.
O voice yet more divine!
That to the broken heart breathes hope sublime,
Through lonely hours,
And shattered powers,
We still are one despite of change and time.

Death, with his healing hand,
Shall once more knit the band,
Which needs but that one link which none may sever.
Till through the Only Good,
Heard, felt, and understood,
Our life in God shall make us one forever.

Hygiene for Advancing Years.

BY RACHEL B. GLEASON.

I seem, even now, to see that sunny front corner room, on the first floor, with its bright blazing fire, brass andirons and white marble hearth, in which my grandmother sat in her easy chair, her hair dressed in the Martha Washington style, wearing a white cap with full border. I still hear the click of her knitting needles, and see the warm sock growing under her busy fingers. She was interested in all that pertained to our large family and farm life, and I used to wonder why she would so frequently slip away from us all to her own quiet sunny corner.

I could not understand it then, I do now. Human experience repeats itself as generations pass onward. "When the almond tree begins to flourish, and the grasshopper is a burden," than little things worry us when we are weary, and we "become tired sooner than we used to." We can not endure or enjoy things as long as we once did. We need more frequent periods of rest. We all recognize this fact in reference to the aged, but are slow to realize that we belong to that class. We know that we are growing old, but don't know when we get there, and our friends don't want to remind us of the fact, and so we remain unconscious of it till some day the conductor of the crowded car says, "Move on and give this old lady a seat." Surprised at the appellation, we say to ourselves, "Can he mean me?"

Nature is gentle in her changes, and the failure of our earthly tabernacle comes on so slowly that we scarce realize that the wear of years is telling on us, and we need to "favor ourselves." Those who wish to attain "threescore years and ten" comfortably, should lessen their labor before they reach twoscore and ten. We may do good work; probably our best by head or hand, long after that period, but we ought not to work so hard or so long. The recuperative force of the system is lessening and we need more time for rest, as overwork, whether manual or mental, is more likely to be serious.

When we are ripened by age and experience and are ready to do our best, we must lighten our load or supplement our strength by that of others.

The successful man of business too often adds farm to farm, mill to mill, store to store, and when a "little past his prime" leaves his vast estate to inexperienced hands; if he had taken more rest he might have lived to guide those needing his wisdom to manage well what he had accumulated. Faithful wives, fond mothers, fine housekeepers too frequently hold on to all their work too long, and die early, or break in health permanently. By an earlier division of labors and cares with their growing daughters, and taking to themselves more leisure, their last quarter of a century might have been useful and comfortable.

I was speaking to a lady of seventy, a few days ago, of her good health and good cheer, and she replied, "While I have always led a very active life, I have taken rest from two to four P. M. every day since the age of forty-five, which I think has enabled me to hold out so long and well."

Physicians find it more difficult than any other class to order their lives in accordance with their needs, after years begin to diminish their physical vigor. Old doctors, if they are good ones, are in great demand, and their patients are unwilling to accept a substitute.

I remember my father used to say that people were quite ready to trust their souls to the guidance of a young minister, but they preferred a man of age and experience to care for their bodies. But despite the imperiousness of invalids, and the overanxiety of friends, the good old family doctor should step aside and give the younger physicians a chance to try their skill, while he rests and reserves his best energies for counsel and important aid in emergencies, and thus serve longer his profession as well as his patients.

With advancing years there is less power to resist the effects of cold, and a greater liability to congestion of internal organs, which may prove serious. Every Winter, we note, many persons past fifty die of pneumonia. Many more are left with chronic troubles, the result of imperfect superficial circulation during cold weather. The heavy woolen underwear needed for Winter should be supplemented Spring and Fall by those of lighter grade.

In place of needed rest many who have hitherto been temperate when they feel their natural force abating, take to stimulants. Men of correct habits at forty sometimes become inebriates before sixty. Women occasionally do the same, but more often use tea and coffee to excess, become nervous and wakeful, and then resort to some of the various preparations of morphine to induce sleep. Others take too little food as well as too little rest, relying upon tonics, yet in spite of them become irritable and wonder why they are not well and happy as they once were.

The infirmities incident to advancing years are retarded in their progress more surely by such changes in diet as the symptoms require, by baths, by freedom from excitement, by moderate exercise in the open air, than by much medication.

With less nervous power, slower digestion, we need more of lean meat, oysters, eggs, soups, beef tea, and less of vegetables, puddings and pastry. The inactivity of the skin or liver, the congestion of mucous surfaces may be relieved by baths, warm fomentation which are better for those whose vigor of system is failing, than more active remedies.

More than all, the aged need a contented spirit, a cheerful acceptance of the fact that this body must fail us, and best of all, a good hope that there is for us a new, and better body, which will never know weariness or pain.

By cultivating this frame of mind, undue prominence will not be given to physical infirmities, which only having a depressing influence on the family circle.

Years dim the eye, dull the ear, lessen the power to apprehend; but it is not wise to speak of limitations save when necessary, for repetitions of this sort soon weary others.

Supersensitive nerves added to an imperious nature often place undue restraint upon children, and thus debar them from healthful amusement.

A little boy once said he did not want to go to heaven. When his mother asked why, he replied, "Because Grandpa has gone there and he will be cross and say, 'Whew! whew! what are all these boys here for?'"

In contrast, a little girl inquired if her grandfather was in the Winter of life. When answered in the affirmative, she said, "Well, he is like some Winter days when the sun shines bright on the clear white snow, but he is not like a cold, blustering Winter day."

Advice may be given to younger members of the family, but we should not frown upon their tastes or plans. Every generation has its wishes and ways, which may be better, may be worse than those of the past, but if those in middle life be not allowed to try their experiment, they feel defrauded.

We do not like to think of anyone as having outlived her usefulness, but it does seem as if the only service of some was for the discipline of those who live with them. Those having care of such need to heed the injunction of the apostle when he said, "Comfort the feeble-minded, support the weak, be patient toward all." Many seem to come to dependence prematurely by turning aside from active service too early. Because they can not do as they once did they conclude to give up and be taken care of. To maintain a healthful condition of mind and body, some industry in which the individual is interested is important.

To find this for the aged and infirm is more difficult in those families who keep a variety of helpers than in the early New England homes where there was always light labor for both old and young.

When there are no simple duties then there is more need that diversion be planned for them as far as possible. Let those in middle life share, as far as may be, their plans, their interests, their reading, the neighborhood news, etc., that they may not feel that they belong so far in the past generation as to have no part in the present one.

When thus left to themselves they dwell too much on their sorrows and infirmities and become a cold Winter cloud instead of warm Winter sunshine.

Many a young wife has come to me depressed in spirit, broken in health because of the shadow over her home caused by the mother-in-law, and, I am sorry to say, sometimes by her own mother. The sad story runs like this:

Grandma thinks we are to blame, she is unhappy, complains of the children, criticises the young folks. If we have company she is disturbed, and hence we have no cheerful home life.

When the aged do their best not to be burdensome, they must necessarily still be some tax on those about them.

To raise the voice and repeat for the dull ears, to see for the dim eyes, to elaborate for the tardy apprehension, to steady the uncertain steps, becomes often a great burden for those in the full strength of middle life. To these we must add the failure of memory which is usually the most embarrassing to both parties. But if the quality of spirit be good, the way is made comparatively easy.

John Quincy Adams, when advanced in years, said, in speaking of the journey of life, he wished he could sleep in the carriage the rest of the way. Many another has felt the same, but the good Father knows when the life lesson is complete for all concerned.

Let us cultivate the habit of looking during the sunset of life, in hope of a better morning. Paul said, "I keep my body under," which a little boy in Sunday-school said meant to keep the soul on top. The weight of years is greatly lessened by keeping the soul on top.

The Hasty Word.

To think before you speak is so wise an axiom that one would hardly think it needful to emphasize it by repetition. And yet in how many cases the hasty temper flashes out in the hasty word, and the latter does its work with the precision and the pain of the swift stiletto! Singularly enough, the hasty word oftenest wounds those who love one another dearly, and the very closeness of their intimacy affords them opportunity for the sudden thrust. We know the weak points in the armors of our kinsman and our friend; we are aware of his caprices, and ordinarily are tender and compassionate, even of his vanities and his small fancies and whims; but there dawns a day when it is written in the book of fate that we shall be as cruel as we are loving. We are cold, or tired, or hungry. We are anxious over unpaid bills, or our expected letters have not arrived, or one of the children is ailing, and we dread the outcome of the malady. So politeness fails us, fortitude is vanquished, philosophy is in abeyance, and we say that which we repent in sackcloth and ashes. But though the hasty word may be forgiven, it is not at once forgotten. It has flawed the crystal of our friendship; the place may be cemented, but there is a shadowy scar on the gleaming surface. Oh, if the word of haste had but been left unspoken; if the strong hand of patience had but held back the sword as it was about to strike.

Hygiene.

"Dead Tired."

Are you a busy, worried woman, who comes home at night with temples throbbing, and every muscle aching from fatigue? "I am dead tired, and I haven't the ambition to dress or even comb my hair for the evening." Then you lounge about and go to bed about nine o'clock with your head still aching, and your limbs just as tired as when you came in. The next time you feel that way, just slip off the waist of your gown, brush your hair up on the top of your head, and bathe the back of your neck with hot water. When the pain is a little relieved, wash your face with the same reviver, and by the time that is done, you will feel like brushing your hair and fixing up a bit, or we are very much mistaken. The hot-water cure is quite as efficacious taken externally as internally.

Brain-workers require the most concentrated and easily-digested foods; they should eat fresh beef and mutton, fish, eggs—cooked in many forms, but never hard-boiled nor fried—oysters, and all fresh, green vegetables, especially cool crisp salads, lettuce, chicory, tomatoes, watercress, etc.—with mayonnaise, or French dressing. They should begin the day with fruit, and make it form the principal part of luncheon; and be very sparing in their use of cereals, eschewing entirely white bread and oatmeal. Their ideal luncheon, which must be light if they continue work in the afternoon, is a glass of milk or a cup of hot chocolate—or, better still, a glass of fresh buttermilk—with two or three Graham wafers or a bit of toast and some fruit, an apple, figs, or an orange.—Demorest Magazine.

A person may need nine hours' sleep out of the twenty-four. Indeed, he is a wise man if, feeling that he requires them, he is sensible enough to take them. Goethe, when performing his great literary feats, took nine hours' sleep. A full-grown adult, in a healthy condition, will seldom require more than eight. If, however, he discovers that he is not sufficiently refreshed by eight hours, he should take more. It is a pretty safe rule to sleep as long as you are sleepy. "There are people," says a writer, "who are wise enough to eat when they are hungry, but who have never attained that higher reach of wisdom to sleep when they are sleepy."

Healthfulness of Fruit.

About the holidays almost everybody eats more than is best. When the food is meat, rich pastry and cake, unless something acid is taking with it, indigestion is apt to be the result. There is no acid better than that of our northern fruits to keep the digestive organs in good condition. Plenty of apples, Winter pears and grapes, with out-of-door work, and pure air, will do away with the horrors of dyspepsia and enable the stomach to digest whatever is given it.

Cinnamon Drink for Fever Patients.

Cinnamon tea is recommended by a Southern physician as a valuable drink in fever affected districts. It possesses an especial virtue against typhoid fever; and essence of cinnamon is said to be one of the best of disinfectants to use in the sick-room of a typhoid patient.

The Cuisine.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

CARAMEL PUDDING.—Into a pint of boiling water stir a teaspoonful of cornstarch moistened with cold water; add a tablespoonful of sugar and a pinch of salt. Let it boil for five minutes, then remove from the stove, and when cool stir in the beaten yolks of six eggs. To make the caramel, cook in a saucepan a cup of granulated sugar and a half a cup of water until the mixture is the color of molasses, than make a syrup of it by adding a fourth of a cup of hot water. Put this caramel or syrup in a pudding dish, roll the dish about until it is completely coated on the inside, then add the cornstarch mixture, and bake in a moderate oven until stiff in the center and creamy in appearance. Let cool, and serve with the caramel in the pudding dish.—Exchange.

MRS. MARTHA JANE PRINGLE, of Jackson Co., W. Va., writes: "Having been a great sufferer for many years with nearly every disease my sex is heir to, I can now say I am well and have done more work in the past year and with more ease than I have done in twelve years.

Before consulting Dr. Pierce I was the most wretched among women, scarcely able to walk or sit up, confined to bed, and now I weigh my good health is due to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets.' I gained twelve pounds while using the first bottle of 'Prescription.'

MCDOUGALL—Mrs. A. E. MCDOUGALL died at her home in Port Gibson, Miss., Saturday, March 2, 1895. She was nearly seventy-three years old, having been born July 11, 1822. In compliance with her request, she was buried from her home without the usual funeral sermon. She was ready for the summons, and those who mourn her departure look forward to a glad reunion in the better world. H. M. ELLIS, ELLIS—BARTON HEFFNER, infant son of T. Q. and K. L. Ellis, was born June 17, 1894; died Feb 2, 1895.

Little Barton was a bright, promising child, the treasure of a mother's heart and the object of the family's affection; but God has taken him to himself. He now lives in a world of immortal joys, where death shall be no more. He awaits the coming of those who loved him here to love him there forever.

R M DAVIS.

ROBERTS—Bro R. M. ROBERTS was born in Amite county, Miss., Sept. 8, 1812; died at his residence in the same county, Sept 21, 1891.

Bro. Roberts gave his heart and service to God in early life. For more than half a century he was a living epistle of the religion he professed. He served the church as steward and class leader for many years, and was faithful in every trust confided to him. He was a true and tried friend of the minister of God, and until within a few years of his death contributed liberally to every cause of the church. The last few years of his life, in old age extreme and adverse circumstances, it grieved him much because he could not contribute to the cause of his Master, which was ever dear to his heart. He was singularly gifted in prayer. Often when wrestling in prayer for the unconverted the very doors of heaven seemed to open and pour down the blessing. He was faithful in all the varied duties of life, as a citizen, father, husband and neighbor; but, above all, was he faithful as a Christian. When the summons came he was ready and waiting to hear the Master say: "It is enough; come up higher. Well done, good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." We can only say: Good-night, brother; we will meet you in the kingdom. G. D. ANDERS.

Resolutions adopted by the fourth Quarterly Conference of East Feliciana circuit, Woodville district, Mississippi Conference, Nov. 24, 1894.

Whereas, The great Head of the church has seen fit to remove by death from our midst our much-loved brother, R. M. Roberts, long an honored member of this official Board; therefore, be it Resolved, By this Quarterly Conference, that by the death of Bro. Roberts this Board has lost one of its most faithful and useful members.

Resolved, That while our hearts have been made sad from the fact that we shall see him no more in the flesh, neither grasp his hand in friendship, nor hear his kindly voice, yet we are consoled by the thought that if we are faithful to our trust, we will meet him in the Beautiful City.

Resolved, That we, as the official Board of Stewards of East Feliciana circuit, extend our warmest Christian sympathies to his aged companion and his children, and point them to that God whom he served so long, and who was his comfort and stay in his dying hour.

G. D. ANDERS, for Com.

STAFFORD—At a called meeting of the W. M. S. of Vossburg, Miss., M. E. Church, South, held Feb 2, the following resolutions were read and adopted:

Whereas, In his wisdom and mercy our heavenly Father has been pleased to remove from our midst our beloved sister, Mrs. E. W. STAFFORD; And, whereas, In the death of Sister Stafford our society has lost one of its most faithful and efficient co-workers, and our church a consecrated and loyal member; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we will tenderly cherish the memory of our departed sister, and strive to emulate in our own lives the many Christian virtues that adorned her life and character, especially the patient, trusting spirit that sustained her through months of suffering.

Resolved, That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family in the loss of so true and loving a wife and mother.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the family of the deceased and spread upon the minutes of our society, also sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and the W. M. Advocate for publication.

JESSIE HAMBLEN, for Com.

We, the undersigned, do testify that we have used Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar for years, for all throat and lung troubles, with the greatest benefit. For coughs and colds it never fails. When taken according to directions, it cures our children of croup and whooping-cough, and for serious lung troubles it always gives relief.

SELLING THAT NEW AND WONDERFUL BOOK,

"Touching Incidents and Remarkable Answers to Prayer."

Very few people can read this book without weeping. Christians of all denominations recommend it in the highest terms, and the unsaved read it with delight. Bishops, Editors, Pastors and Ministers of all denominations can not say enough in its favor. Many pastors are securing this book and circulating it among their people, and the people are anxious to buy. Clergymen find the sale of it a great help to their support.

The incidents are not only touching, but touch hearts for good. They are impressive, apt and condensed. The Answers to Prayers are among the most remarkable and authentic that can be found.

Many of them were written expressly for this work. Others were gleaned from widely extended sources. Among them may be found choicest selections from

Read a few of the good things said of it:

Western Christian Advocate: "It is simply wonderful. No one can read the book without having his faith in prayer greatly strengthened."

Union Signal (Organ W. C. T. U): "Its high religious tone, its fascinating spirit, and the high rank of its contributors, make it a strong faith tonic and an inspiration to prevailing prayer."

B. Fay Mills: "A wonderful book, an excellent book."

Central Congregationalist: "Many of the incidents are exceedingly pathetic, and can scarcely fail to stir any tender heart to tears. It is a rich mine of illustrations for a preacher, and deserves to be in every minister's library, while no Christian heart can fail to be deeply interested and profoundly stimulated by it toward faith in God."

Methodist Recorder: "It is a well bound book, full of incidents and illustrations for public speakers, and will encourage every reader to greater faith and more earnest prayer."

Christian Herald, edited by T. DeWitt Talmage: "Mr. S. B. Shaw has done a wise thing in making a compilation of Notable Answers to Prayer. Such incidents encourage the desponding Christian and are useful to Christian workers in leading their hearers to pray for themselves."

Christian Arbitrator: "Some of the incidents are very touching; we could only read them with tear-dimmed eyes."

OFFER IT AS A PREMIUM.

The publisher's retail price of this elegant book is $4.50; and it is cheap at that. Many Bibles no better than this are sold at a price ranging from one to two dollars higher. We will send it postpaid to any address on receipt of price. We will do a great deal better than this for our subscribers. We will send it postpaid to any new subscriber (we mean one who subscribes after this date) for $2. Old subscribers can have it at the same rate, provided they will pay up to June, '96, and provided they have not had the benefit of any previous offer. Those who have had the benefit of other offers can avail themselves of this also by paying up to December, '96. Better still, any subscriber who will pay his own subscription to June, '96, can secure it free by sending us four new subscriptions at the regular rate, $2. Moreover, we will give to each new subscriber thus secured a copy of any one of the fifteen poets, or a copy of any book in the Handy Volume series. If you can not secure four new subscribers, get one or two, and we will allow fifty cents on each.

Better still: For the benefit of those who desire a genuine Oxford Bible at a still lower rate we have made arrangements with one of the leading Bible publishers in America whereby we can offer a beautiful Oxford Bible, four by five and a half inches, pearl type, French Seal, divinity circuit, round corners, as a premium for only two new subscribers. In order to get the benefit of this offer one must be himself a subscriber and must have paid his subscription to June, '96. We will send this Book, postpaid, to any address on receipt of $1.62.

We make no promise as to how long this offer will last. Therefore, don't delay.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The movement to establish a zoological garden in New Orleans is progressing.

St. Patrick's Day, March 17, was celebrated in this city by a parade of the Irishmen.

A destructive fire occurred in Greenville, Miss., on March 16 The chief loss was confined to three large buildings and contents on Walnut St. Loss, $50,000.

All has been quiet on the wharves of this city since last Tuesday, the twelfth. The militia are stationed on the levee daily, and, with the police, protect all who are willing to work. No step has as yet been made toward a settlement of the troubles. Stevedores and screwmen both claim there is nothing to arbitrate.

The round-house of the Wabash Railroad Company in Toledo, Ohio, burned to the ground on March 17 Three-quarters of an hour after the fire started the wall fell in, burying twelve men underneath it Two men were instantly killed; a third died a short time after being taken out of the debris, and the others were all badly hurt, one probably fatally.

The sugar planters of this State, and others interested in the sugar trade, have determined to erect at this point a new sugar refinery, to be run in opposition to the Sugar Trust. It is expected to invest a full million dollars in the enterprise, and the new establishment will probably be located on the Algiers side of the river, midway between that suburb and Gretna.

There was a meeting of the members of the Board of Trustees, managers, and others interested in the building enterprise of the Young Men's Christian Association at the Tenton ia Savings Bank on March 16 The meeting was presided over by Mr. E P. Mackie, president of the Board of Managers. Eighteen thousand dollars are needed to complete the fund.

The Shiloh Battle Field Association and the survivors of the battle will hold their second annual reunion on the battle field at Pittsburg Landing, Tenn., April 5 and 6, prox. Men who fought under Grant and Buell in the Army of Ohio, and the Army of the Tennessee, on one side, and the veterans who fought under Beauregard and A. S. Johnston on the other side, will this year celebrate the thirty-third anniversary of the battle.

The revision of the German-American extradition treaty is now under way. The terms of the existing treaty in some respects are not satisfactory to either government. It is the question of the cost involved in extradition proceedings which is the main objection on the American side, since the great majority of the extradition proceedings occur in America, in the proportion of 100 to 1, so that the American government, with each side defraying the expenses of the proceedings within its respective sphere, bears more than its proper share.

FOREIGN.

The Spanish Cabinet resigned in a body on March 17.

The great lockout of bootmakers in London, affecting 200,000 operatives, commenced March 16.

There is no decrease in the spread of the epidemic of influenza in Germany. There have been 720 deaths in Berlin alone.

The late Prof. John Stuart Blackie has left $20,000 for the purpose of founding a modern Greek library in Edinburgh University.

Influenza still lingers in London, although the weather is mild, and the death rate has touched 41 2 per 1,000, one of the highest points ever known in the city, where the average death rate is 21 per 1,000.

The British government has submitted an ultimatum to Nicaragua. It demands a cash indemnity of £15 000 to pay for the expulsion of M. Hatch, British consular agent at Bluefields, during the troubles there last year.

The exportation of sugar from the port of Havana of this year's crop up to Feb. 28 was 122,826 sacks of 310 pounds each, against 296 228 sacks for the same time in 1894. The stock in warehouses on March 11 was 477,202 bags.

The mutiny of the cadets of the Military School in Rio de Janeiro has been suppressed by the troops, and cadets to the number of 800 have been expelled. The mutiny was caused by political intrigues against President Moraes and the government of Brazil.

With Marti and Gomez and Collazo in the East, with the insurrectionists already in possession of the Vuelta Abeja district of Cuba, Spain is confronted by a turbulence which she knows must result in the death of many faithful subjects and the loss of a large treasure.

For Wakefulness
Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. A. D. McDONALD, Wilmington, N. C., says: "I find eight drops taken in water, on going to bed, will rest the brain and cause a quiet sleep."

An explosion of fire damp has taken place in the Hohenegge mine, belonging to the estate of the late Archduke Albrecht of Austria. At the time of the explosion there were 280 miners below. Of this number eighty have been rescued slightly injured. Hopes are expressed that the remaining 200 miners will be rescued.

There is no excuse for any man to appear in society with a grizzly beard since the introduction of Buckingham's Dye, which colors natural brown or black.

Notice.

I have entered upon my work as colporter. The patronage of the preachers, members and friends of our church within our bounds is earnestly solicited. As the times are hard, and money is scarce, I shall not be able to keep a large stock of books on hand. Books ordered not in stock I can have sent directly from the publishers to your address without being shipped to this point, and then having to reship them. Our Publishing House, and others from which purchases must be made, are conducted on a cash basis, and in dealing with them I shall be compelled to conform to their established rules. As I am not prepared to do a credit business, all orders should be accompanied with the money. To succeed I must begin and carry on the colportage business on a safe basis. Pay as you order, and ask no credit; then the agent will not suffer or be compelled to suspend business. I think the Board which recommended me for the appointment will approve of what I have here written.

What to do with Milk Pails!

Clean them with Pearline. You can't get them so thoroughly sweet and pure in any other way. Besides, it's easier for you—quicker, more economical.

"The box and barrel churn are not hard to keep clean. A little hot water and a little Pearline will clean any churn or do away with any bad odor."—The Dairy World, Chicago.

Perhaps you think that some of the imitations of Pearline, that you'd be afraid to use in washing clothes, would do just as well in work like this. They wouldn't hurt tinware, certainly. But they wouldn't clean it, either, half as well as Pearline—besides, "don't play with the fire." If your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. 400 JAMES PYLE, New York.

Cure with One Bottle.

Mr. Jordon Baker, Tifton, Ga., had muscular rheumatism for ten years. After using a bottle of Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism, he wrote to the manufacturers that he was satisfied he would be cured by the time the bottle would be used up. If you want satisfaction, insist on having Drummond's Lightning Remedy. Nothing can take its place. Send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and two large bottles of the remedy will be sent to your express address. Agents wanted.

"Earthly Footsteps of the Man of Galilee."

A new work of Bishop Vincent, and Dr. J. W. Lee (of St. Louis). A great publishing company is just bringing to light the fruit of much toil and outlay of money. They sent an artist photographer, under the guidance of Dr. Lee, to the Holy Land, there to secure the most exact and perfect pictures of the salient scenes of the earthly life of Christ and the Apostles. We have examined a portion of the work and unhesitatingly pronounce it by far the best thing of its kind ever seen by us. The method of photographic reproduction employed is faultless.

The forthcoming book will contain some four or five hundred of these splendid pictures, 8x10 inches in size. The work will be issued in twenty-four parts, pages 11¼x13¼ inches, with chronological charts and colored maps. Each part will contain sixteen pictures, besides the enchanting pen pictures of these renowned writers. The series will run through twenty-four weeks, one a week, at a regular price of 25 cents each. But the ADVOCATE has made a special arrangement by which it will furnish all its subscribers, new and old, for 10 cents a number. Less than half, but very little more than a third of what you will have to pay if your name is not on our subscription roll. The entire series in this way will cost only $2 40; otherwise it will cost $6. This rule of the publishers of this book is the strictest that only to our subscribers can we make this special offer. For $2 40 you may get what another must pay $6 for if you are a subscriber to the ADVOCATE. Send $2.40, and each of the series will be mailed you as fast as issued. Or ten cents (stamps taken) for one issue—any way you prefer.

OUR DAILY RECKONING.

If you sit down at set of sun
And count the acts that you have done,
And, counting, find
One self-denying act, one word
That eased the heart of him who heard,
One glance most kind,
That fell like sunshine where it went,
Then you may count that hour well spent.

But if, through all the livelong day,
You've cheered no heart by yea or nay;
If, through it all,
You've nothing done, that you can trace,
That brought the sunshine to one face;
No act most small,
That helped some soul, and nothing cost,
Then count that day as worse than lost.

Out at the Toes.

Just preceding the late war, Marshall, the noted Kentucky orator, in a ringing speech, said: "Warm feet—the gulf-washed South; cool head—the lake-washed North; sure sign of health: there will be no war." His diagnosis was, unfortunately, incorrect. The trouble is now, as then: feet are out at toes and can't keep warm.

The gulf coast still represents the feet of the South and of Mississippi Methodism. How do you expect us to be healthy when our feet are cold? How can we keep the feet warm when they are out at toes? The gulf coast Methodists are almost worshiping out of doors. At Bay St. Louis—beautiful Bay St. Louis—we worship in a little rough board church, with old-fashioned green board blinds—a church which one brother declared to me would be a disgrace ten miles from the railroad, whence he came. Such is the building into which we invite the crowds of Northern tourists and Southern visitors. One of the editors of the New York Independent, now wintering here, had the building pointed out to him as Southern Methodism's representative in this cosmopolitan town.

At Pass Christian—a noted Winter resort—we have two beautiful lots, magnificently located in the heart of the town, and not the sign of a church building on either. The Northern Methodist tourists have expressed themselves as utterly unable to account for such negligence upon the part of Southern Methodism.

At Mississippi City—one of the oldest gulf coast towns—we have neither lots nor church-building, and no preaching at all by Methodists.

At Biloxi we have a large brick building, purchased at second hand, which has been fitted with a beautiful auditorium, and with an expenditure of $1,000 or $1,500, could be rendered a lovely structure.

At Scranton the only creditable church-building we ever had on the immediate gulf front was destroyed by October's storm of two years ago, and still lies a huge pile of ruins.

Our church at Long Beach is now undergoing enlargement through the generosity of that prince of Methodism, Bro. Henry Ware.

Thus you have a description of the meagre Methodist Churches of the gulf coast. Mississippi Methodism is like a woman in finest apparel, with her toes sticking through her shoes.

What are our needs along the coast? Churches! Commodious, comfortable, attractive churches! How are we going to get them? Well, the Church Extension Board is helping as liberally as a small assessment and smaller receipts will allow.

1. We need, and must have, every cent of this year's assessment for church extension. The ground we are using is missionary ground, and the church extension work is missionary work.

Let not a church fall in its assessment.

2. When the pastors on the gulf coast appeal for aid to build, do not turn a deaf ear to their cry. The Board must be supplemented in its work by liberal private contributions. That gem of a church at East End, Meridian, was aided by the Board of Church Extension; but if this had not been augmented by liberal contributions from members of the Central Church, the then small, struggling congregation at East End could never have succeeded in obtaining so beautiful a structure. The struggling congregations of the gulf coast, in building their churches, must have large help from wealthy, well-to-do, up-State Methodists.

3. I would suggest to the Methodists along the coast to organize a Gulf Coast Church Extension Society, according to the plan of local city Boards, as presented by the General Board of Church Extension.

Let Moss Point, Scranton, Ocean Springs, Biloxi, Mississippi City, Long Beach, Pass Christian and Bay St. Louis be thus bound together, so that the entire force and financial strength can be concentrated at the neediest points, and our Methodism in this section will receive an impetus that will rush us to final victory.

When Dr. J. H. Keller, formerly Presbyterian pastor at Meridian, Miss., closed a good speech, he invariably came at the people with the question, "What are you going to do about it?" I would ring that question at you until I get an answer: "What are you going to do about it?" Better churches on the gulf coast we must have.

NOLAN B. HARMON.

Rev John Samuel Hodges.

Rev. John Samuel Hodges was born in East Feliciana parish, Oct. 28, 1869, and died at Cary, Miss., Dec. 14, 1894. He joined the church under the ministry of Rev. P. A. Johnston in the Summer of 1887. He was powerfully converted the following year, and from conversion till the day of death he lost no time in the service of his Savior. Soon after his conversion he felt a call to preach, though, from fear of making a mistake, he compromised by getting licensed to exhort; and, although he magnified this office, it did not satisfy the demands of conscience; so, in the Fall of 1890, he was licensed to preach at Olive Branch by Rev. C. McDonald. He remained in the local ranks for two years, and was a model local preacher. It was always a delight to him to minister to the wants of his pastor. He was a liberal Christian, always paying more than one-tenth of his income. The year after his conversion he paid his preacher twenty-five dollars for his support, and five dollars for the missionary cause. As a steward, the same year he collected forty dollars in excess of the assessment.

He joined the Mississippi Conference at Natchez, Miss., December, 1892, and was appointed to Bayou Sara mission, and was very successful in winning souls and in building up the church. During his stay on this work he made many friends, and they were anxious for his return.

In December, 1893, he was appointed to Cary, Miss., where he labored hard until the change from a life of toil and suffering to that "house of many mansions." He wrote to me several times while in Cary, Miss., and always spoke in the highest terms of presiding elder and people of his charge. He was very successful at this appointment.

Bro. Hodges possessed a fine mind, and was rapidly developing into a fine preacher. He was a very lovable character, carrying sunshine wherever he went. I never saw him gloomy. During the four years of his ministry he was eminently successful in winning souls to Christ, and in the morning of the resurrection many will rise up and call him blessed. He died with typhoid-malarial fever, and during the long time that he suffered his kind physician said that not a word of complaint escaped his lips. He was delirious for several hours before he died; but, as death came near, he seemed to regain consciousness and the power of speech, and exclaimed, "I am all right."

His father said to him, "Did you say, 'All right?'"

"Yes, all right."

Again his father said, "Son, you will soon be on the other side of the river with Jesus."

"Yes, yes."

His father then said, "Papa will meet you there."

"All right."

When he was told that mother and sister said if they did not meet him on earth again, that they would meet him in heaven, he joyfully exclaimed, "All right."

His last words were, "I am happy," and as he spoke the precious words, there came over his face a beautiful smile, indicating that he was safe in the arms of Jesus.

Dear, sorrowing ones, when the loss seems too heavy to bear, think of his dying words, and take courage and thank God

"That Jesus made his dying bed
As soft as downy pillows are."

"But," you say, "we can't give him up."

No, you need not, for, saved as he is, he is yours forever.

"But," you say, "how about the vacant chair?"

When you behold the vacant chair, let it remind you that "your dear boy" sits under the "Sun of Life," or at the "beautiful gate," there "waiting and watching for you."

Dear Sam, we will never cease to miss you; but, thank God! we know where to find you, for you were not stolen away, neither did you steal away, but left in the presence of papa and friends, with the blessed assurance of a glorious meeting "in the sweet by-and-by." We can never forget your prayers; neither can we forget your sermons, and how devotedly you loved your church, and will always praise God for your beautiful life. May the God of all grace bless and sanctify this death to the spiritual good of father, mother, brothers, and sisters!

The Cost of Education.

This is a question about which a great number of people are thinking. Cheap education is what everybody desires. What people mean by cheap education is that which costs the least in money. That education does cost money is apparent to all. There is one side of this question to which I wish to call attention, because it is rarely considered.

Parents and guardians are constantly thinking about what it costs them to educate their children; but the fewest number of people ever think about what it costs the school to educate the same children. Tuition fees are supposed by a great many to pay the expenses of the school; but they are now so low that they go a very little way in doing that. In no school that we know of do the tuition fees pay current expenses. All money expended for current expenses above the receipts from tuition must be charged to the cost of education. But this is a part of the cost which the parents and guardians do not pay. It is paid by the school itself. In the fact that education costs the school more than it does the patrons of the school is the ground and reason for endowment funds. This fact shows conclusively that no school can give a liberal education without having some fund upon which to draw to make up deficiencies which arise from low tuition. A concrete case will bring out the point more clearly. Take Centenary College for the session, 1893-1894. According to the catalogue there were seventy-four students matriculated. The treasurer's report to the Board of Trustees, last June, showed the expenses to have been $6 723.36. This made the cost of education for each student about $90; that is, the college paid out $90 for the education of each student during that session. Now, how much of this $90 was returned to the college in tuition fees? Turning to the treasurer's report, we find that just $18 per student was paid in. Now, the difference between $90 and $18 is just $72. The college then paid $72 for each student, while the patrons paid $18. In plain words, the education of the students for the session, 1893-1894, in Centenary College cost the college four times as much as it did the parents. So the cost of education falls more heavily upon the school than it does on the patrons. This is the main reason for endowment. Under such a condition how can a school live and do its work without endowment? The thing is impossible. And so every Methodist in Louisiana should contribute to the endowment fund of his college, that the good work of Christian education may go forward without interruption.

C. W. CARTER.

Rev. Albert M. Wailes, A. M.

[This more extended notice of the life, labors and death of Bro. Wailes could not be prepared in time for the Minutes of the Conference on account of my inability to obtain the necessary information. The publication, therefore, at this late date will be accepted and appreciated by the many friends of our deceased brother.]

Bro. Wailes was born in Adams county, Miss., April 26, 1840. He was a son of Edward H. Wailes and Olivia M. E. King. He was converted and joined the church while in college, some time during his matriculation at Centenary, between 1850 and 1854, where he was educated, and from which institution he received his diploma in 1854.

Soon after his graduation he entered the Medical College in New Orleans, but failing strength and conviction that his duty lay in another direction, he abandoned the Medical College after one session spent there.

He was licensed to preach in 1872, and probably joined the Conference at the close of that year, as in 1872, '73 and '74 he preached at Vidalia. His first sermon was preached from John vi, 27. Beside preaching at Vidalia, he preached at Winsboro, Tensas Chapel, Black River, Trenton, and Atlanta.

Gradually his strength failed him, and in 1884 he asked for and obtained a supernumerary relation, which he maintained to the time of his death, keeping himself all the time in the work of teaching and preaching when strength permitted.

Sister Wailes died some sixteen years before Bro. Wailes died, leaving him to the difficult task of being both father and mother to six small children. Of his fidelity in the discharge of these complex duties, his daughter, Miss Mollie Wailes, writes: "In our sickness it was papa's gentle hand, with all the sympathetic touch of a mother's, that eased our aching brow, smoothed out the tangled tresses, hovered round our sick-bed, and, with loving words and gentle attentions, inspired our hope and won us back to life again."

During all these years of toil, such as falls to the lot of few men, he kept his hands and head and heart busy in the Master's work beyond the borders of his own household.

During the memorable Lottery fight in this State, Bro. Wailes edited an anti-Lottery paper at Vernon, La., in which he did some excellent work for the cause of honesty and statehood.

At the time of his death he was teaching in the western part of Jackson parish, La., where, on the fourth day of December, 1894, he passed away under a stroke of apoplexy.

Bro. Wailes' consistent, beautiful life, and his devotion to right, are our testimony. He left no parting words, but "he, being dead, yet speaketh" in the spotlessness of his character and devotion to humanity.

As a preacher, he was earnest, logical, and thoroughly orthodox, according to the Arminian thought.

May He in whom he trusted be the stay of his orphan children!

J. A. PARKER, Com.

In the Living Present.

It is wicked in parents to encourage their young children to "show off" for the admiration of older people. The practice engenders among the children a thirst for notoriety. Arrogance will be their besetting weakness. Besides, the practice fills said older people with disgust.

Yale University has decided to extend the course of medicine from three to four years. Commendable! Men who practice as physicians, on whose skill the life of ailing children, wife or parents depends, can not be too well qualified for their important profession. Not all quacks are without diploma.

The Bible is the only true standard of theology. In it our religious opinions should find cradle and abode. But many who profess to love the Bible use it only to bolster up their preconceived views.

Bishop Corrigan received three thousand dollars as a fee for marrying Count Castellane and his millionaire bride. As a rule, the usual fee for celebrating marriage is strangely low. An old preacher informs us that those marriages for whose celebration an insignificant or even no fee was paid usually turned out poorly.

On the first day of April, Prince Bismarck will celebrate the anniversary of his eightieth birthday. Throughout Germany grand preparations are being made to make it a gala occasion. Never before did a living man receive such universal homage as does the iron ex-chancellor.

Our secular papers are paying more attention to religious matters than of yore. The New York Herald has a Unitarian preacher, Rev. Geo. H. Hepworth, on its regular editorial staff. His sermon in each Sunday edition constitutes good reading.

The Legislature of New York recently enacted a law that hereafter only the flag of the United States shall be hoisted on their public buildings. For the first time in twenty years the flag of Ireland did not float to the breeze on the pennant of the City Hall, New York, on the recent St. Patrick's Day. The Irish Catholics govern nearly all our American cities, but not New York at present.

The Legislature of Texas is discussing the advisability of a law taxing all unmarried men over thirty years of age, and less than fifty, $50 per year. The man who can prove that within the last twelve months he proposed marriage to a lady, but was refused, shall be exempt from payment of said annual tax.

Correspondence.

Your Issue, March 14, 1895.

The last issue of your paper contained a fine article of the much-discussed subject of sanctification, by W. B. Lewis. I, like Bro. Lewis, saw what Dr. Tillett said, and liked it. I heard Rev. W. W. Hopper once say, "You had better profess and live the doctrine than to discuss it." Much of the discussion of the doctrine has been unsanctified. Many make their views the law on this subject; others make Wesley's views the law, or their views of Wesley's views the law. You see we differ very much about what Wesley did teach. Rev. A. C. Burt seems to have a much better comprehension of Wesley's position than many of the older brethren; but didn't Mr. Rex B. lift the young man in the same issue of the paper? That "B" has a sting.

The discussion on this subject reminds me of the discussion in the ADVOCATE, some twenty five years ago, on knowing "the time and place" of your conversion as an absolute essential in regeneration. Bro. Shanks insisted on the exact time and place, and if you could not tell it, you were still a sinner. Others said: 'I can't tell the exact time. I had been thinking on the subject and praying for salvation a long time. I can't give any precise time, but I have the evidences. I am living right, and love the brethren. All that I can say is, that whereas I was blind, now I see." The other side said, "You must give the time and place, brother, just as I can."

Bishop Key says the work of sanctification begins in regeneration, but that away on afterwards there is something higher attained from a second impulse, or visitation, of the Spirit. I am not quoting his exact language. I speak from memory. I think all genuine Methodists believe that. In some the second impulse has not been so marked. They can't name the time and place, but they can rejoice in a purity of heart and a sinless life, all the same.

The long article by McKendree M. Black, "The Harp of the Senses," was worth all the space it took. I read it with pleasure. 'Free Speech" was capital. What you said about Miss Belle Kearney I liked. The Bishop's article on "Agra, the City of the Taj," I had read before. I have spread your one-dollar proposition before my people, and expect to send you some new subscriptions soon. T. S. WEST.

What They Say.

Once a Californian gave us as a reason why he could not help an educational enterprise toward which he professed friendliness of feeling that his taxes that year were thirty-six thousand dollars. Poor man! He had our sympathy, mixed with another sentiment.—Pacific Advocate.

Read French and "Frenchy" novels, look into the Bible scarcely once a month, and you will be on the road that leads to the advanced thought that puts a cranky Russian novelist in the same category as the Son of God. Then name it "culture," and you have the secret of many a lapse in the Christian life on the Pacific coast and elsewhere.—Pacific Advocate.

When a man gets the worst of it in a controversy, he may attempt to conceal his defeat by calling his opponent an old sister, or by asserting that he has no ammunition small enough for such game. But he can not hoodwink the public, no matter how loudly he may call for "a foeman worthy of his steel." That dodge is too transparent.—Baltimore Advocate.

The Iliff School of Theology has determined to permit some of the freshest, most virile and inspiring books of its library to circulate among the Methodist Episcopal ministers whose names are printed in the regular Minutes of the Conference and missions west of the Mississippi river. This is an entirely new departure, and brings the school in contact with preachers whether in attendance or not. For names of books and conditions drop a postal to the Librarian at University Park, Colo. Many preachers who seldom see a book store, and perhaps could not find the book they need if they did, will be glad of this way of keeping up with the procession of the world's thought.—Central Advocate.

There is to be a revival of the curfew in Canada, and if it prove successful in the cities and towns of that dominion, it is not unlikely that it may be used in some parts of the United States, writes John Gilmer Speed in a short history of that historic bell in the February Ladies' Home Journal. The law which has been enacted by the Legislatures of Quebec and Ontario was drafted by the Society for the Protection of Women and Children, and provides that the municipal councils in cities, towns and incorporated villages shall have power to pass by-laws for the regulation of the time after which children shall not be in the streets at nightfall without proper guardianship. The law also provides that these councils shall cause a bell to be rung at or near the time appointed, as a warning, to be called the curfew bell, after which the children so required to be at their homes or off the streets shall be liable to be warned by any constable or police officer to go home.—Pacific Advocate.

The religious newspaper we believe to be as much a necessity of the age as any other of its manifold institutions. It is more positively necessary, now that secular papers have found their way into all homes, than it ever was. No religious family should be without one. And every family should have the paper of the church with which its members are connected. No reasonable sacrifice should be considered too great that this might be. Read what Thomas Kane says on this point. He wrote: "I am a thorough believer in religious newspapers. I may not doubt the piety of the head of a family who does not take and read one, but I certainly doubt his intelligence. But simply a religious paper will not answer. If only one is taken, it should always be of his own denomination. No soldier every amounted to much who was not especially attached to and proud of his own regiment. Esprit de corps and enthusiasm are impossible without thorough knowledge of what is being attempted and done by our church. General knowledge is not sufficient. It must be special also, and that can be had only in a live paper of our own denomination."—The Church Advocate.

The Mexican Mission.

The Sunday-school of Carondelet Street Church held a missionary anniversary last Sabbath at which Bishop Keener delivered an address, from which we quote as follows:

It does not look as though the school was doing much for missionary movements, but I will tell you what you have done, by the favor of God. The Mexican Mission was the missionary offshoot of the Carondelet Street Sunday-school of 1873. We have now as a result of that, three Conferences; we have 80 traveling preachers and 60 local preachers, all preaching in Spanish every Sunday. We have 4 887 members, 147 Sabbath-schools, 305 teachers, 3 330 scholars, 8 academies, 26 day-schools, with 59 teachers and 1,464 scholars. All the preaching and teaching is in the Spanish language. The Publishing House at Nashville has translated many valuable works into the Spanish for the benefit of the preachers and people of Mexico. See what a great fire a very little matter kindles. What a wonderful thing it is that God should permit us to conquer the world for Christ.

The Bishop also exhibited a photograph of the various workers in this field, and gave an account of the work of many of them, especially of Zapata. We regret that we have not space in this issue for a fuller extract.

ONE SOUL.

"Perchance in heaven one day to me
Some blessed saint will come and say,
'All hail beloved; not for thee
My soul to death had fallen a prey.'
And, oh, what rapture in the thought,
One soul to glory to have brought!"

Ashury's Religious Experience as Drawn from His Journals.

BY GEO. G SMITH

No honest biography of Ashury could be written which does not give prominence to his account of his personal religious experience. In no private diary is there a fuller exhibit given of all the phases of one's inner life than Ashury gives in the pages of his honest and homely journal. He was a good child—prayerful, obedient, and truthful. When quite a child he was awakened to the need of conversion, and at twelve years of age was converted. He knew it and rejoiced in it, and, though through a child's ignorance he afterward lost the evidence, he never lost the character of a Christian, and when he was sixteen he began to preach. His religious life was serious, self-denying, and emotional. All Methodists in that day, after a conscious conversion, began to seek for what they called the removal of the least and last remains of the carnal mind, and Ashury began to seek for it with all his heart, and in the ardor of boyhood and in his early and happy experience he thought he had attained it, but he afterward decided he was mistaken. He had almost an uninterrupted witness of acceptance with God, and had a constant dominion over sin and the witness of his own spirit that he was pure in his intentions; but he was confident that that lofty experience Mr. Wesley pictured as Christian perfection he had not reached when he came to America, nor for many years afterward.

During his first years in America, while he records to story of great comforts, rewrote bitter things against himself oftentime, and censures himself for sundry failings. Thus in 1772: "Found an inattention to study, an unsettled frame of mind, and much backwardness in prayer. Lord, help me with active warmth to more." "Visited an old man who was sick, but came away without prayer, and was justly blamed both by my friends and myself. Lord, forgive my secret and open faults." "My heart is still distressed for want of more religion. I long to be wholly given up, and to seek no favor but what cometh from God alone." "A cloud rested on my mind, which was occasioned by talking and jesting. I also feel at times tempted to impatience and pride of heart." "In this journey I have my soul comfortable and alive to God." "On Saturday all my soul was love. No desire for anything, but God had place in my heart. Keep me, O Lord, in this delightful blessed frame!" On Tuesday he says: 'My foolish heart felt rather disposed to murmuring, pride, and discontent. Lord, pardon me, and grant me grace." The next day he says: "My conscience reproves me for the appearance of levity."

These are but specimen extracts from his early journal. Sometimes he is very happy after being very much depressed, condemning himself for what appears to us to have been neither errors nor sins; but, despite his changing moods, he was always faithful. He had one desire: to live entirely for God. Resigned, submissive, untiring, he pressed on the way.

On June 14, 1774, he says: "My heart seems wholly devoted to God, and he favors me with power over all outward and inward sin. Some people, if they felt as I feel at present, would, perhaps, conclude they were saved from all indwelling sin." The next day he says: "My soul was under heavy exercises and much troubled by manifold temptations. I feel it hurtful to lay too much on myself. Lord, make thy face to shine upon me, and make me always joyful in thy salvation."

These extracts from his journal are merely samples of numerous entries, and they tell the same story; a constant reaching forward after the highest attainments and varying sensations—sometimes very happy, sometimes very much depressed.

On Sunday, Aug. 6, 1786, he says: "A pleasing thought passed through my mind. It was this: that I was saved from the remains of sin. As yet, I have felt no returns thereof." But on Oct. 5, of the same year, he says: "My soul is under deep exercise on account of the deadness of the people and my own want of fervor and holiness of heart."

The effort to arrive at a satisfactory conclusion about the extent of the good work wrought in his soul had been so unsatisfactory that for some years he seems to have almost given over any effort to make an exact record of it. His affections never varied; his devotion to duty knew no intermission; his prayerfulness and his attention to his religious duties never slackened; but his introspection was to a large degree interfered with by the demands upon him of his work. His sky grew brighter as the years passed on, and during the days of his long invalid life there was a constant serenity. He had received, as all the Methodists had, the teachings of Mr. Wesley on the possibility of Christian perfection secured instantly by faith, and was patiently waiting, as he was earnestly groaning for the hour when the consciousness would be given him that his soul was filled with pure love.

In 1803 he said: "My general experience is: close communion with God, holy fellowship with the Father and his Son Jesus Christ, a will resigned, frequent addresses to the throne of grace." And Jan. 9 he says: "I feel it my duty to speak chiefly upon perfection, and, above all, to strive to attain unto that which I preach." March 7: "I find the way of holiness very narrow to walk in or to preach." In April, 1803 he says: "My mind is in a great calm after the tumult of the Baltimore Conference—in addition to the charge of the superintendency to feel and to live perfect love."

This was thirty-two years after he came to America, when he was fifty-eight years old; and, as far as I can find it, this is the first positive statement that what he sought for he had found. As in the case of Mr. Wesley and Mr. Fletcher, there is nowhere a marked line when he, by a wonderful transition, passed into the land of perfect peace. It was, as far as his journals tell the story, a constant progress, leading him at last into the land of Beulah by gradual steps.

The study of a life like his, where all the throbbings of an earnest heart are seen, can but be a profitable one to study. When we try to arrive at the experience through which he passed, and when his life in its external features is looked at, we find an example of advanced holiness is presented which has rarely been equalled in this world. Perhaps he erred. I may say confidently he did err in following his ideas of self-denial to the extent he did. Not Loyola, with his scourge, had less pity on his poor, feeble frame than Asbury on himself. He pitied every being but himself. The poorest slave, who was so much the object of his pity, to him was better treated by the cruelest master than Asbury treated his poor, frail, emaciated body. Fasting when he was barely able to walk, facing bleak Winter when God's laws called him to shelter, riding in hot suns when he needed shade, rising from a bed when exhausted nature bade him stay, he suffered when God would have spared him. His austerity toward himself made him not sour, but exacting toward others, and he had less love for the things God had made lovely than was his privilege and, perhaps, his duty. God honored him greatly, and for years he walked in the secret place of the Almighty. His life was hid with Christ in God.

Augustine, Luther, Calvin, Knox, Wesley, were great men all; but in the holiness of life and in the extent of his usefulness, Francis Asbury, the gardener's son, of Birmingham, was behind none of them.

The Enduring of Affliction.

BY REV. C. A. A DWIGHT.

Christ has taught man how to bear misfortune when it comes. The lesson is neither an easy nor a pleasant one to learn. But to bear trouble with patience and sweetness of spirit constitutes a real distinction in the sight of God. Said proud Cæsar: "To endure misfortune is greater than to die."

Where grace now is sought in supply of need the ills of life are borne with a magnanimity of spirit which is both philosophic and Christian, but more Christian than philosophic. Ancient stoicism simply taught its devotees how to bite the lip and refrain the expression of the pain which was gnawing at the heart: to deny in speech the agony which was oraxing the spirit. Christianity says that grace is the true antidote for pain, and the sure alleviation of a bitter grief of heart; that God can give a comfort which will ease the present pang while it prophesies of a final state of total release from pain.

So grace speaks a better word than stoicism; and whereas Cato committed suicide, fainting Elijah under the juniper-tree was held back from a self-inflicted death by the comforts of a heavenly provision, and the solace of a spiritual visitation. Cato died rather than to endure misfortune; the Hebrew prophet lived, though afflicted, because of a divine support in the midst of a human tribulation.

Some Experiences—What They Mean.

Christian experience within its own sphere is the very best evidence; but outside of that sphere it has very small evidential value. One may say with most positive assurance that "once I was conscious of condemnation—now I am conscious of freedom from condemnation;" but he can not say by this that Calvinism, or Arminianism, or any other ism, is true or false. One is within its sphere; the other is not. The different theories of entire sanctification can neither be proved nor disproved by experience. The same experience may be read in at least two ways, and made to do service for two contrary theories. Let us see!

Dr. Carradine, or Bro. Hopper, holds a meeting, telling the people that there is a second cleansing subsequent to regeneration which they need, and may have. Many accept the teaching. They are not pure and holy, and they knew it; they wish to be. The doctrine they hear tells them that they are regenerate, but not holy. They want to be holy; they go to God by faith, pleading to be made holy. God answers men's hearts, not their heads. Whether their theory be right or not, their hearts are right in the asking; and God answers. They become better workers for Christ, more consistent members of the church—in short, more pious. Dr. Carradine, Bro. Hopper, and their disciples say that this which these people have received is entire sanctification.

Last year I attended one camp and two protracted meetings at which entire sanctification was hardly mentioned, and the "second-blessing theory" was not preached at all. Worldliness was vigorously attacked. Holiness was preached as essential to salvation and as the direct result of regeneration. About two hundred were converted. Only forty joined the church, the one hundred and sixty others were in the church—had been regenerated long ago. But under the preaching at those revivals they were made conscious that they were not holy. The preacher said: "You are not regenerated. You were,—maybe, but are not now—seek regeneration!" They sought it. God answered their hearts, whether their theories were right or not. They were made holy, became more pious. Some of them became wonderful examples of the transforming grace of God. Now, I say these people were regenerated last year. Their experiences were just as much proof of my theory as the experiences of Dr. Carradine's disciples are proof of his theory. But do these experiences prove either theory? They certainly do not. Our theories are to be proved or disproved by the Bible only.

Another question arises: Why should we be contending about theories? It is really a contention about methods. By Dr. Carradine's methods many are made holy; by the other method many are made holy. Who can deny this? By both methods, following both theories, men and women are made holy. What is the sense of this contention about methods? Why stress a theory when nothing is to be gained by such stressing, and much discord and disunion results?

Some one will reply: "One theory is surely error, and error is harmful. We want the truth." Yes, we want the truth as it is in Jesus; not the supposed truth as it is in Carradine, nor the supposed truth as it is read from Wesley, nor the deductions drawn from misread experiences.

Our second-blessing brethren have been urging their theory now for several years among us. Weeks ago I called for proof—for Bible proof—of the main point of their theory, viz.: That there is a work of cleansing subsequent to regeneration where there has been no lapse from regeneration. The columns of the ADVOCATE are open to them; but no one responds. On all sides we hear experiences and quotations from this and that one, but no Bible proof. I say again: Either prove the theory, or stop the contention. Common justice, the cause of peace and sheer consistency, demand this. Prove it, or quit contending for it!

Selections.

I used to think it was great to disregard happiness, to press to a high goal, careless, disdainful of it. But now I see that there is nothing so great as to be capable of happiness, to pluck it out of "each moment and whatever happens," to find that one can ride as gay and buoyant on the angry, menacing, tumultuous waves of life as on those that glide and glitter under a clear sky; that it is not defeat and wretchedness which come out of the storms of adversity, but strength and calmness.—Anne Gilchrist.

Do not keep the alabaster boxes of your love and tenderness sealed up till after your friends are dead. Fill their lives with sweetness. Speak kind, approving, cheering words while their ears can hear them, and while their hearts can be thrilled by them. The thing you mean to say after they are gone say before they go.—Selected.

The life and light of divine truth shines brightest where the windows of the soul are kept clean and clear, so that the truth may enter without obstruction.

The pleasantest things in the world are pleasant thoughts, and the art of life is to have as many of them as possible.—Bovee.

Life's Little Days.

One secret of sweet and happy Christian life is in learning to live by the day. It is the long stretches that tire us. We think of life as a whole, running on for years, and it seems too great for us. We can not carry this load until we are three-score and ten. We can not fight this battle continually for half a century. But really there are no long stretches. Life does not come to us in life-times; it comes only a day at a time. Even to-morrow is never ours till it becomes to-day, and we have nothing whatever to do with it but to pass down to it a fair and good inheritance in to-day's work well done and to-day's life well lived.

It is a blessed secret this of living by the day. Anyone can carry his burden, however heavy, till night-fall. Anyone can do his work, however hard, for one day. Anyone can live sweetly, quietly, patiently, lovingly, and purely till the sun goes down. And this is all that life ever really means to us—just one little day. "Do to-day's duty, fight to-day's temptation, and do not weaken and distract yourself by looking forward to things you can not see and could not understand if you saw them." God gives us nights to shut down the curtain of darkness on our little days. We can not see beyond, and we ought not to try to see beyond. Short horizons make life easier, and give us one of the blessed secrets of brave, true, holy living.—Exchange.

You belong both to the church and the lodge. Very well, in which do you feel the greatest interest? Which receives most of your time, talent and money? When the prayer meeting and the lodge meeting are held at the same hour, which do you attend? The answer to these questions will indicate pretty clearly your spiritual condition. —N. C. Advocate.

One sometimes hears the statement made that such a person failed as a teacher because he knew too much; but no teacher ever failed for such a reason since the world began, though many a one has failed because, with all his knowledge, he knew nothing of methods.—Dr. Mayo.

When a man who has been picked up out of the mire, and brought into the church and respectability through a Methodist revival, arrives at the gosling stage of alleged aristocracy, he begins to intimate that revivals are too unrefined for polite society.—Selected.

Set yourself earnestly to see what you were made to do, and then set yourself earnestly to do it; and, the loftier your purpose is, the more sure you will be to make the world richer with every enrichment of yourself. — Phillips Brooks.

A blacksmith whose character was thought to have been damaged by another, was asked why he did not sue the man for damages. He pertinently replied: "I can hammer out a better character than the lawyers would give me."

Notice.

The W. F. M. and P. and H. M. Societies will hold their annual district meeting in Como, Miss., April 11 and 12, 1895. All auxiliaries who will send delegates, from both of these societies, will please send name of delegate to Mrs. T. S. Raiford, corresponding secretary of W. F. M. Society, Como, Miss., so that homes can be assigned them.

There will be extra inducements for attendance at this meeting. We will have Mrs. Lulu Waters, of Japan, to address us on foreign missions, and Mrs. H. C. Parrott, whose husband preached in Indian Territory for several years, on P. and H. M. work.

Let me urge all auxiliaries to send delegates, and thereby enthuse our women in these lines of our Father's vineyard.

The Louisiana Conference claims precedence this week for a report of the recent Convention. The Mississippi Conference will come in next week.

P. and H. M. Society, Louisiana Conference.

The late annual convention of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society, Louisiana Conference, convened at New Iberia, March 8, continuing three days. About forty delegates were in attendance, reporting much interest and progress from their various auxiliaries. These number at present about twenty-six—an increase of 50 per cent over last year. The address of welcome was given by Miss Louise Taylor, a talented and lovely young lady of New Iberia, and the response—on the part of the Louisiana Conference—by Mrs. H. A. Kennedy, of New Orleans. This was followed by a charming and interesting talk from Mrs. M. Stevens, of Bayne Memorial Church, on the part of the New Orleans district. Conference officers were elected as follows: Mrs. F. A. Lyons, president; Mrs. F. E. Ross, corresponding secretary; Mrs. H. A. Kennedy, recording secretary; Mrs. J. H. Campman, treasurer; Mrs. J. T. Sawyer, first vice-president; Mrs. W. H. LaPrade, second vice-president; Mrs. W. C. Black, third vice-president; Mrs. Linna Parker, fourth vice-president; Mrs. Robert Randle, fifth vice-president.

The annual report of the president, Mrs. F. A. Lyons, was heard with interest by all, and reflected much credit upon the efforts of this noble Christian woman.

Four parsonages have been helped during the year, with donations of $50 each, and good work accomplished by the faithfulness and zeal of Miss Burbank, our city missionary.

The delegates from New Orleans were: Mrs. F. A. Lyons, Mrs. J. H. Campman, Mrs. E. Simon, Mrs. S. H. Holmes, Mrs. H. A. Kennedy, Mrs. F. E. Ross, Mrs. M. Stevens, Mrs. E. B. Barr, Mrs. Lilly Riggs, Miss Mary Werlein. The visiting delegates: Mrs. S. S. King, Mrs. E. W. Van Valkenburgh, Mrs. S. C. Caldwell, Mrs. E. Mosher, Mrs. S. A. Beard.

Miss Werlein, State organizer and solicitor for Our Homes, made the following report, which speaks for itself: "Our president, Mrs. E. E. Wiley, and your organizer were absent fifteen days on our trip through the State, and can report fourteen societies organized, and everywhere the people ready to respond after the needs of the work were presented. Sixty-two copies of Our Homes sold during the year, and 117 subscribers up to date—March 8, 1895."

May we be found among the "reapers" when the Lord of the "harvest" comes to "gather in the sheaves!"

Mrs. S. S. King, honored and beloved as the pioneer mover in this branch of Christian work, conducted the exercises at the close of the session to the enjoyment and profit of all.

The eloquent addresses and sermons of Dr. Beard and Rev. F. S. Parker gave renewed encouragement and inspired all present with determination to persevere in the work of providing a "home for every preacher."

The good people of New Iberia received most cordial thanks for their charming hospitality and good-will. A visit to the salt mines, a drive to Spanish Lake, and, on the way, a sight of "Evangeline's tree," were not the least among the many pleasant features of a most delightful and profitable visit to this lovely little town on the banks of the Teche.

MRS. H. A. KENNEDY,
Rec. Secretary.
1517 Enterpe St., New Orleans.

We once heard of a minister who said: "No! I will not bring my wife here. She is too elegant a lady to live in such a tumble-down house." (Although other gentle, sweet-spirited wives of Methodist ministers had lived in that same house, and with a deft touch and art of fixing things had made it sweet and home-like.) Now, this was not the spirit of the lowly Master, who had not where to lay his head. However, the result of such a stand was a determination on the part of the people to renovate and repair the house, which they did, and made one of the neatest and nicest parsonages in the Conference. Now, we do believe if more of our preachers would refuse to live in the miserable affairs called "parsonages," it would not be long before every work in the Conference would have a nice home for the pastor. Ont but says some one, "this is not the true itinerant spirit." Certainly it is not. Yet shame on enlightened Christian people whose indifference or neglect causes a servant of God to display such a spirit! What said the Master when he sent forth the disciples, and again other seventy: "Provide nothing, for the laborer is worthy of his hire." Again: "And when ye come into an house, salute it. And if the house be worthy, let your peace come upon it; but if it be not worthy, let your peace return to you." "And whoever shall not receive you, nor hear your words, when ye depart out of that house or city, shake off the dust of your feet." Then listen: "Verily I say unto you, it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of judgment than for that city." If a literal application of the above-quoted Scripture were made in this day, is there a city in our own Conference that would share the lot of Sodom and Gomorrah?

Let each of us prayerfully ask, "Am I doing what I can?" "Thy watchman shall lift up the voice." How can any of us be idle, or fail to do our duty, in the face of appalling facts presented by our wise counselors, and brought to touch by our own Bishop Galloway, who, after relating the deplorable condition of woman in India, said: "Not until Christianity puts its shoulder under the heavy burdens borne by sorrowing woman does she anywhere find rest for her bruised and tired limbs, or experience any sense of the queenly dignity and influence with which she has been crowned by our Lord. How any woman in a Christian land, with the slightest knowledge of her heathen sister's condition, can be indifferent to the appeals made for missionary labor in their behalf, I can not understand."

"A Romantic Story of the Empress Dowager of China," in the Woman's Missionary Advocate, by Mrs. S. N. Coleman, closes with: "Bishop Galloway tells us this wonderful woman's sixtieth birthday, celebrated last year, 'was to have been the greatest event in Chinese history for a century or more. One road and street for ten miles were to have been covered with carpets and decorated with lamps and pictures and everything attractive in Chinese manufacture.' The war, however, prevented this display. He says, too: 'It is significant that in this country, in which women are at a discount—are secluded and kept in ignorance, are protested at birth, and regarded as a calamity in youth—the ruling spirit in all national affairs is a woman. Greater than Emperor and cabinet officers is the Empress Dowager, who has placed crowns on several brows, and who is the creator of viceroys and governmental potiches.'

"In view of the sixtieth birthday celebration the Protestant Christian women of China had printed at the Presbyterian Publishing House of Shanghai a copy of the New Testament in the handsomest style, at a cost of $1,000, expressly for the Empress Dowager. It was presented in a costly carved silver case. . . . The gift was received by the Empress Dowager with undisguised pleasure, and the Empress herself immediately thereafter drew up a list of Christian books, including the Old Testament, and sent an eunuch to bring them from a Christian book store in the capital.

"Who knows? May not the golden thread of God's providence, running through the wonderful life of this Empress Dowager, the ruling spirit of China, be for a great purpose, even the miracle of all missions, the speedy conversion of China?"

As delays are dangerous, it would be well that we begin now to collect the money for the publication of the Minutes of the next annual meeting. Assessments as follows: All auxiliaries with less than fifteen members, fifty cents; from fifteen to twenty-five, one dollar; and all over twenty-five, one dollar and fifty cents. This is to be sent to the Conference recording secretary at annual meeting. Miss Agnes Chrisman is an efficient officer, and has given perfect satisfaction also in this work. Let us manifest our appreciation by having the amount necessary in readiness. We must not forget that at the March "anniversary meeting" delegates and reserves to the annual meeting shall be elected.

"My people perish for lack of knowledge." Said Miss Willard: "The reason why our young folks go their way into wrong-doing is largely because they have not been trained to a better way."

Marcus L. Gray, Missouri, in writing of the value of "The Cross-Bearers' Missionary Reading Circle," in Methodist Review of Missions, said: "May we not suggest that a new remedy of more reading, more study and more prayer would lead pastor and people to a more healthy liberality? As to the effect of such a course of reading upon a pastor, Alexander M. Mackay wrote from Nyanza: 'A missionary minister is the right kind of a pastor, to my mind. He is sure to hold more enlarged views of men and things than others who confine their thoughts to their own little circle. . . . The progress of the kingdom of God in the world is a study well calculated to enlarge the mind and soul, and rescue torpid congregations from their self-satisfied ease.'"

Miss Laura Haygood, in a recent letter in the Woman's Missionary Advocate, addressed to the members of the W. F. M. So., closed thus: "Many words of cheer in regard to our work in China are coming to me. . . . The fields are so white; the laborers are so few. Oh, my sisters, it is Christ who calls! Will you not answer: 'Here am I; send me'"?

The district meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society will meet at Vossburg, Miss., March 30–31. Each society on the district is urged to send a delegate. The preachers are earnestly solicited to attend. Send names to Mrs. J. V. Penn, Vossburg, Miss.

Rev. G. W. Gordon, Guntown circuit, North Mississippi Conference: "Our first Quarterly Conference was held March 2 and 3. Bro. He is making a model presiding elder. Bro. J. C. Park, of Booneville and Baldwyn station, was with us and gave us a sweet gospel sermon on Isa. lv, 1. Come again, Bro. P., we are always delighted to see you. We are hoping and praying for a year of much prosperity. The indications are pointing in that direction."

Rev. J. A. Poe, P. C., Ethel, Miss., March 19: "I came to this circuit according to appointment by the Bishop and his cabinet, but was late in getting on the field, owing to sickness and bad weather, neither of which, of course, I was responsible for. But, thank the Lord, I found a hearty welcome when I did get here, not only by Methodists, but by both sister denominations, the Baptists and Presbyterians. And so far we have all worked together in perfect peace and harmony in Sunday-school and prayer meeting, and I realize as never before 'how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity.' May the spirit of love continue to develop until we are lost in love in a higher world above! But all things are not as we would have them be. Our churches are in an unhealthy state. Our members are not as zealous as they should be, and our houses of worship are in a very dilapidated condition. But by the help of the Lord we will do some repairing this year. And the Lord has already done his part, and it only remains for us to do ours. Men of God, awake!"

Rev. Paul D. Hardin, P. C., Westville, Miss., March 14: "At the behest of the appointing power of our Conference, we were called upon to end a happy and, we trust, somewhat successful pastorate of two years on Clarksburg circuit, bid farewell to friends beloved, and repair to other fields. Ten weeks at Westville has convinced us that 'the lines have fallen in pleasant places.' We are happy at the privilege of living among and working for such a kind and appreciative people. We are marshaling our forces, and taking what we hope to be the introductory steps to a great victory for Christ. Even now 'our labors are not in vain in the Lord.' We are pressing forward. The presence and power of the Holy Spirit is manifested at almost every service. Despite the 'hard times,' the Board of Stewards made a very handsome increase in the assessment for the preacher in charge over what it was last year. We have one new church on the way to completion, and we are taking subscriptions to build a church here that, if we succeed, will be an ornament to their town and an honor to Methodism. Mr. Editor, pray for us. There is so much to be done for God in this country."

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE LETTER.

After three months at home because of personal and family sickness, the writer started out for field work on Feb. 22. That night I rested in the hospitable parsonage in Starkville station, where I found Bro. and Sister Dorman and the children in good health and spirits. The next day I pursued my journey to Macon, where I was the guest of Rev. J. A. Bowen and his excellent wife for several days. On Sunday I enjoyed the privilege of preaching in the morning to an attentive audience and of speaking to the children at 3 P. M. Of course, I attended the Sunday-school, presided over by that veteran in the cause, Judge H. W. Foote, who is now fulfilling his fiftieth year as superintendent. His bow still abides in strength. May he be spared many years to bless his generation in this "loved employ!" Accompanied and aided by the pastor, the colporter had good success in his work and a pleasant stay in Macon.

Wednesday night, Feb. 27, and next day I spent in Brooksville in the preacher's home with Rev. D. L. Cogdell and family. Preached one time and sold a few books. Thursday evening I took the train for Aberdeen, where on arrival, at 7:30 P. M., I was met by that noble brother, Rev. Amos Kendall, and conducted to the parsonage, where Sister Kendall had a bountiful supper prepared, to which the wayworn traveler did ample justice.

On Sunday we had two good sermons preached by Rev. Henry Kendall, of England, brother of the pastor, who will remain in Aberdeen several weeks. At 3 P. M. a meeting was held in the interest of the Epworth League, a goodly number enrolled as members for future organization, and a club of subscribers for the Epworth Era was raised.

Time and space will not allow of detailed accounts of visits to Amory and West Point and of pleasant associations with the pastors, their families and people. Suffice it to say that all is going well with them, with the prospect of a successful year in each charge.

Sunday, March 10, I spent in Ackerman with Bro. Lester and his charge, preaching twice, meeting the Sunday-school and making an Epworth League talk, after which a goodly number enrolled for the organization of this work.

I am now resting at home for a few days, after which another working tour will be entered upon.

Many hearts will be sad when they learn of the death of Mrs. Nannie Ward, who was so helpful in missionary, temperance and benevolent work in our Conference. She died at her home near Aberdeen on the fourth instant, and was buried with funeral services by Rev. Amos Kendall on the next day.

The Epworth League work is advancing in our Conference. Let us know, brethren, when we can help you in organizing or promoting this good cause in any place by personal presence or by furnishing literature.

Children's Day programs will be ready for distribution by April, without charge to our Sunday-schools. Let pastors send us their orders in due time. G. W. BACHMAN.

SLAUGHTER, LA.

I very much enjoy the weekly visits of the ADVOCATE, for it always comes with much to cheer and delight the heart and to feast the mind. I find to my regret that there are but few on my charge who take the ADVOCATE, but I hope to see it the weekly visitor to many homes before long within the bounds of Slaughter charge. I like for my people to form a close friendship with such a friend—he on real familiar terms, too.

Well, I have been one of the busiest of men since my arrival on the work. I have just lots to do, but I am happy with it all, and feel encouraged to put forth greater energy in effort and purpose. I have a right to look for and expect great things of the Lord this year. I have found a hearty welcome into many bright and happy homes and many big warm hearts. A more kind and hospitable people I have never met. We have entered into a mutual agreement to do all we can for the spread of the gospel of our Lord Jesus and the building up of God's kingdom. We have some real "Methodists" at this place, and that means "religion in earnest."

I feel that it is my duty, as well as my privilege, to give to the ADVOCATE a few facts concerning one of the most remarkable events that has ever taken place in the history of this town, and one truly worthy of the applause and commendation of the people of God. A short while ago it became necessary that we should stand up fairly and squarely for the right. We were to decide the question in the face of great opposition whether or not whisky should be sold in Slaughter. So we, as a little band—small, indeed, compared with those of our foes—took ourselves to prayer and pledged ourselves to do all that we could against the awful enemy of our homes and manhood. Prayer meetings were held every night for several nights prior to the final struggle, though the weather was bitter cold. Our object was victory, and in that the glory of God; but we were not the only busy ones, for the enemy was fully alive and left no stone unturned. They were up nearly all night the night before the election with their whisky-bottle, seeking whom they could lead astray and to take part in their deadly and ruinous work, and with equal wonder, if not zeal, did they watch every movement of God's little band. The day having come, they met for a face-to-face combat. With equal zeal and intensity of purpose did they enter into the struggle that closed with the day. Here and there could be seen little bands of young men and women in active service for the cause of love and home, and while some were out in the heat of battle, others were at home lifting up their hand to God for victory. The polls were closed, and all waited in breathless emotion for the consummation. At last it came. Right had won. Every man, woman and child took up the note, while every bell from churches and school-houses, homes and hotels, rang out the glad news of victory for God, home and peace. God gave the victory, and we praise him for it. The enemy was put to confusion and shame and hid themselves away in silence, while the people of God rejoiced greatly in the strength of the Lord. May God bless the ADVOCATE.

BOLIVAR AND BEULAH.

Our first Quarterly Conference for Bolivar and Beulah charge is just over, and we are beginning the second quarter of the Conference year with renewed energy and zeal. Our presiding elder, Rev. J. A. Randolph, was with us in fine health and spirits. He seems bright and hopeful for the outlook for Greenville district. The Lord grant that his hopes may be realized in the accomplishment of great good throughout the entire district.

This scribe has suffered greatly since Conference in severe loss by fire, accounts of which have already appeared in your columns; but during all the trying ordeal God's abounding grace has wonderfully sustained us, and through his grace, and the many encouraging words and material expressions of kind sympathy from earthly friends, we are still at the helm in these parts, and hoping and praying that out of our sore affliction may come much glory for the Master.

We are under many and lasting obligations to the Revs. T. W. Lewis, Grenada; J. M. Wyatt, Clarksdale; J. A. Randolph, P. E.; T. B. Clifford, Courtland; H. P. Crowe, Cleveland; T. Y. Ramsey, Greenville; J. H. Shumaker, Okolona; G. W. Gordon, Guntown; W. M. Young, Pleasant Grove, Miss., and their respective kind and generous people, and many other friends too numerous to mention, for their comforting and timely tendered assistance during our indescribable distress. With much gratefulness we note the kindness of Sister Wheat, widow of the late Rev. J. J. Wheat, of this Conference, in presenting to us several invaluable books. Several brethren in the bounds of the Conference have treated us likewise. We want also to acknowledge receipt of, and gratefulness for, kindly remembrances of friends at Mt. Meigs, Ala.; Biloxi, Miss., and Kosciusko, Miss.; but by reason of their requests their names are withheld from publication. Several ladies' P. and H. M. Societies have sent us highly appreciated assistance, as have several Masonic lodges.

So from all the foregoing we are permitted to be again so well provided for as to be comfortably situated and making a new start for God and for good.

May God abundantly bless all the dear friends who have so generously rendered us assistance when helpless in the world!

We are now endeavoring to replace the lost buildings; but our own people are utterly unable to replace them unaided. If the various pastors and their people will give us their collections for one Sabbath each, I think all can be replaced before next Conference. I earnestly request the brethren to think on these things and, if possible, act in accordance therewith at once, not for any personal or local motive, but for the sake of the church and the cause of our beloved Master. This will amount to small things to the several congregations, but large things to the little vine that God, in his providence, has planted here. God grant that each one reading this may follow its dictations.

Brethren will please take due notice to send all moneys by postoffice or express money order on Benoit, Miss., and registered letters or drafts direct to Bolivar, Miss. Bolivar is not a money order office.

Success to the ADVOCATE. Pray for us and come to see us.

P. S.—I forgot to note the much valued assistance of Revs. R. H. B. Gladney, Gunnison, and J. A. Bowen, Macon, Miss.; also Rev. G. H. Jacobs and their people. J. L. B.

"Reproving the Holy Ghost."

Under the above heading a recent issue of one of our exchanges has an editorial which we regard as one of the most remarkable productions we have ever met with. The object of the writer is to defend the policy of his paper. This he seeks to do by pleading the example of the Holy Spirit in certain parts of the Bible. We quote as follows:

> The decline of a church is marked by a growth of the spirit of optimism in her chief ministry. It is accompanied by a spirit of impatience and resentment of all statements of the worldly condition of the church, and all pleadings for a restoration of spirituality and unworldliness in the church and her work. Such remonstrances are freely denominated abuse of the church, and those making them are denounced and invited to leave the church which they are slandering. . . . If consistent, what hard things these dear brethren would say of the Holy Ghost for his exposure and remonstrance and reproof of the churches of Asia. Against five of these churches he had the gravest of charges to bring; with only one he found no fault. Of one other he had but slight fault to find. We beg the reader to pause long enough to read carefully these criticisms of the Spirit.

The writer here makes several quotations from the second and third chapters of the Book of Revelation, and then proceeds as follows:

> Are we to charge ingratitude or disloyalty on the Holy Ghost for his faithfulness in pointing out these church errors? Are we to demand that he name the guilty persons in each church and prefer charges in due form and proceed to trial with proof, or retract and confess that he has slandered the Asiatic churches? Are we to fall out with him for the public manner in which he made this exposure? Are we to denounce him as a villifier of the church because he made general, and not specific, personal charges, and because he commanded them to be written out and that, too, in such a public and perpetual form as we find them?
>
> Now, if the writer had penned these sentences simply to show that we have no right to call upon the Holy Spirit for proof of His statements, or to take Him to task for any of His utterances, then they would meet universal approval among Christian people; but, when he wishes us to draw the conclusion that men should place him in the same category with the Holy Spirit by exempting him from all obligation to furnish proof of whatever he may choose to say in censure of the church, we respectfully demur. Let us look at the logic of this remarkable defense for a moment. If there is any logic in it, it is as follows:
>
> "The Holy Ghost, in giving a revelation to men for all time, made certain statements concerning the religious status of certain Asiatic churches, without feeling called upon to furnish proof of the truth of its statements; therefore, I have a right to make wholesale charges of corruption against the church of the present day without furnishing one iota of proof."
>
> Now, it seems to us that there is a slight flaw in this logic. We may be mistaken (if we are we hope to be corrected), but we really believe that there is a slight difference between the aforesaid editor and the Holy Ghost. The Holy Ghost is omniscient and infallible. The aforesaid editor may be both omniscient and infallible, but he will have to excuse us from thinking so until he furnishes proof of his possession of these high qualities. The Holy Ghost, being omniscient and infallible, makes no charge either in the Book of Revelation or elsewhere that is untrue. The aforesaid editor, being in our judgment human and, therefore, fallible, it is conceivable that he may at some time or other make a charge that is untrue. For our part, we believe, as we have already said frequently, that the paper which this brother edits has repeatedly made statements about the church that are untrue. We refer to the oft-repeated assertion that the Southern Methodist Church is dominated by rings exactly like the rings of the political world. We have been associated with Methodist preachers and have seen the workings of Methodist Conferences for many years, and we assert most positively that we have never known any facts which justify such a charge. Not only so, but we firmly believe that about a million of members of the Southern Methodist Church share our views in this matter. Now, are we to be told that we have no right to call for proof of this terrific charge? Is a denial of this or any similar assertion tantamount to "reproving the Holy Ghost?"
>
> Of course, we know that the brother does not lay claim to the possession of divine attributes; and yet without that claim what does all his elaborate defense amount to? Whenever he admits that he is human and, therefore, fallible, he makes it absurd for him to try to place himself in the same category with the Holy Spirit in this matter. If he has a right to plead the example of the Holy Spirit in such a case, then every other man has the same right. Concede to every man this right, and nobody can be called to account for any statement he may make, however false it may be. The veriest demagogue, the basest slanderer, has the right to say, "The Holy Ghost didn't furnish proof of its assertions; neither will I." Beautiful logic. And so simple. When a man makes an assertion which he knows he can't prove, all he has to do is to hide himself behind the example of the Holy Ghost. "The Holy Ghost didn't furnish proof; neither will I."
>
> In order to test the validity of this logic, let us suppose a case. Suppose some one should assert through the press that the aforesaid editor belongs to a corrupt ring whose ulterior object is to disrupt the Southern Methodist Church for purposes of self-aggrandizement; and suppose that the party making this charge, when called upon for proof, should reply: "You have no right to ask for proof. The Holy Ghost made charges without furnishing proof; and so will I." Would the aforesaid editor accept this as a sufficient answer? Well, if it would not be a valid argument in some one else's mouth, how can it be in his own?
>
> Let us see how this logic appears when thrown into syllogistic form:
>
> Major premise: No man has a right to demand of me in controversy any more than he would demand of the Holy Ghost.
>
> Minor premise: No one demands of the Holy Ghost proof of its charges against the church.
>
> Conclusion: Therefore, no one has a right to demand of me proof of my charges against the church.

Gambling.

Gambling is one of the great evils of the day. The Louisiana Lottery, holding a great State within its grasp for a quarter of a century, and carrying on its infamous operations throughout the entire domain of this vast Republic, is only one of many evidences of the extent to which the gambling mania has stifled the conscience and polluted the life of this so-called Christian nation.

The turf: what a mammoth iniquity it is! Dwellers in the rural regions remote from the great centers have not the remotest conception of the magnitude of the racing operations of the present day. Just think of thirty millions of dollars being invested in racing property in one single city. This is a fair index to the situation in our great urban centers. Millions of dollars are changing ownership from day to day as a result of the operations of the turf. An army of men subsist by this species of gambling. But this is an insignificant feature of the evil results of the business. Race-track gambling is not confined to the professionals. Men in all occupations and in all grades of society are seeking to better their fortunes by race-track gambling; and, commencing in this way, many of them soon develop into professionals. It would take the pen of a Juvenal to do justice to this evil as it exists in the great cities of America.

Then, there is the modern, more prevalent and more respectable (God save the mark!) form of gambling, euphemistically described as "speculating in futures." No brush of artist, no pen of poet, novelist or historian, is adequate to the task of describing the havoc it has wrought upon the moral life of the nation. Enjoying as it does to a large extent the patronage of the press, and sanctioned by the precept and example of those who stand in the front rank in the social, business, political, and sometimes the religious, world, this form of gambling has become an iniquity of such mammoth proportions that in comparison with it the Louisiana Lottery in its palmiest days is a mere bagatelle.

Add to this the indescribable evils of the card table, and you have the materials out of which to form a faint and feeble picture of one phase of our boasted nineteenth century civilization. Card-table gambling exists everywhere. It is one of the evils whose presence is everywhere recognized, and which it seems nevertheless impossible to suppress.

Anti-gambling laws are found on the statute books of all the States, and yet it lives on and lives ever. One of the best evidences of its demoralizing effects upon human character is found in the difficulty of bringing offenders of this class to justice. Men go before the courts and perjure themselves to shield their partners in this vice.

That the time has arrived when we need to put on the brakes will not be denied by anyone. The question arises, What can be done? We answer in the first place negatively. The chief remedy will not be found in legislation. Of course, we favor rigid legislation directed to the extirpation of this evil. This, as our readers know, we have advocated in the past, and we expect to do so still. But law can accomplish little without a sentiment back of it strong enough to secure its enforcement. Law can no more enforce itself than an axe can chop of itself. Like the axe, law is a powerful instrumentality when wielded by brain-directed muscle. How, then, is it possible to bring about the requisite change in public sentiment? Of course, the primary remedy is the preaching of the gospel of Christ in its fullness. Well, the preaching of the gospel in its fullness implies a crying aloud against sin, and especially against those forms of sin that are specially prevalent. The conscience of the church no less than that of the world needs to be toned up just at this point. The church (we use the word in its larger sense) has become leavened with a leaven which needs to be gotten rid of. What is the root principle of gambling? Simply this: a desire to get something for nothing. Does the church never make appeals to this principle? Let the raffles and various other gambling operations carried on by and for the benefit of the church answer? Who can not see the moral effect of these things? How can a young man be made to believe that it is wrong to gamble for his own pleasure or profit, if he is taught that it is right to do so for the benefit of the church? Then, too, the gambling that goes on in Christian parlors, what of that? If a young man is taught that it is perfectly right for him to play cards for a prize with his mother, his sisters, and the ladies of his circle in society, it will be simply impossible to make him believe that it is wrong for him to do the same thing with his young men associates. If his mother or sister—a good church member—plays for a silver pitcher, why should he not play for silver coin, if he prefers that to the pitcher? Can anybody tell? We write the words with deep pain, and yet a sense of duty impels us to say that many women who think they are serving God are making gamblers of their sons and their neighbors' sons, their brothers and their best friends. O that we had the power to make the womanhood of this generation feel its awful responsibility in this matter. Mark our words. We have not yet reached the bottom of this gambling infamy unless a reformation sets in soon in the house of God. In vain may we seek a remedy for this evil through Legislatures and courts as long as members of the church of God gamble continually in their homes.

Things Money Can Not Buy.

Amid the mad rush for money, so characteristic of this age, it is not often that men stop to think about the things whose value can not be reckoned in dollars and cents. Nor do all remember that "all is not gold that glitters." The average man imagines that if he can only get gold, his cup of happiness will be full. The motto of the world is: "Get all you can, and live for self." Great as is the purchasing power of wealth, we need to remember that it is not limitless. There are joys more precious than gold or jewels; there are hopes far more enduring than those excited by Fortune's smile.

Not the least valuable of the treasures which are never put upon the market or quoted in the stock exchange is peace of conscience. All would like to possess it; few enjoy it. A Vanderbilt might court it in vain; yet a poor beggar like Lazarus may rejoice in its possession. In every human breast God has placed conscience as an inward witness to warn against sin and impel to the right. Her voice oft becomes weakened by reason of repeated throttling; but still she cries out. Thousands daily seek to stifle this monitor by resorting to the wine cup. Others, again, visit new scenes, hoping thereby to rid themselves of her. Soft clothing, sumptuous fare and high position can neither still the voice of conscience nor insure heart happiness. Worse than bodily disease is the dread of humiliation and poverty felt by many who, having false views of life, live beyond their income. The fear of exposure and the stings of a guilty conscience poison the pleasure of more than one corrupt capitalist and high official. What criminal ever confessed to enjoying perfect peace of conscience?

Not all whom the world esteems happy are really so. Beneath a calm exterior the storms of passion may rage, and remorse may sting like an adder. "Every heart knoweth its own bitterness," and there is biting bitterness for him who refuses to follow his convictions of right. The conspirator Catiline, it is said, was so haunted with an evil conscience that he would start at any sudden noise. In like manner was Richard the Third tormented after the murder of his two nephews. Only of the man who fears God and keeps his commandments can it be said: "When thou liest down, thou shalt not be afraid: yea, thou shalt lie down, and thy sleep shall be sweet." Lord Brougham once said of Sir Robert Peel that "he could ever turn from the storm without to the sunshine of an approving conscience within."

Again, friendship is something that neither princes nor millionaires can buy. Money attracts fawning flatterers and parasites by the score, but not one true friend can it purchase for its possessor. There must be either some loveliness of character or personal magnetism to excite the true and tender feeling which binds friends together. Luxuries, splendor, servants without number are at the command of wealth; but of itself not one spark of affection can it enkindle. All the gold of California could not buy a mother's love. Some of the most wealthy and powerful men in history have been the most thoroughly hated. When Edward the Third of England lay dying, faithless servants stripped the rings from his unresisting fingers and fled from the palace, leaving him to die alone. Though Oliver Cromwell had a few real friends, yet Sir Walter Scott probably expressed Cromwell's true feelings when he makes him say: "I would I had any creature, were it but a dog, that followed me because it loved me, not for what it could make of me."

Far above the price of rubies is the worth of a clean character. Money is mocked when it seeks to win this treasure for its owner. Many a scoundrel wears broadcloth and a pleasant smile, and moves in polite society; but, notwithstanding his affected gentility, he can command neither the confidence nor the respect of his fellow-men. Though the world is corrupt, it is often merciless toward the transgressor. One theft, one murder, one act of faithlessness will forever ruin a man's fair name, and in not a few instances has caused the perpetual banishment of the offender from social and commercial circles, though money may have saved him from legal punishment. Ex-Congressman Breckinridge is to-day a disgraced and ruined man. Though he should own all the stock farms of Kentucky, the American people, be it said to their honor, would not look upon him with favor. Though England heaped upon Benedict Arnold military honor and reward, she could not rescue his name from lasting contempt nor cause him to be loved by loyal Englishmen.

"What tho' on homely fare we dine,
Wear hodden gray and a' that;
Gie fools their silks, and knaves their wine—
A man's a man for a' that.
For a' that and a' that,
Their tinsel show and a' that;
The honest man, tho' e'er sae poor,
Is king o' men for a' that."

Thousands foolishly imagine that wealth is a talisman that will protect one from care and all discomfort. Yet it can not restore the bloom to the faded cheek nor insure refreshing slumber. The glow of health is oftener found upon the face of the obscure mechanic or of the humble farmer than upon that of the princely capitalist. Wealth can buy comforts, but it is unable to repair a broken-down constitution or to remove the traces of evil habit. Many a fortune seeker on achieving success finds himself incapable of enjoying his riches on account of decaying health. A. T. Stewart, the great New York merchant, for years before his death, it is said, had to live upon the simplest articles of food, such as oatmeal, crackers and milk. Every man knows, though not many dwell upon the fact, that not even a Rothschilds can purchase immunity from death or for one moment stay his icy hand.

"The boast of heraldry, the pomp of power,
And all that beauty, all that wealth e'er gave Await alike th' inevitable hour:
The paths of glory lead but to the grave."

Though money kings succeed ofttimes in securing legislation in their favor, though men guilty of the foulest crimes not infrequently escape the clutches of the law through the influence of gold, yet for all that the decision of one court, at least, shall not be set aside. There is a Being whose favor is not purchasable with corruptible things as gold and silver. What a transporting thought, that there is One who "shall not judge after the sight of his eyes nor reprove after the hearing of his ears." What cause for the deepest rejoicing that eternal life is not conditioned upon a money basis. No chance for monopoly here! Rockefeller has nothing more to offer God than has the poorest believer in the slums of Chicago. Both alike must come to the Father upon the common ground of faith in the atoning blood of Christ. "Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?"

McKENDREE M. BLACK.

Unused Talent.

One of the saddest features of nineteenth century ecclesiastical life is the amount of unused talent everywhere visible. Almost every church roll contains the names of many persons who have the capacity to be eminently useful in some way who nevertheless are drones in the hive. If our unused talent could be put to work, Zion would rejoice and blossom as the rose. O that these idlers could be made to see themselves as God sees them! God will not hold him guiltless who wraps his talent, great or small, in a napkin and buries it in the earth. "Wicked and slothful servant" is God's verdict concerning him. Every man who has been the recipient of regenerating grace should esteem it an inestimable privilege to be permitted to till even the most obscure corner in his Master's vineyard. To be even a doorkeeper in the house of God should be regarded as a greater honor than any which this world can bestow. To save even one soul from death is in Heaven's sight a far loftier achievement than to found a kingdom. O that the lesson of the talents could be engraved upon the memory and imbedded in the conscience of the church! In the long run the most successful pastor is he who can most thoroughly impress this lesson upon the flock over which the Holy Ghost has made him an overseer. A small membership composed of earnest, consecrated Christians who take delight in doing whatsoever their hands find to do for the advancement of every interest of the Redeemer's kingdom is worth more than a large membership, be they ever so respectable, who are busy about everything except the Lord's work. O for that baptism of power which shall result in the utilization of the talents which now lie buried in a napkin!

We invite attention to the notice in another column of the Epworth League Convention, to be held at Grenada, Miss., May 10 12. Let all the Leagues in the State send delegates. Let those pastors who have no Leagues proceed to organize at once, and then see to it that each League is represented in the convention. We say it with regret, but it is a fact that Mississippi is far behind many other States in the matter of League work. Now is a good time for her to take a new departure. The convention, if as largely attended as it should be, will result in great good to the cause. Send your livest young men and women, and they will doubtless come home with an enthusiasm in the cause that will prove contagious.

The Moody Meeting.

After a stay of eight days the world-famed evangelists, Moody and Sankey, left Meridian on the morning of the twentieth instant, and Meridian congratulates herself on having enjoyed an honor above her neighboring cities.

Of course, expectation was high. It could not be otherwise when we were to look upon and listen to one who had traveled in foreign lands and drawn congregations in the largest cities of England and America. Not only was expectation up to the highest, but comment was also very liberally indulged in. Those who looked for what the world calls eloquence failed to find it. Those who expected new methods, startling revelations, or great originality of thought or speech, were equally disappointed. He rode no hobbies, announced no novel or catchy subject, made no effort at display of deep theology, but with old texts he preached the simple gospel of faith in Jesus Christ and witness of the Spirit. I am free to say that I do not suppose there was a minister present who had not often preached the same to his congregations and with as much earnestness.

A plain, earnest man of God, he preached from the Bible, however, not quoting it so freely as I was expecting. I think I have heard many sermons from our rank and file as full of Scripture quotations. Bro. I. L. Peebles will quote as much in one discourse of equal length as Mr. Moody did in twice the number. What then, says the reader, is the secret of his wonderful success?

First, I would say, his great earnestness and full consecration to God's work.

Second, that advertising and praising which, if given to the pastors, instead of sharp and unguarded criticism, would fill all of our churches.

Third, the rallying of all the Christian forces for one great effort which, if expended in the home church, would strengthen the hands of the preacher and attract the world.

Fourth, the recognized power there is in congregational singing.

And right here, Mr. Editor, I would be glad if every congregation in the land could have heard the words of the great evangelist on the duty of all in this part of the worship.

Mr. Moody seems strong and well preserved, but Mr. Sankey can not hide the fact that both in voice and carriage his work is telling on him. For roundness and richness of voice he does not approximate to Excell. Whatever may be the thoughts and impulses set in motion by the coming of these men of fame remains to be developed. The city was not moved as was the hope and expectation of many.

March 21, 1895.

State Epworth League Convention in Mississippi.

In accordance with directions given their respective Epworth League Boards by the North Mississippi and the Mississippi Annual Conferences at their last sessions, the undersigned members of said Boards hereby announce that a State Epworth League Convention is called to meet in the M. E. Church, South, at Grenada, Miss., at 9 o'clock A. M on the tenth, and continuing through the eleventh and twelfth of May, 1895. In which the basis of representation shall be every pastor, and one delegate for every twenty five members or fractional two-thirds thereof from each League in the two Conferences; provided, that each League shall be allowed one delegate.

Now, brethren of the ministry and laity, we have been and are your servants for Christ's sake, and submit that what we have done can only be made profitable by your hearty co-operation. And that what may be done further depends upon your interest and activity. We are doing what we can to bring forward at an early date a program which shall merit your attention and secure your effort to carry it out. Already some of the best talent of our church has been engaged and other is being sought, as also the best possible use of home resources will be made. We hope to complete all engagements in a week or two and submit at once an attractive program.

Now, pastors and leaguers of Mississippi, what do you say? All aboard? All right then. Now, is not there a crowd of us! Just think a hundred or two preachers and a host of young, active, vigorous Methodists! What a meeting we can have! Why, we may do a work at Grenada that will send a thrill of enthusiasm, fire and love for the Master's work into our beloved Mississippi Methodism, the responses to which will be coming up from every quarter. We will hear of new Leagues organized, young people converted, young folks established in the faith, big revivals, "the world" driven out of "the church," and so on.

Then let everybody get about this work, and go up before the Lord in such a way as that a pentecost may result. Let there be persons dwelling at Grenada from all the counties in the State, that when the Lord speaks through his servants we may all hear and be astonished. A baptism of League interest will make mother Methodism in Mississippi forget all her rheumatic predispositions, renew her youth like the eagle's and "put on her beautiful garments."

True, it is a new departure; but the voice of Christianity in earnest says, Behold all things are become new. So new life calls for new things to do. What is to be done with all these thousands of young, vigorous, intelligent Methodists? Shall we cramp them, dwarf their spiritual life for lack of activity, or kill them? No, we will harness them, and work them. We will organize, instruct, arm and command them; and take the world for Christ. So think about the convention, and pray for it too. Save your nickels and be on hand. If you know anything, come and tell it; and if you don't know anything about League work, be sure to come and learn.

Yours for success,

R. W. BAILEY,
Sec. Miss. E. L. Board.

"GOOD BYE, GOD BLESS YOU."

BY EUGENE FIELD.

I love the words—perhaps because,
When I was leaving mother,
Standing at last in solemn pause
We looked at one another:
And I—I saw in mother's eyes
The love she could not tell me—
A love eternal as the skies,
Whatever fate befell me.
She put her arms about my neck,
And soothed the pain of leaving,
And, though her heart was like to break,
She spoke no word of grieving;
She let no tear bedim her eye,
For fear that might distress me,
But kissing me, she said good-bye,
And asked our God to bless me.

The Gift of Sympathy.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

A few days ago there came suddenly to an exquisite young girl the call to enter on the life beyond. So imperative was the summons, so swift the transition, that her friends stood mute and amazed, the place that had known her knowing her no more. She "was not," in the terse words of the old Bible narrative, for God had taken her.

When she was gone, one and another spoke of her with an overflowing love and grief, which was the expression of their great loss. "She was so ready to sympathize," said one friend, speaking of her in tender tones. "The tears would rush to her eyes if you were in trouble, and she would feel your sorrow as if it were hers; if you were happy, she was happy with you; her laugh like a child's so gay and cheery."

Yes, she had possessed the gift of sympathy, so that she was in touch with everyone, whatever the peculiar need, and so fully and really thus that her face, her voice, her hand, were the instruments of her soul. It was as if Miss Waring's sweet stanza were her own, and were her daily answered prayer:

"I ask Thee for a thoughtful love,
Through constant watching wise,
To meet the glad with joyful smiles,
And wipe the weeping eyes;
A heart at leisure from itself,
To soothe and sympathize."

A woman who walks through this earth of ours endowed with this subtle yet angelic gift does heaven's work and is heaven's representative.

Of such another I was told one day last year. She was an old, old woman, feeble and bent under the weight of many years. The village called her "grandma," and she had outlived nearly all her contemporaries, while her home was in the house of a daughter. Always fond of children, she had ways of her own which attracted the little ones, so that on their daily path to school the boys and girls of the town loved to run in and see her and tell her the events of their lives. Others might be too busy or too hurried to listen to the children, or might consider their small affairs as unimportant, but "grandma" did not share this opinion.

It might be that a little girl had a hat or a frock which she disliked, and "grandma" would enter into it, and say: "Yes, I see what you mean. You do not like that ruffle or this flower, and it's a pity you have to wear it so when just a little change would make it all right. Tell mama that I think it would be better if she would just do this for you, or that."

When the boys came in from skating in Winter or from the ball ground in Summer, they would stop for a little chat with this dear old lady—past eighty, remember—and sometimes she would say: "Why, John or Jim, I am put in mind of your father when he was a boy. The boys used to have fine times then, as you do now, and your father was the boss, indeed he was!" More than one merry little fellow derived a wholly different impression of his father, who seemed to him a grave, absorbed and elderly man, with little knowledge of boy's sports, simply from hearing "grandma" talk about him in this way.

One day the tidings went through the village, told from house to house, and in every house leaving a feeling of personal bereavement, "Grandma died last night." The children of the place each felt that the best friend children had ever had was gone. When the time came for the funeral there were services in the home and at the church, and all the morning children came by ones and twos and threes and in groups, bringing flowers to lay in the casket. Some brought the white flowers from their gardens, some brought daisies from the meadows, some had only clover blossoms, but the little hearts could not be satisfied till the little hands had carried their loving tribute to her who had kept the child-heart so sweetly through her long pilgrimage.

The schools were closed that day, for nobody came when the morning bell rang. So many children crowded into the house for the first services there that the family quietly provided extra transportation for them to the church. But they were not prepared for the touching sight that met them there—nothing less than a church half filled with boys and girls, sitting with wistful faces and in reverent silence, and awaiting the moment when they could pay the last tokens of tender regret to the memory of a very precious friend.

So grandma went home, and I am sure she keeps in heaven the same dear gift of sympathy and of pure, unselfish love which made her life so rarely beautiful while here.—Congregationalist.

Conversation.

Conversation makes the home. It is the conversational life which characterizes the home life. Families do not live by bread alone. The table-talk not less than the table-food goes to the making of the home life what it is. There could not be much society life without conversation—the turning and returning back and forth from one to another of thought and the special emotion which it awakens. By the means of conversation the life of one multiplies itself among others about him. One thing which makes prison life so terrible and so intolerable is the enforced absence of conversation. In every really good and happy home, where the family life is pervaded by a kind of invincible joy and cheer—in rain or shine, in calm or storm—it is after all mainly the combined conversation that makes it such.

Of all the means of influence it is doubtful if there is any equal to that of conversation. Indeed all other means of influence combined would hardly equal this. The orators of the world have their influence; books have theirs; newspapers have theirs; and the pulpit has its power. But what would all these amount to, without the added conversation? Often the very best that these can do is to start and rouse the popular conversation and turn it into the right direction. Suppose the preacher could determine the total conversation of his parish, in the home, on the street, in the shop and on the farm, as also in the various social gatherings; could determine not only the themes of conversation, but the spirit and motive animating it, he might afford to let his own pulpit be silent, while he rested his hand on the helm, and just through the conversation cheered, guided, instructed, and really controlled all the rest. Whenever in any place there occurs what is termed a revival of religion, it is always attended by a revival of a truer and worthier kind of conversation. All the great moral reforms grow and spread in the same way. There are many burning questions which the painful pressure of injustice and wrongs, of one kind and another, intensifies; questions that are still awaiting answer, but to which no answer will ever come except as the power of an awakened conversation in respect to them shall create a demand that can not be resisted.

The sense of personal responsibility in this matter of conversation can not be too considerately heeded. By this means every individual has influence. Such power of influence is a sacred gift, not to be trifled with, neglected or weakened by misuse. If only the prevalent conversation were indeed, "seasoned with grace" and actually pervaded with the spirit of Christ, how easily the world might be made happier and how readily its burdens of sorrow and of error might be lifted off.—The Advance.

Religious Training.

More and more there is growing a disposition among parents to permit all matters of religious observance to be with their offspring mere matters of choice or preference. Your child must learn French and German and drawing; but he shall learn his catechism and his Bible lesson and a reverent observance of this holy day if he chooses, and not otherwise. A more dismal and irrational folly it is not easy to conceive of! I do not say that there may not have been folly in another and an opposite direction. I am not unmindful that religious teaching has been sometimes made a dreary and intolerable burden. But surely we can correct one excess (not, I apprehend, very frequent or very harmful) without straightway flying to an opposite and worse one. And so I plead with those who are parents to train your children to ways of reverent familiarity with God's Word, God's house, and God's day. Let them understand that something higher than your taste or preference makes these things sacred and binding, and constrains you to imbue them with your spirit. And, that they may do this the more effectually, give them, I entreat you, that mightiest teaching, which consists in your own consistent and devout example.—Bishop H. C. Potter.

The plainest row of hooks that cloth or paper ever covered is more significant of refinement than the most elaborately carved etagere or sideboard. Give us a house furnished with books rather than furniture. Both, if you can; but books at any rate. To spend several days in a friend's house, and hunger for something to read, while you are treading on costly carpets and sitting on luxurious chairs and sleeping upon down; is as if one were bribing your body for the sake of cheating your mind. Is it not pitiable to see a man growing rich, augmenting the comforts of home, and lavishing money on ostentatious upholstery, upon the table, upon everything but what the soul needs? We know of many and many a rich man's house where it would not be safe to ask for the commonest English classics.

No poets, no essayists, no historians, no travels, no biographies, no select fiction, no curious legendary lore. But the wall paper cost $3 a roll, and the carpet cost $4 a yard! Books are the window through which the soul looks out. A home without books is like a room without windows. No man has a right to bring up his children without surrounding them with books, if he has the means to buy them. It is a wrong to his family. He cheats them. Children learn to read by being in presence of books. The love of knowledge comes with reading and grows upon it. And the love of knowledge in a young mind is almost a warrant against the interior excitement of passions and vices. Let us pity these poor rich men who live barrenly in great bookless houses.—Selected.

The Drunkards of the Future.

A temperance lecturer was preaching on his favorite theme. "Now, boys, when I ask you a question, you must not be afraid to speak up and answer me. When you look around and see all these fine houses, farms, and cattle, do you ever think who owns them all now? Your fathers own them, do they not?"

"Yes, sir," shouted a hundred voices.

"Where will your fathers be in twenty years?"

"Dead," shouted the boys.

"That's right. And who will own this property then?"

"Us boys," shouted the urchins.

"Right. Now tell me, did you ever in going along the street notice the drunkards lounging around the public-house door, waiting for some one to treat them?"

"Yes, sir; lots of them."

"Well, where will they be in twenty years from now?"

"Dead," exclaimed the boys.

"And who will be drunkards then?"

"Us boys."

Everybody was thunderstruck. It sounded awful! It was awful; but it was true.—Selected.

Hygiene.

Benefits of Deep Breathing.

BY REV. J. THOMAS WILHIDE.

The Rev. John Wesley says when he was a boy of twelve, leaving home for the old Charter House School, his father bid him run around the garden every morning at top speed. This he did for six years, though he often went hungry and cold, yet he attributed not a little of his breathing power, and tough virile frame, which carried him through 88 years of almost unexampled hardships, to the habit acquired in his school days, of vigorous exercise and full, deep breathing of common air.

If our boys and girls would be thus taught and put into practice, we might have more reformers worthy of the name.

It is a well known fact that a man's breathing power has much to do with his success or failure in life. To neglect to fully develop it is criminal. Dr. Fr. Bicking says, "As the lungs of themselves do not fully perform their functions, and consequently are not sufficiently exercised and kept at the height of their energy, they lose their elasticity and are restrained in their plastic process. As a result various diseases originate in the lungs, and in other parts of the body affected by the condition of the lungs. Above all, consumption results!"

In quoting Dr. Dio Lewis we believe we quote the experience of the best physicians. "Consumption is incurable by medicines I admit; that it is often cured by pure air, proper exercise and right habits, no honest physician will doubt!"

It is true, medicines do ease pain and may assist nature, but nature cures, and food, and air, exercise, sleep, sunshine, cleanliness and a restful state of mind, do the work.

How needful then to obey the laws of nature which are the laws of the Creator.

Every school boy and girl knows the story of the "Black Hole of Calcutta," how one hundred and forty-six prisoners were shut up in the evening in a room eighteen feet square, one sultry night in Bengal. The only ventilation was two small heavily barred windows. At six o'clock next morning when the doors were opened, only twenty-three still breathed. One hundred and twenty-three had died from suffocation.

How often we go into halls, churches, cars, school-rooms and even dwellings and sick-rooms, and in a few minutes feel suffocated, stupid and sick.

What is the matter? Why, simply the air is impure. We are being poisoned by carbonic acid gas. In a large church in a certain city, from one to three persons fainted or were made so sick as to be compelled to leave the house, at nearly every Sunday morning service.

The cause, a low ceiling and no ventilation.

On going from a closed room of oft-breathed air into the open air, how quickly comes a sense of relief, and a few full, deep inspirations of common air quickly revives us. Why?

Because the lungs are now able to free themselves of the carbonic acid gas and other impurities, and take up the life-giving tonic, oxygen gas, from the air, thereby purifying the blood, increasing the circulation, and stimulating every nerve and fibre of the whole being.

Suffocation is death from want of pure air in the lungs.

To live, mature, and enjoy good health, the air in the lungs must be frequently changed.

To breathe impure air, or an insufficient amount, is far more hurtful than an insufficient amount of food, sleep, rest, cleanliness or sunshine, and yet, strange to say, we hear but little complaint and practically scarcely any effort toward the thorough ventilation of our public conveyances, halls, churches, school-rooms, dwellings, etc., but we do hear a great hue and cry if our sleep is disturbed or our food is not up to the standard.—Health Culture.

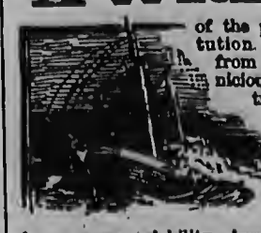
A WRECK



of the physical constitution often comes from unnatural, pernicious habits contracted through ignorance or from error. Such habits result in loss of manly power, nervous exhaustion, nervous debility, impaired memory, low spirits, irritable temper, and a host of sad and one derangements of mind and body. Epilepsy, paralysis, softening of the brain and even dread insanity sometimes result from such reckless self-abuse.

To reach, reclaim and restore such unfortunates to health and happiness, is the aim of the publishers of a book written in plain but chaste language, on the nature, symptoms and curability, by home treatment, of such diseases. This book will be sent sealed, in plain envelope, on receipt of ten cents in stamps to pay postage.

That she has joined the angelic choirs above is not doubted by any who knew her blameless life! May her loved ones emulate her virtues and finally share her glorious reward!

ENOCHS—Isaac V. Enochs died at his home near Terry, Miss., Feb 27, 1895 He was the son of John R. and Polly Enochs, and was born June 10 1829 He was married, June 29, 1855, to Miss Julia Harriet Bird, daughter of Samuel and Sarah Bird. Seven children were born unto them, four of whom preceded him to the grave, three of them having reached mature life.

During the late war he was captain of a company in the Third Mississippi Regiment for a time, but was soon promoted to the position of inspector general on the staff of Gen. Sears, in both of which positions he displayed great courage and marked ability and discretion

He joined the church in his boyhood, but did not at that time receive an assurance of sins forgiven. Soon after his marriage, during a protracted meeting at Mount Pleasant Church, he placed his all upon the altar and was made happy in the love of God. That night his young wife gave him a reminder of what she conceived to be his duty by placing a Bible and hymn book on a table beside him. A family altar came into existence that night, which was kept up as long as he lived. He at once became prominent in church work, filling various church offices as occasion required. He took a very active part in the founding of Henington Camp Meeting at Crystal Springs.

Any good cause always found in him a friend, whose generous support was limited only by his ability. No man was readier than he to lend a helping hand to his fellow-man in time of need. He was a man of far more than ordinary intelligence. He was thoroughly abreast of the times, not only in political affairs, but also in everything that pertained to the interests of the kingdom of God. During his last illness he, realizing that his end was near, expressed himself as having a well-grounded hope of a blissful immortality beyond the grave.

His grief-stricken companion and his three surviving children, all of whom are servants of the living God, know where to meet him by and by.

LOPER—Capt. F. B. Loper was born in Jones county, Miss., March 9, 1827. When he was six years of age he was brought by his parents to what is now known as Jasper county, Miss. The family settled near Garlandsville. The educational advantages of that vicinity were at that time quite limited; but his father procured for him a tutor, under whom he made satisfactory progress in his studies. At the age of twenty-two he was permitted to enter the Pleasant Hill High School, then one of the leading educational institutions of East Mississippi. After finishing his studies there he spent several years teaching, and acquired a reputation for proficiency in that noble vocation.

In 1855 he gave up teaching and engaged in the mercantile business, to which he devoted his time and energies until the breaking out of the Civil War. He responded promptly to the first call for volunteers. He raised a company in 1861, of which he was elected captain, in which capacity he served until the close of the strife. His courage was put to the severest test upon many of the most hotly contested fields of the war; but he was never known to waver or falter in the performance of duty. At the battle of Corinth he was severely wounded by two minie balls and a shell. He was again wounded at Atlanta, Ga.

On Nov. 19, 1856, he was married to Miss Eliza J. Bridges. Of this union six children were born. This, his first, wife died in 1873. He was married the second time, on Jan. 9, 1875, to Mrs S. A. Dantzler.

After the war Capt. Loper settled in Newton county, Miss., and was for a time engaged in both agricultural and commercial life. In the Autumn of 1883 he was elected treasurer of Newton county, which office he held for several terms. He discharged the duties of this office with a fidelity and ability that commanded the respect and admiration of all parties.

He joined the Masonic fraternity in 1859, and a large portion of the time since he has held the position of worshipful master. He also belonged to the Knights of Honor.

Bro. Loper was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in Jasper county, Miss., when a boy. He developed early those traits of Christian character which marked him as a future leader in church work. He served the church for many years in various official capacities, and always with fidelity and acceptability.

His death was such as we would naturally expect to see after such a life—peaceful and triumphant Without a struggle, or groan, or visible sign of pain, surrounded by a large circle of sorrowing friends and relatives, at his home in Newton, Miss., on the nineteenth day of February, 1895, at three o'clock P. M., he passed to the other side, and entered into that rest which remaineth to the people of God.

His remains were buried the following day from the Methodist Church, which was taxed to its utmost capacity to hold the vast throng of earnest, bereaved people and relatives, who had gathered from various parts of the county to pay a last tribute of respect to the memory of the Christian man whom they had loved and honored.

When the church service was over the Masonic fraternity took charge of the remains, and the largest funeral procession ever seen upon our streets followed them sorrowfully to their last resting-place in the cemetery, where, just as the sun was setting, with the grand honors of the mystic order of which he was a worthy member, they were left in repose until the resurrection of the just.

SELLING THAT NEW AND WONDERFUL BOOK,

"Touching Incidents and Remarkable Answers to Prayer."

Very few people can read this book without weeping. Christians of all denominations recommend it in the highest terms, and the unsaved read it with delight. Bishops, Editors, Pastors and Ministers of all denominations can not say enough in its favor. Many pastors are securing this book and circulating it among their people, and the people are anxious to buy. Clergymen find the sale of it a great help to their support.

The incidents are not only touching, but touch hearts for good. They are impressive, apt and condensed. The Answers to Prayers are among the most remarkable and authentic that can be found.

Many of them were written expressly for this work. Others were gleaned from widely extended sources. Among them may be found choicest selections from

John Wesley,	Martin Luther,	Mark Guy Pearse,	J. W. Redfield,
Chas. G. Finney,	C. H Spurgeon,	George Fox,	James Caughey,

Read a few of the good things said of it:

Western Christian Advocate: "It is simply wonderful. No one can read the book without having his faith in prayer greatly strengthened."

Union Signal (Organ W. C. T. U): "Its high religious tone, its fascinating spirit, and the high rank of its contributors, make it a strong faith tonic and an inspiration to prevailing prayer."

B. Fay Mills: "A wonderful book, an excellent book."

Central Congregationalist: "Many of the incidents are exceedingly pathetic, and can scarcely fail to stir any tender heart to tears. It is a rich mine of illustrations for a preacher, and deserves to be in every minister's library, while no Christian heart can fail to be deeply interested and profoundly stimulated by it toward faith in God."

Methodist Recorder: "It is a well bound book, full of incidents and illustrations for public speakers, and will encourage every reader to greater faith and more earnest prayer."

Christian Herald, edited by T. DeWitt Talmage: "Mr. S. B. Shaw has done a wise thing in making a compilation of Notable Answers to Prayer. Such incidents encourage the desponding Christian and are useful to Christian workers in leading their hearers to pray for themselves."

Christian Arbitrator: "Some of the incidents are very touching; we could only read them with tear-dimmed eyes."

"Sold eight at a small prayer meeting."
"Never succeeded in selling anything before, but sold seven the first afternoon."
"Sold twenty-seven in four days."

OFFER IT AS A PREMIUM.

The publisher's retail price of this elegant book is $4.50; and it is cheap at that. Many Bibles no better than this are sold at a price ranging from one to two dollars higher. We will send it postpaid to any address on receipt of price. We will do a great deal better than this for our subscribers. We will send it postpaid to any new subscriber (we mean one who subscribes after this date) for $2. Old subscribers can have it at the same rate, provided they will pay up to June, '96, and provided they have not had the benefit of any previous offer. Those who have had the benefit of other offers can avail themselves of this also by paying up to December, '96 Better still, any subscriber who will pay his own subscription to June, '96, can secure it free by sending us four new subscriptions at the regular rate, $2. Moreover, we will give to each new subscriber thus secured a copy of any one of the fifteen poets, or a copy of any book in the Handy Volume series. If you can not secure four new subscribers, get one or two, and we will allow fifty cents on each.

Better still: For the benefit of those who desire a genuine Oxford Bible at a still lower rate we have made arrangements with one of the leading Bible publishers in America whereby we can offer a beautiful Oxford Bible, four by five and a half inches, pearl type, French Seal, divinity circuit, round corners, as a premium for only two new subscribers. In order to get the benefit of this offer one must be himself a subscriber and must have paid his subscription to June, '96 We will send this Book, postpaid, to any address on receipt of $1.62.

We make no promise as to how long this offer will last. Therefore, don't delay.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

A fire occurred in Bayou Sara last week, destroying two blocks of buildings.

The Sunday law is to be enforced against everything in St. Louis—street railways, newspapers, barbers, and all sorts of other things.

Preliminaries are being arranged for the framing of a new treaty between the United States and Great Britain concerning Behring Sea seizures.

The huge plant of the Reid Packing Company, at Kansas City, Mo., was destroyed by fire on March 24. The loss on plant and stock is estimated at $1,250 000.

After a rapid advance of fully $4 per bale in the price of cotton, there has been a reaction which has caused the loss of nearly 25 per cent. of that improvement.

The fourth destructive fire within ten days occurred in Greenville, on March 25. The Planters' Oil Mill was burned to the ground. The loss on plant and stock will be $160,000.

A Pennsylvania judge recently sentenced a chicken thief to ten years in the penitentiary for stealing $10 worth of chickens, and two bank men who looted a bank out of $112,000 to one year.

Two cotton presses in this city were burned on Thursday last. The buildings and nearly twenty thousand bales of cotton were destroyed. The loss, estimated at $500,000, is covered by insurance.

Councilman Callahan, who was tried and convicted for bribery in the Criminal Court, was granted a new trial by the Supreme Court. His case was brought up again before the Criminal Court last week, and resulted in a mistrial.

The militia was withdrawn from the river front on March 23, and the negroes at work on the levee were not molested. The Screwmen's Association has published a card calling upon its members to preserve the peace, and warning them against creating any disturbance or inciting trouble of any kind.

The numerous indictment cases which were returned by the grand jury against the parties charged with the murder of colored longshoremen and laborers on the levee in this city have already been allotted for trial to the sections of the criminal court. This augurs for an early arraignment of the defendants and a prompt trial.

FOREIGN.

A new Cabinet has been formed in Spain.

An imperial decree has been published ordering that all the warships of the German navy are to be dressed with flags on Prince Bismarck's birthday, April 1.

Emperor William is indignant at the slight put upon Prince Bismarck by the Reichstag in refusing to congratulate him upon his birthday anniversary. A combination of Centrists, Poles and Radicals defeated the resolution.

Li Hung Chang, the Chinese peace envoy, while returning to his lodgings after having attended a conference with Count Ito and the Japanese peace plenipotentiary, in Shimonoseki, was shot in the cheek by a young Japanese crank.

It is expected that the negotiations for peace between China and Japan will not be successful. The army is the dominant power in Japan, and the military men are bent upon continuing the campaign. Fresh troops are being hurried forward.

Although several months will elapse before the great naval demonstration and review which will mark the opening to commerce of the Baltic Canal, the affair has attracted much attention. All the maritime powers will send warships to take part in the naval pageant.

Although the suppression of the uprising in Cuba has been frequently announced, it is, nevertheless, evident that the island is in a very disturbed state, and that the Spanish government is very much worried over the situation. It is not now denied that bands of insurgents are operating in many different districts, and that there have been many collisions with the troops.

Advices from Peru are to the effect that President Caceras has resigned, and that the provisional government formed after the conclusion of the armistic between the government and the insurgents, which preceded Gen. Caceras' resignation, consists of representatives of both the belligerents. The provisional government will issue a decree ordering the holding of new elections.

A novel method of rewarding the Japanese troops for their services in the war against China has been resolved upon by the Japanese government. Instead of being presented with medals, each soldier who has served in the campaign is to be given a watch, and the Japanese war office has just entered into contracts with several Swiss firms for a large supply of these timepieces. The presentation of the watches will be made by the Mikado when he reviews his victorious troops at the close of the war.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. ABRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE NAZARITE.

(Num. vi, 1-8; Acts xviii, 18; Gal. v, 24.)

Of Nazariteship only little is known. God arranged for the system. The instruction explicit. The object more or less apparent.

1. The Nazarite vow differed from the vow of the Christian, in that the former could be made for a fixed period of time, a week, month, year or several years. When the penitent gives himself to God it is for all time.

"Lord, in the strength of grace,
With a glad heart and free,
Myself, my residue of days,
I consecrate to thee."

2. The Hebrew parents would at times take the Nazarite vow for their offspring, insisting that the latter give themselves to the service of the Lord, as said peculiar system required.

(1) The Christian religion disdains such representative consecration. It is an individual matter. Are volunteers.

(2) It is the sovereign right of our offspring, when they attain to the age of responsibility, to choose for themselves whom they will serve.

(3) Parents should pray for the conversion of their children. Live a Christian life, which is attractive to them. Coercion improper.

3. The Nazarite vow required that as a badge of recognition the hair of head and beard remain unshaven.

(1) Christians disdain uniformity of dress or appearance as distinguishing badge. Question the practice of Quakers and Salvation Army.

(2) We look upon the outlandish garb of priests and nuns as an abomination.

(3) The Christian's sole badge of recognition in his unostentatious piety.

4. The Nazarite vow emphasized abstinence from spirituous liquors. If the vow imposed aught else we are not aware of it.

(1) A man can not be a Christian if he is not a total abstainer. Touch not, handle not. Dare to be a Daniel.

(2) To the Christian, however, the entire catalogue of iniquities is equally satanic. He crucifies the flesh, with the affections and lusts. He abhors the card-table, dance, theatre, gluttony, lasciviousness, vanity, avarice.

5. The Nazarite vow deemed it defilement if a house of mourning be entered. Even if the departed be a near relative.

(1) In a Christian it is praiseworthy to visit the abodes of affliction. Weep with them that weep.

(2) It is sadly true that many of our so-called "wakes" are occasion for revelry.

(3) Visit the bereaved. Direct them to the Comforter. Chide not the flowing tear.

H. O. WHITE, P. E.

"Earthly Footsteps of the Man of Galilee."

A new work of Bishop Vincent, and Dr. J. W. Lee (of St. Louis). A great publishing company is just bringing to light the fruit of much toil and outlay of money. They sent an artist photographer, under the guidance of Dr. Lee, to the Holy Land, there to secure the most exact and perfect pictures of the salient scenes of the earthly life of Christ and the Apostles. We have examined a portion of the work and unhesitatingly pronounce it by far the best thing of its kind ever seen by us. The method of photographic reproduction employed is faultless.

The forthcoming book will contain some four or five hundred of these splendid pictures, 8x10 inches in size. The work will be issued in twenty-four parts, pages 11½x13½ inches, with chronological charts and colored maps. Each part will contain sixteen pictures, besides the enchanting pen pictures of these renowned writers. The series will run through twenty-four weeks, one a week, at a regular price of 25 cents each. But the ADVOCATE has made a special arrangement by which it will furnish all its subscribers, new and old, for 10 cents a number. Less than half, but very little more than a third of what you will have to pay if your name is not on our subscription roll. The entire series in this way will cost only $2 40; otherwise it will cost $6. This rule of the publishers of this book is the strictest that only to our subscribers can we make this special offer. For $2 40 you may get what another must pay $6 for if you are a subscriber to the ADVOCATE. Send $2.40, and each of the series will be mailed you as fast as issued. Or ten cents (stamps taken) for one issue—any way you prefer.

In Jeypore and Bombay.

BISHOP CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D

A night's railway ride to the southward from Delhi brought us to Jeypore, the beautiful capital of the native State of Jeypore. This was like turning back the dial of a century, for we were at last in the veritable 'India of the Rajahs"—one of the States where a native prince still reigns and rides an elephant. Not having given special attention to the geography of India, I was surprised to find so large a part of the country yet under the rulership of native potentates—about one-fifth of the population and two-fifths of the territory. But they are not entirely independent. In the capital of each a representative of the British government resides, who is styled the Agent, or Resident. He is to keep an open eye for the interests of England, and is the political adviser of the native prince, having more authority than an ordinary diplomat at a foreign court. These native rulers levy taxes, collect revenue, and administer all their internal affairs without interference, unless some case of oppression is referred to the Resident. They have small armies, but are not allowed by the British government to wage war against other States. Jeypore is such a State, and the city of the same name is such a capital, the king thereof having the title of Maharajah.

As this is off the line of ordinary tourist travel, and guests are comparatively few, the competitions and contentions of hotel runners were more lively and violent than we have found in all the East, even in Madras. There are only two hotels, and it is no small matter to get a guest, and, on his departure, secure a fulsome testimonial. They pulled so violently that we were in danger of being disrobed, and shouted so loud that we could scarcely hear our ears. Under-bidding was lively, even to ferocity, and at last we were offered a free carriage and handsome entertainment for three rupees a day. Outside of Calcutta hotel rates in India are quite cheap, but by the time a few escapes from hard pillows, porters, stewards, guides, and baggage smilies, he has paid fairly well for all he has received. For all this he is invited to write in a book his extravagant appreciation of the superb bosh, and give a separate, cordial testimonial (with "backsheesh") to the obsequious of everyone who does anything for him, from blacking his boots, to pulling a punka, to honoring him with a morning "salam."

Jeypore is said to be the most beautiful native city in India—a claim I am not able prepared to sustain. The main street, extending from east to west, is two miles long and one hundred and twenty feet wide, lined on either side with handsome pink-colored houses, with second and third stories of which are ornamental bay windows. This is intersected by other streets of similar width, at right angles, the whole being laid out in rectangular blocks. A massive stone wall, with numerous gates, incloses the entire city. On a high, rocky hill overlooking the quaint oriental capital there is a strong fort, within which is an arsenal and the royal mint.

Adjoining his palace near the Gardens the Maharajah has a private railroad depot, where his several Maharanis and their ladies in waiting can arrive and depart without attracting the gaze of the curious and profane; so, as far as possible, the zenana seclusion which must obtain even when high-caste woman travels on the public highways. Railroads, however, are great levelers, not only of hills and valleys, but of race and caste distinctions as well. The foolish caste system of India experienced a rude shock when the first railroad was built, and everywhere marks the breaking down of the barriers of centuries. Those who would not dare touch each other years ago for fear of spiritual pollution, now jostle on the same platform, crowd into the same car, and sleep on the same seats.

We visited the splendid palace in the city, and sat in the white marble Audience Hall, where the Maharajah receives his nobles and the representatives of other courts. Adjoining the palace are beautiful gardens, with stone-paved walks, artificial lakes, an hundred playing fountains, and the flowers and foliage of every bloom and clime. Here the wives of the zenana can luxuriate under tropical bowers and enjoy perfumed breezes away from the rude eyes of the world.

A visit to the royal stables disclosed something of the grandeur in which an oriental sovereign can live when he has a chance. There were three hundred horses, and each horse had a separate groom. There were horses for the royal carriages, horses for the Rajah's bodyguard, and horses for his hunting parties. Each horse was tied with three ropes—one around his neck to a ring, and around each hind foot to a small post ten or fifteen feet off. These posts were of white marble, and the trough in each stall was also trimmed with marble. In these stables was a little Hindoo shrine for the accommodation of the three hundred horsemen, who may pay their daily vows to the gods and ask good luck upon the steeds committed to their care. The other quarters, where the one hundred royal elephants are kept, we failed to see. The Maharajah was on a visit to the Zenana Palace while we were in the grounds, and, in response to request for the privilege of visiting Amber Palace, seven miles from the city, and the ancient capital of Jeypore, promptly replied, granting the request, and stating that an elephant would meet us at 3 P. M., at a certain point two miles from the palace, and transport us thither. We met the appointment and the elephant—a veritable moving mountain. What an immense creature! He was gaily caparisoned in red and yellow, with a large double saddle on top, called a "howdah," for the accommodation of four or six persons. The manager rode on his neck just behind his big ears, and by means of an iron instrument with which he punctured the beast's head, controlled him perfectly. He kneeled down for us to mount, which was accomplished by means of a ladder. Did I like it? Do you suppose I would enjoy a miniature earthquake sending a shiver through every nerve, and that for two mortal hours? And then I am "afraid of that which is high." But there is some satisfaction in having ridden a high-horse just once.

The palace crowns a lofty rocky summit, from the marble top of which we viewed a scene which Bishop Heber is quoted as saying is the most striking, picturesque and beautiful he ever beheld. Though very beautiful, it did not impress me quite so vividly, probably because of my ride on an earthquake, and the prospect of returning by the same train and schedule. In the palace there is a temple, before which a kid is sacrificed every morning; and on certain feast days, twice a year, 108 kids and five buffaloes are offered in sacrifice to the gods. On these occasions the Maharajah is present, and witnesses the ceremony from his marble audience-hall above. I am surprised that a man who seems to have broad and progressive views on governmental affairs should encourage by his presence that blind superstition of the dark ages. His country will never grow beyond the ignorant Hindoo fakirs that inhabit the ruins of the old city of Amber until they cease that slaughter of kids and buffaloes before hideous idols.

The streets of Jeypore presented a more thoroughly oriental appearance by far than any city we have seen. The dress of the people, the noisy hucksterers, the flashy bazaars, the trains of patient camels walking softly one behind the other, the hundreds of donkeys ambling along under burdens larger than themselves, the crowded bullock-carts, the loaded buffaloes, dashing horsemen with runners by their stirrups, and the throngs of men, women and children, made a picture that entirely corresponded with my dream of oriental life. And to add picturesqueness to the scene, we passed six wedding processions, all dressed in red, and marching to music and singing. In each case the bride was a mere child, her dress of scarlet differing from the others only in the liberal use of gilt on that part which covered her head.

From Jeypore we went direct to Bombay—a long journey of thirty-six hours, and much of it through a sandy section as dreary as a desert. However, two things everywhere abounded—crows and goats, and they are familiar friends. I have seen four crows sitting on the back of a goat while he picked away at the dry grass, seeming himself to enjoy their free ride. The rainfall of this section is sufficient to produce large crops, but it comes all at once, and is confined to a month or six weeks. In this respect there are greater differences in India than any country I have ever known—the figures ranging from 5 24 inches, or nearly four feet, as in Cherapoonjee, in Assam, to only two inches at some points in Sinde. These figures will interest some readers of the Advocate: Mahobleshwar has a rainfall of 300 inches; Bombay, 71; Calcutta, 66; Madras, 50; Delhi, 24; and Sinde, 2 inches. Hence, in most parts of the country it is necessary to irrigate to keep starvation from the doors of millions.

Bombay, the chief seaport of Western India and capital of the Bombay Presidency, is a busy, stirring city of 900,000 inhabitants. It is built on a cluster of islands, and has one of the most magnificent harbors in the world. Bombay has many splendid buildings, and is the only city in India with a respectable street car system, all owned, by the way, by American capitalists. It is fast becoming the Manchester of India for manufacturing enterprise, having already 130 cotton mills and several for the weaving of woolen goods. Probably on this account cotton goods are admitted free, though everything else has to pay a small tariff. Just why England thus discriminates against one of her colonial possessions I suppose her great statesmen can give satisfactory answer—to themselves.

In this connection I can not refrain from expressing surprise, that in exacting an income tax from all whose stipend is over forty rupees a month, the English government in India does not exempt the salaries of missionaries paid by foreign Boards. The men and women engaged in the moral and religious upbuilding of the country, and sustained by the money of the benevolent in other countries, must pay the government for the privilege. To my mind, this is little less than an iniquity. Heathen China is more generous. The argument that the government protects them while they preach may be also claimed for China and Japan.

But here everything must be taxed to sustain an expensive government. Riding through Bombay one afternoon with Rev. Mr. Robertson, presiding elder of the Bombay district, attention was called to large figures in white paint on the cocoanut trees, from which the "toddy," the national drink, is extracted. These are numbered and taxed by the government.

We visited the "Towers of Silence" on Malabar Hill early one morning—the horrid place where the Parsees dispose of their dead by giving them as food to vultures. There is one small private tower, and three large ones, two or three hundred feet in circumference and about thirty feet high. One of the large towers is used only for those who may have committed suicide. So they who die by their own hands are placed apart—but eaten by the same vultures. Perched on one of the towers were an hundred or more of the filthy birds. The keeper of the grounds said they never left—were, indeed, too heavy to go very far, which, being interpreted, means, they are kept too fat on Parsee flesh to fly. The body is brought by corpse-bearers on an iron bier, disrobed of all clothing, and placed on top of the tower. In less than two hours all the flesh is consumed, and the picked bones fall through the grating below, which, after they crumble, are cast into a well. The Parsees worship the earth, and, therefore, would not pollute it by burying the dead therein. They worship fire, and, therefore, could not pollute that sacred element by throwing dead bodies into it. So the most religious, sanitary and expeditious method, they conclude, is to give their dear ones to vultures, the divinely-appointed scavengers of nature. Those towers and the waiting buzzards were, if possible, even more depressing and distressing to my spirit than the burning ghats of the Hindoos.

The hospital for sick animals, built and endowed by a wealthy Hindoo, I did not visit. There stray dogs are fed, and sick ones tenderly medicated. All animals, from a horse to a monkey, are treated just as scientifically as patients in the wards of any hospital in Europe or America. Of course, this freak of philanthropy has its source and inspiration in the doctrine of the transmigration of souls. They honor their ancestors, and also may be preparing for their own soul's better future treatment by thus ministering to sick cows and kids. Whether or not, as reported, this idea is carried so far, as occasionally to pay a man to lie still while flees and other vermin feed upon him, I can not say; but this is true—they will doctor a dog and let a human being die.

We worshiped on Sunday morning in Bowen Memorial M. E. Church, where Bro. Wadsworth preached a helpful sermon to a good congregation of Europeans and Eurasians. Bishop Thoburn arrived from America at five o'clock in the afternoon, and preached in that church at six. At the same hour I had the privilege of prophesying at the Grant Road Church, where as many as six different services are held every Sabbath in four languages. The Bowen Church is named in honor of Rev. George Bowen, for many years a faithful missionary in India, where he died in triumph, Feb. 5, 1888. Everywhere I have heard the name of William Taylor, and seen the glorious fruits of his flaming zeal and earnest preaching. His work will abide through the ages.

On Monday I breakfasted with Bro. Crane, in company with Bishop Thoburn and Bro. Robertson. And in the evening we attended a Temeshi at the girls' school, under the auspices of the ladies of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. The Temashi is any sort of an entertainment. On that evening it took the form of celebrating the silver anniversary of the W. F. M. S. An interesting programme was carried out, in which the natives took prominent part. We had dinner with the ladies, and at eight o'clock attended a Welcome Meeting at Grant Road Church, where short addresses were made by Bishop Thoburn, Bro. Wadsworth, and myself.

Scientific Temperance Instruction in the Public Schools.

Miss Frances E. Willard, president of the National W. C. T. U., describes in the Arena the rationale of the movement in that organization for public school instruction in the hygienic effects of alcohol and narcotics. She also tells what has already been accomplished. "Every one of the admirable normal schools of the State of New York is obliged to make a specialty of drilling the teachers in hygienic physiology with special reference to the effects of alcoholic stimulants and narcotics. The same is true of Michigan, Vermont, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Alabama, Kansas, Nebraska, Oregon, Nevada, Maine, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Missouri, Iowa, Maryland, Connecticut, New Jersey, Washington and Wyoming, and indeed all but six of the fifty subdivisions of the United States, rounding up with the national law passed by Congress May 17, 1886. Every child in those States must be instructed in this branch of study. Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, of Boston, is at the head of this department, and has a genius worthy of a major-general for strategic points and skillful combinations. In each State and Territory she has an official coadjutor, who in turn has one in each local Woman's Christian Temperance Union, so that ten thousand lines radiate from the headquarters of our national society to as many towns where our local members are at work.

"I believe this systematic instruction, which both forewarns and forearms them, to be the road out of bondage for the children of America. No other institution of the Republic reaches them all. Powerful as are the forces of pulpit and press, the former does not attract all ears, and the latter is largely influenced by the saloon in finance and the saloon in politics. But to the school-house door come white and black, native and foreign-born; inside its walls are invested their formative years, and the laws of their being, as set forth by science, must appeal to their self-love, an attribute upon which we may always confidently base our calculations!"

Children's Day and the Programme.

We wish to announce to the church, especially to all who are interested in our Sunday-school and educational work, that our "Children's Day Programme for 1895" is now ready for delivery. As insignificant as this work may appear to the uninitiated, it has cost us much thought and labor; and while the result of our efforts is not entirely satisfactory to ourselves, we sincerely trust they may not be altogether unprofitable to the church.

We desire to call especial attention to the fact that, by action of the last General Conference, the scope of Children's Day has been considerably broadened. It is no longer solely in the interest of our Sunday-schools, but in the interest of the general cause of Christian education as well. We have borne these facts in mind in the preparation of the programme, and have tried to arrange everything connected with it so as to make Children's Day, 1895, a grand and profitable occasion to every important interest of the church.

The programmes, with the accompanying supplements, are now on sale by our Publishing House at Nashville, to which all orders should be sent. The programme itself consists of four octavo pages, and contains the order of the exercises; with the hymns that are to be sung, the responsive readings, etc. This is designed for the use of the school and congregation, and enough copies should be ordered to give every worshiper one, so that all may participate in the exercises. The supplement consists of eight octavo pages, containing general directions for the proper celebration of the day, with speeches, recitations, dialogues, etc., suited to the occasion. This is for those who take active part in the exercises. We think the entire design of this celebration will be found interesting and unique, and where effort is made to render the programme properly, we feel assured it will result in great good to the church.

The price of the programmes has been fixed at ten cents per dozen and fifty cents per hundred. With every one hundred programmes ordered, ten supplements will be sent free of charge. Extra copies of the supplement may be had for ten cents per dozen. One dollar will supply an audience of two hundred people, and five dollars will probably suffice for the largest Children's Day assembly.

We earnestly beseech our pastors and Sunday-school brethren throughout the entire connection to see that Children's Day is observed this year by every school and congregation in Southern Methodism. If it has not already been attended to, send in at once your order for programmes and supplements. We think they are worthy of general use, and surely the price fixed puts them within reach of the smallest and poorest school.

Let us have a grand rally this year of all the forces of Southern Methodism on Children's Day. The occasion can and ought to be made of great benefit to the church.

Scraps of Thought.

The people of to-day are thinking for themselves, and are discovering conclusions that are to be felt in very decided action. There need be no surprise at this, since the air was scarcely ever so full of straws showing the trend of things. Nor was there ever greater need of sound, healthy helps of thought than the present. That there is a great deal of bad thinking there is no doubt, and that evil results will follow there can be no question. The refinement of society that justifies the gambling now going on among our young women at the progressive euchre party will also develop the assassin and the train robber among the young men. The universal tendency of vice is towards its lowest forms.

The same fact is also true of what we read. As what we eat is converted into the substance of the body, so what we read directs our minds and suggests our thoughts. It is a great sin against God and his church to read disloyal literature to both, merely to see what the disloyal have to say. "Eat not the bread of him that hath an evil eye, neither desire thou his dainty meats: for as he thinketh in his heart, so is he." Let not such as do these things suppose they shall escape the evil influence, for their words reveal their hearts to the minds of the thoughtful. There must also be great carefulness in the observance of law on the part of those who demand a rigid enforcement of law. There is just as good and as strong arguments—in their way—in favor of the Sunday train, or of the Congress working through the Sabbath, as there is to justify the conduct of the man who fills his pulpit, not only without law, but against law. We do not accept the justifying claim of either party, as they are forced to the opposite of the position assumed by St. Paul when he said: "And not rather (as we be slanderously reported, and as some affirm that we say) let us do evil, that good may come." If the law of our church governing our pulpits and their administration is not a righteous or a good law, then repeal it, and replace it with one adapted to the changed condition of things. The evils of a bad law can never be revealed by ignoring its provisions, any more than can consistency be made to appear in the conduct of those who transgress the law governing their own lives, and yet require obedience of those under them to the law controlling them. Is this not true?

In Massachusetts the astounding discovery has been made that the inmates of the penitentiary are nearly all addicted to the use of opium. It had been regularly smuggled into the prison. We fear that many not in the penitentiary are the slaves of some form of opium.

Decline of Methodism in the Rural Districts.

The economy of Methodism for more than a hundred years has been the great instrumentality in carrying the gospel into regions away from the cities and the busy thoroughfares of the world. Not only is its general superintendency and system of itinerancy well adapted to sending men to preach the gospel, but the simplicity and completeness of government has been well suited to the laxity of social life in these regions. Better than this, its simple, plain and direct personal doctrines, holding each person to an individual responsibility, was well calculated to wake up these slow-thinking communities. It has been remarked that of the most happy accessions to city Methodism, many have been from the country. As, for instance, the Harper Brothers, of New York, can be cited as an exemplary instance. The question of long standing, "How can Methodism sustain itself in the cities?" has been discussed by most of the periodicals of the connection. But the question, "How can Methodism hold its ground in the mountain and hill countries?" has never been discussed; perhaps has never been a question in the public mind.

My observation has not been extensive enough to take in all the territory occupied by the connection, but this I know: that country life and country ways and habits, under similar circumstance, are much the same everywhere. From observation made and some experience had in Mississippi, extending a hundred miles north and south, touching points very generally along this line, my inference from these observations is, Methodism is not sustaining itself in these parts where she has so long been in the supremacy. There are exceptions, but the rule is, loss of force and loss of influence. There are regions of country where Methodists first occupied the ground, built the first house of worship, and thirty years ago their prayer meetings and class meetings were a power for good in the land. Now there is no prayer meeting, no class meeting, while the house of worship is a dilapidated apology. Where Sunday-schools were once in active operation, with appointments for successful work, above the average Sunday-school of the country, it is now a thing of the past, with the least hope in the most sanguine of ever bringing it into life again. A place once noted as the great rallying ground of Methodism for a large district of country, its annual revivals gave a great impetus to religion through a wide region of country round, enlarging the Methodist membership in town and country, and giving converts to Baptists and Presbyterians, and sending men to Conference and elsewhere to recruit the ranks of the ministry. There is no prayer meeting, no class meeting at this place now, and public preaching has lapsed into an afternoon appointment, paying the preacher fourteen dollars and a half to his support. The house of worship is unsafe to be occupied, and would not be a respectable barn. Not a thought of rebuilding or reviving from this lethargy is entertained. A circumstance which emphasizes this reflection is, that the country around this old historic ground is decidedly more populous than it was fifteen or twenty years ago.

Another pertinent fact to be mentioned in this connection is, that in many of the places of worship, while the public service is being held, men and boys sitting on logs, or at the roots of trees, converse in groups in full view of the preacher from the pulpit from the beginning of the service to its conclusion. Certainly this was not the case fifteen or twenty years ago.

Has our system, which at one time, under God, was so well adapted to carrying the gospel to these hill and woodland regions, and to sustain it there, lost its power? Has God changed up on us, adopting some other system? Or has our Methodism, with its simple and happy adaptation in carrying the gospel to the scattered flocks of other folds, grown weary of its life on hill, on mountain and dale, and is seeking refuge under metropolitan shadows and city battlements?

The reflections cited above, with other things I have not room for in this paper, have created an inference in my mind to almost reach a demonstration. I shall assert that there is a cause for this declension somewhere, and can be accounted for in some way. I say, remedy the evil, be it widespread or narrow, no matter what cloth or chair it shakes. North Mississippi Conference.

REPORT NO. 2 OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The action of the last General Conference in constituting a Board of Education of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the election of a Secretary of Education, we regard as eminently wise. In order to complete the organization in our own Conference, and to facilitate the work in behalf of this important interest of the church, your Board recommends the adoption of the following:

1. This Conference shall elect a Conference Secretary of Education, to serve without salary, to whom the several District Boards of Education, hereinafter provided for, shall report immediately upon their organization. It shall be the duty of the Conference Secretary of Education to see that the District Boards be furnished with catalogues of all our institutions, and with all information necessary to the prosecution of the work of the District Boards, and to keep a roster of teachers desiring situations, and to put them in correspondence with the Boards applying for teachers.

2. This Conference shall also elect a Conference Treasurer of Education, to whom all moneys belonging to the Conference Board of Education shall be paid, and who shall pay out of the said funds the expenses of the secretary of the Board for stationery, printing, etc., and the traveling expenses of members of the District Boards when in the discharge of their duties as members of the Board, and shall present an itemized statement of all moneys received and disbursed by him to the Annual Conference Board of Education, with vouchers therefor.

II.—DISTRICT BOARDS OF EDUCATION.

Every District Conference shall elect, for a term of two years, four laymen, and the presiding elder shall appoint three preachers from his district as a District Board of Education. The presiding elder shall be ex officio a member of the Board, and he shall have power to fill any vacancies occurring in the Board in the interim of District Conferences. He shall call a meeting of the Board for his district in the month of April, which shall effect its own organization and report the same to the Conference Secretary of Education, and lay such plans for their work in the district as in their judgment are advisable. The four laymen upon this Board shall be ex-officio members of the District Conference. It shall be the duty of the District Boards of Education:

1. To secure through the local Boards of Education, hereinafter provided for, such facts concerning the number of children and young people of our own church of school age, and the facilities for education within their bounds, as shall enable the church to know the needs of our people; to secure from the secretary the names of such teachers as desire situations, and to do all in their power to supply the local needs within the bounds of their several districts; to procure the names and addresses of such young people as may be induced to attend our academies and colleges, and to report them to the faculties; personally to aid the agents of our schools in whatever way possible when canvassing within their bounds; and to report in writing to the District Conference the work of the Board for the year, together with the statistics before mentioned.

2 No student for our ministry shall be admitted to our academies or colleges as a beneficiary student who has not been recommended to the District Board by the local Board of the charge in which he holds his membership, and by the District Board to the faculty of the institution which he proposes to enter. When such application is made and approved, the District Boards shall diligently enquire what amount of aid is absolutely necessary for such applicant to meet expenses other than tuition, and shall inform the local Boards of the amounts expected of them; and the local Boards shall raise the amounts in such way as they shall deem best; and the said amounts, when raised, shall be forwarded to the treasurer of the Conference Board of Education, with information for whom it is to be used.

3. No school shall be recommended to the patronage of our people by the District Conferences that has not secured the approval of the District Board of Education.

III.—LOCAL BOARDS.

In each pastoral charge there shall be a local Board of Education, consisting of three members, to be elected by the Quarterly Conference upon nomination of the preacher in charge. It shall be the duty of the local Boards:

1. To co-operate with the pastor and Sunday-school superintendent in arranging and executing a programme for Children's Day.

2. To secure, as far as possible, the statistics called for by the District Board of Education.

3. To aid the representatives of our educational institutions in the canvass of the charge.

4. To recommend to the District Board of Education such persons as they approve as beneficiary candidates for the ministry, and to raise the amount laid upon the charge by the District Board. (Sec. II., 2)

5. To report in writing to the District Board of Education the statistics gathered by them of the educational work within the pastoral charges, together with the number of students attending our institutions of learning from their charges.

In order to carry this organization into effect at once, we recommend that the presiding elders be requested now to name four laymen in each of their several districts to be elected by this Conference, to act until the meeting of the District Conference, and that the presiding elders to be appointed add to these, immediately after the appointments are made, the clerical members necessary to complete the Board.

In order, further, to forward the work of education within our Conference, we recommend that the Annual Conference Board of Education be elected to serve for four years.

J. R. Bingham is nominated as Conference Secretary of Education.

R. W. JONES, Chair'n.

A Voice from the Pew.

If some of our preachers would use such expressions as "hound," "skunk," and many other such coarse expressions less in their sermons, perhaps they would have no cause of complaint for being "wounded and crushed by Conferences and Bishops," as well as by the brothers and sisters of the church. If religion is not intended to refine and purify, we had as well be without it. Our Methodism is suffering from such coarse vulgarity, and the sooner some of our brethren learn this fact, the better it will be for our church and people. I, for one, am tired of trying to defend our ministers for such a want of refinement.

ONE OF THE OLD SISTERS.

Selections.

"Think on These Things."

The Bible abounds with exhortations which enjoin upon us the duty of religious meditation. In the Old Testament and the New, by precept and example, we are urged to consider our ways, to meditate upon things that are lovely and of good report, and to think upon the divine Word.

In the rush and whirl of our busy modern life this duty is widely neglected. Comparatively few are those who call a halt every day, and seek or make the opportunity to consider with candor and prayerfulness the condition and needs of the soul; who in the cares and burdens and toils amid which they move take time to think of their relation to God, the claims of their higher life, their spiritual hunger and thirst.

Happy is he who knows how to withdraw from the busy world, to collect his thoughts, and fix them reverently upon God, and upon some helpful passage of Scripture, and once in a while, face to face with eternal things, to say to himself:

"I have a nature which allies me with the great Creator; I am an immortal, and in a little while shall be in another sphere of being. These things which of necessity absorb so much of my time and strength and affection, are temporal, and will soon pass away, while I shall live forever. I must remember my divine lineage and my heavenly destiny. O Lord, help me to love thee supremely, and in all the duties which command me, the toils which oppress me, the dangers and temptations which assail me, to serve and honor thee! Help me to make the most of life and daily opportunity; make me of service to others, and a blessing to my fellow-men. If life be long, may it all be employed in thy service; and if death should come speedily and suddenly, may I be ready to meet the summons whenever it comes. Amid all perplexity and peril guide me with thy counsel, and afterward receive me to glory."—Central Advocate.

Business in Religion.

It is often said that we must put our religion into our business; in other words, that business should be done on Christian principles. It should also be said with equal emphasis that there is much need of conducting religion on business principles. Christ had this thought in mind when he said the children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light. He meant that worldlings often put a more level-headed common sense and a greater amount of vigor into the compassing of temporal ends than those professing godliness do into the compassing of spiritual ends.

Success in religion depends on certain business principles, such as strict attention to the thing in hand and a wise adaptation of means to ends. Just as business men feel that they must give their mind to their trade if they want to make it go, so we must give our mind to pleasing God if we want to secure that great end.

So, too, in business men have to be looking out all the time for new ideas, new methods, improvements, hints and suggestions toward a more complete mastery of all the conditions of success. And precisely the same thing is needful in religion. It is fully as important for the Christian to take a religious paper and attend religious meetings as it is for the manufacturer to take a trade journal and go to gatherings where are to be found the masters in their line of work. Only they who make a business of their religion, instead of being mere amateurs in it, will amass the true riches. —Zion's Herald.

A Good Conscience.

I suspect that the secret reason why some Christian professors have so little sunshine in their countenances, or in their lives, is that they are not at peace with their own consciences. They know that they are going wrong. They slide into this sin, and then into that sin, resolving every time "this shall be the last." But it is not the last. Every wrench given to their moral sense makes it the weaker, and themselves the more wretched. Their Master hides his face from them. They grow neglectful of prayer. They take but little comfort in any religious duty, and even come to the communion table with the guilty feeling that they are "dipping the hand into the dish" only to betray their Lord. Instead of being a trusted guide and an obeyed helmsmen and a constant comforter, a disobeyed conscience becomes a perpetual tormentor. Such a wounded spirit who can bear? Too much can not be made in the preachings of the pulpit, or the teachings of Sunday-school or fireside of the infinite importance of conscience in the daily life.—Christian Intelligencer.

Inconsistent Men in the Church.

"Inconsistent men in the church?" No doubt there are; but what of it? You belong to society, which includes these same men of one faith and another practice. You find them in the same political party with your consistent self. They are citizens of the United States, as you are proud to be. They are residents with you of the town or city of whose advantages you are wont to boast. Their presence does not drive you from any of these relationships; why should it keep you from the church, where you ought to be, in duty to your God and to yourself?—United Presbyterian.

The true doctrine of prayer is, to carry everything to God, and to let God manage everything according to his own gracious will, using yourself and other human agents as occasion may come. Everything here means—all things.—Pacific Advocate.

It is not what we read, but what we remember that makes us learned. It is not what we intend, but what we do that makes us useful. It is not a few faint wishes, but a life-long struggle that makes us valiant. — H. W. Beecher.

What God calls a man to do he will carry him through. I would undertake to govern half-a-dozen worlds if God called me to do it; but if he did not call me to do it I would not undertake to govern half-a-dozen sheep.—Payson.

Some people do not like to hear much about repentance; but I think it is so necessary that, if I should die in the pulpit, I wish to die preaching repentance; and, if out of it, practicing it.—Philip Henry.

Immeasurable harm is wrought in personal lives and in the work of God by the impatience that can not wait for the divine bidding to go forward.—J. R. Miller.

You can put into a minute of time only just so much manual labor; but you can add to the same minute thought and love.—James Freeman Clarke.

A loving, sympathetic nature is like the sunshine, which brightens all it touches. Without charity we can do nothing.

Get the pattern of your life from God, and then go about your work and be yourself.—Phillips Brooks.

A Word of Encouragement.

Any one familiar with our North Mississippi Conference can understand, without explanation, how impossible it has been for many auxiliaries to hold meetings during the past Winter in those portions of our territory where prairie roads and swamp roads have been impassable. Our treasury feels the result of these conditions, notwithstanding the regular remittances from more favored sections. Now, the Spring is here, and the bright sunshine will soon dry the roads. Let us take fresh courage and go forward. There will be much to occupy our minds and fill our time; but we must not let our gardens or our flowers, our chickens, or our spring wardrobes, interfere with the Lord's work.

And you auxiliaries that have been hibernating so long, do not be content to merely take up the work again; but pause long enough to pick up the dropped stitches and do double service now to make up for your enforced idleness. Some of you were unable to observe the March services, but you have still the privilege of filling as many books of certificates of stock in our Mutual Building Fund as you may desire. These certificates will not be called in before June, though it is hardly necessary to say the sooner the money is sent to the treasury the better for our Cuban Mission in Florida and for our mountain schools.

Let us aim to make our home work more effective, and let us exercise our originality in making our monthly meetings more interesting. We must devise means to attract more of our women into our ranks.

When our visiting committees go on their special missions, and when we meet socially, we must not forget to urge the claims of Our Homes and of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, which has so generously given us a column. We must do all we can to increase the circulation and the reading of our church and missionary literature. God said, through the mouth of Hosea, "My people perish for lack of knowledge." Our church authorities are not in fault. Our Publication Committees and Missionary Boards are constantly sending out valuable information in regard to our home and foreign fields; some of our editors have put their papers at an almost nominal subscription price; and our Board of Missions has exceeded everything in sending out that charming little monthly, The World for Christ, at ten cents per year.

Still, many of our people do not take our papers, and, sadder still, some who subscribe do not read them. The threat of rejection, "Because you have rejected knowledge," is a fearful one. With the exercise of tact and judgment, we can do much to lessen this evil of careless ignorance. Let us talk of the papers of our church and societies, and call attention to particularly interesting articles. It will be well also to lend our magazines and papers where there is inability to subscribe, or even indifference. Are you aware that at the first Annual Meeting of the North Mississippi Conference P. and H. M. S. a resolution was passed, "That a superintendent of religious literature be appointed to inquire into and increase the circulation of our church literature and stimulate Bible reading"? This work, no longer official, has become individual, and I trust that we will all realize that loyalty to our P. and H. M. S., as well as to our church, should inspire us with the desire "to increase the circulation of our church literature," beginning with Our Homes. MRS. H. W. FOOTE.

About eight years ago we knew nothing but the local "Ladies' Aid Societies;" but when it became apparent that without homes for the preachers the gospel could not be sent to the great and growing West, "the resources of the Board of Church Extension were already taxed to the utmost to send the preachers; but where were they to live after they got there?" Miss Lucinda B. Helm suggested that the women build these homes. From the suggestion of a frail woman has grown the great connectional work which has spread from North to South, from East to West.

We often hear of "Ladies' Aid Societies" refusing to become connectional, and occasionally of connectional Auxiliaries desiring to be transformed into "local aid societies." Either of these things cause great grief and much anxious prayer to those who are earnestly laboring in this important branch of church work. We think if the members of such societies would, for a moment, consider the matter in its true light, they would act differently. The excuse oftenest made is that "Charity begins at home;" hence "we use our means at home." True, charity does begin at home, but we fear in instances like those mentioned above it not only begins, but ends at home. There does not exist to-day in any place a "Ladies' Aid Society" that takes any better care of parsonage or preacher than do our connectional societies. Besides, it is very little that the connectional societies are asked for; only the membership dues. All other money raised by them, even hundreds of dollars, is subject to their own disbursement, to be used on their own churches and parsonages, and reported as local work. When we unite ourselves with the church we promise to support all its institutions, and this is one of them. It is laid down in the Discipline, and is as much an integral part of the church work as any of its functions.

Oh, that we could arouse the good women of our land to unite in this grand work, and o'er the continent closes know that by their efforts every work in every Conference has a home wherein the man of God may dwell!

Will the women of our loved Mississippi Conference answer the appeal and meet the demand?

It is mild praise to say that we were delighted with the last issue of the Nashville Advocate, which was devoted to Parsonage and Home Mission work. When the Bishops almost unanimously heartily endorse this work, and Revs. W. B. Murrah, W. L. Nelms, and a host of our most brilliant preachers are out in forcible articles, there ought not to be a work in all the land without a suitable home for the preachers. MRS. S. S. COPE.

China.

In 1848 the Southern Methodist Church opened her first mission in China, sending over two missionaries and their wives. Little was accomplished previous to 1871, at which date there were 68 native members reported. Since that date progress has been rapid. The report for 1894 shows 1,[illegible] members, besides 503 applicants who are "on probation." A longer period of probation is required in our foreign than in our home fields, in order that professed converts may be thoroughly tested before final reception into the church.

Our General Board has in China [illegible] pupils in the various schools under its management; the Woman's Board has 673 pupils. Both the Boards have hospitals at Soochow, more than 13 000 patients being treated annually. This department of work affords magnificent opportunity for teaching Christ, and the results are exceedingly encouraging. Prejudice is slowly, but certainly, yielding to evidences of skill and kindness, and the people welcome as teachers those who have healed their bodies.

Dr. Davis, of the Southern Presbyterian Mission in China, says of the hospital of our Woman's Board: "Medical missionary work is prosecuted with vigor. The hospital is full. This institution is emphatically a missionary agency. The work done in the hospital reaches, to a wide extent, the higher classes. There are three native women serving as nurses. They were trained in the hospital; are Christians; they know how to deal with their Chinese friends. This hospital is ably managed."

During the three months ending Sept. 30, 1894, there were 537 patients treated at this hospital.

China is one of our most hopeful fields. The General Board of our church has 30 missionaries in the Empire, besides 36 native helpers, 14 of whom are native preachers. Our Woman's Board has 14 missionaries, and others ready to go as soon as the church is ready to send them. Our centers of operation are Shanghai, Soochow, Nantsiang, Kading. Of these, Shanghai and Soochow are the principal points.

The war now waging between China and Japan, however it may end as to division of territory, will greatly benefit our work in China. The infusion of new ideas of Western civilization, caught from Japanese methods and emphasized by Japanese victories, must largely destroy the stolid indifference to the Christian religion that has hitherto stood in our way. China is wise enough to see that Japan has profited by adopting American and European types of civilization, and can not but follow suit. We, unfortunately, as a Board, have not established work in Japan, but the General Board has done so, and with most encouraging success. Japan sustains nearly the same intellectual and influential relation to China that England does to Continental Europe. Japan for Christ means China for Christ. China now means all Asia conquered; and our church is fortunate in having her missions located in the south of China, in easy communication with Japan, and at great commercial centers. We have, providentially, the strategic points occupied. Never were posts more wisely chosen; never more bravely held.

We ought, both Boards, to quadruple our forces at once, and we can do it. We women of Louisiana and Mississippi must double the number of our Auxiliaries this year, and double the membership of each. The first can be accomplished by the district secretaries, in co-operation with the pastors and presiding elders; the second by enthusiastic and persistent effort on the part of those already enrolled.

We have this cause on our consciences; let us have it in our hearts also. LOUISIANA EDITOR.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. R. M. Blocker, Jeanerette, La.: "Our people have given us a 'ponnd-ing,' and it was a good one. We have had several valuable accessions to the church membership this year—one of them by certificate. Quite a clever gentleman was converted a few days ago, and was received into the church. He now prays in the church. We have organized a chapter of the Epworth League. The Lord is with us."

Rev. E. T. Breland, P. C., Whitting-ton circuit: "With happy hearts we are planning and praying for decided advance on all lines of Christian work. The kindness of our people, like that of all people we ever served, is greater than we are worthy of; and, with one hand clasped in the hand of God and the other in the hand of fallen human ity, we are bending all energies in a determined effort to save the lost. Will some one pray for us?"

Rev. W. D. Gaskins, P. C., Farmer-ville, La., March 25: "Last Wednesday night Rev. M. M. Morphis, an evan-gelist in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, closed one of the best revivals that was ever held in the town of Far-merville. Both Methodist and Baptist came together and united in the meet-ing. It was one of the best meetings that I ever attended. There were 45 accessions to the churches. Of that number the Methodists received 19, and more to follow at my next ap-pointment."

Rev. B. H. Sheppard, P. C., Ring-gold circuit Louisiana Conference, March 12: "We are moving on very smoothly on this charge. Was kindly received on my return from Confer-ence, and have been very well cared for. We have had no storm, but a steady breeze that has kept the par-sonage well supplied. Have been un-able to do much pastoral work on ac-count of a dislocated arm, which will probably remain stiff for life. We need a revival, and for this we are working and praying, that sinners may be saved and the church edified."

Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, Mansfield, La., March 13: "I have visited every circuit on the district save one. I have found the preachers hopefully at work; a truer set of men never manned a district. The sacrifices they are making to cultivate Immanuel's land is truly wonderful. Brown will soon have the Many Church, which was wrecked by a storm, ready for occu-pancy. Boynton is building a beauti-ful church at Fort Jessup, largely by his own labor. They have built a good, substantial church at Anacoco. Crews has greatly improved the par-sonage at Mansfield; so has Williams his parsonage. Some souls have been converted, and all are working and praying for a grand move on all lines."

Rev. W. T. Currie, P. C., Covington, La., March 20: "We are moving along smoothly. Have just closed two in-teresting meetings, assisted by Rev. E. M. Murril, of Mount Pleasant, Texas. He proved beyond a doubt, by Script-ure, to any reasonable thinking person, that sanctification was a second work of grace wrought in the heart of the regenerate. Results of the meeting: 18 converted, 21 sanctified, 4 joined the church; one prayer meeting start-ed. We have received 11 persons in full connection into the church, bap-tized 11 infants, married 2 couples, and buried 10 persons. Have commenced work on the M. E. Church at Slidell, and have repaired parsonage fence. God is with us. To him be all the praise. Amen. Pray for us."

Rev. J. N. Tucker, P. C., Bewel-come, Miss., March 14: "Roxie charge is progressing finely. Notwithstand-ing the inclement weather for the last two months, our congregations have been larger, and the manifestations of the Spirit more general than at this time last year. The order and atten-tion at every appointment have been almost perfect. All our societies have adopted the 'Renald's system' of church finance, making monthly payments for the support of their presiding elder and pastor. Any pastor wishing to improve his work, financially, should get his churches to adopt this or some similar plan. Sample copies, cards, etc., will be forwarded on applica-tion to The Christian Giver Co., At-lanta, Ga. The 'Pauline plan' is said to be an excellent one. Within the next three years, which I wish to spend on this charge, we will try to build one church, complete three oth-ers, provide a parsonage, and make an assessment of five hundred dollars for my successor; and last, but greatest of all, bring many precious souls to Christ."

Rev. H. M. Banks, Centerville charge, La., March 18: "I wrote you some time ago concerning our parson-age enterprise, asking that the breth-ren, sisters and friends would make a free-will offering and help us to build the preacher a comfortable house that would stand ready for the preacher as soon as he reached the work. We are hopeful. The Lord is working with us. We have seventy-six dollars in good subscription. We requested the offering to be sent to Eden; but since that time we have moved to Summer-ville, the way having opened for us to secure a house near enough for the children to go to the public school. Brethren and sisters who have the ability are still solicited to make an of-fering to the Lord, and send to me di-rect at Summerville, La. Herewith we acknowledge the offering of Sister J. H. McNeely, of Colfax, La., and hope others will soon follow her example. She adds two dollars to our treasury. If anyone wants to make a good in-vestment, I would say, Here is a good chance to do so. It seems that the way is growing brighter on all lines. The people are taking an interest in their preacher, and the work is more hopeful in every way. Pray for us on Centerville work."

Rev. W. B. Van Valkenburgh, Cam-eron, La.: "The Gulf coast of South-west Louisiana is still in tow. With alligators and oranges we live in the briny land of marshes and mosquitoes. Since reaching our work for this, the second year's work, with the stewards' advice and our presiding elder's assist-ance and consent, we have increased the force and enlarged the borders of the ninety miles of coast country that last year boasted of having both a pastor and local preacher to do her work. While the salary last year was small, very small, yet this year, with two preachers and additional work, we move forward with faith and con-fidence; faith in God and confidence in the people we are to serve. This letter finds me in Patterson with my father. The cozy parsonage and beautiful church edifice in this village of, say 1 500 souls, may interest the ADVOCATE readers. The Patterson appointment having for years been monthly or semi-monthly, has but recently awakened to a sense of her importance and respons-ibility as a preaching-place—a station. The church edifice is a modern structure with stained glass windows, and was built under the pastorate of Rev. F. N. Parker, and is now valued at $3,500. A real gem in itself. We found our father's family snugly packed away in a small, but cozy parsonage, just bought a few months before Confer-ence. This addition to the Patterson Church has been the finishing touch of station life, and, according to recent customs, we found the inmates enjoying poundings, Christian sym-pathy and encouragement. During my father's illness of more than a week the kind people of Patterson have constantly been on hand with min'strations of love and sympathy, and often even by more substantial evidence ceased not to express their devotion to both their pastor and his work. Many things of interest cling to Patterson and her people. May she live long in the gospel, and prosper in all her Christian undertakings!"

Rev. Thomas B. Clifford, Courtland, Miss.: "We start out with fine pros-pects, full of hope for this, our second, year's work on this charge. The new year opened very auspiciously; the people—our friends—did not forget us. Very substantially did they remember us; amongst the most substantial sou-venirs being a barrel of patent flour and a 'whole hog.' A new carpet for the parsonage from the ladies has come to hand, and now occupies the place of the superannuated one. Other work has been done to make this parsonage a comfortable home for the preacher and his family. Paint, varnish, etc., furnished by the good women, together with 'elbow grease' supplied by this scribe, has added much toward the ap-pearance of things hereabouts. Our first Quarterly Conference was held the fourth Saturday and Sunday in Janu-ary, and, despite the fact that the weather was extremely cold, and roads in some places almost impassable, near-ly all of the official members were present, and they evidently did not base the preacher's salary on 'low prices and hard times' (so called), for they raised it twenty dollars over last year. Rev. H. C. Morehead, the ef-fective presiding elder of this district, was present, magnifying the office, his talks and preaching being good to the use of edifying, and the time for our separation came all too soon. He is a man full of faith and the Holy Ghost. His term of office as presiding elder of this (Sardis) district expires by limi-tation with the closing of this Confer-ence year. May his lines continue to fall in pleasant places, and may the Lord grant unto him a goodly heritage! Some one has already stated through the columns of the ADVOCATE that only twelve charges in the North Mis-sissippi Conference paid all assess-ments in full last year. We deplore the fact, but rejoice in being one of the twelve, and not only so, but fur-ther, that we raised last year for all purposes more than any other circuit (we mean circuit) in the bounds of our Conference. This year we are making a special effort to build a Methodist Church here at Courtland. Nearly all of the exterior work is done; stained glass windows (one a memorial) will soon be inserted, and when the whole is completed 'twill be the prettiest Methodist Church on the line of rail-road between Memphis and Grenada. We hereby beg to tender thanks to our many friends—and especially the la-dies—from many parts of the State who have so materially aided us thus far in its erection. We can not now say how soon it will be ready for pub-lic worship, but we announce that the very first sermon will be preached by Rev. John Rushey, of Winona, who for six years was the pastor of these people. Dedication services will be in the hands of our presiding elder, and we anticipate the presence of Bishop Charles B. Galloway at that day and time."

NORTH LOUISIANA NOTES.

I am away up here in North Louisi-ana. I came here just because I am a Methodist preacher, and Bishop Gran-bery said, "Come." I am in a new Conference, have a new charge and a new presiding elder—in fact, every-thing here is new to me, but old to my predecessors. I am having new experience. My table has heretofore been just large enough for two, but now it is a long, long one, large enough for seven. My new presiding elder and his family board with me. He has a nice, unlured wife, and some sure-enough children; real chil-dren, not doll babies. I think I will like him finely when I get acquainted with him. He is gone so much we see but little of him. He is one presiding el-der that will not miss an appointment. It may rain, sleet, snow, or freeze, but it never stops him. He has not missed an appointment this year. He left here week before last, and his wife tells me that she is looking for him next week.

This (Homer) is a preacher town. There are four itinerant preachers here, beside two Baptists. A prohi-bition election was held here last Fall, which resulted in giving us a dry town. Soon the preachers began moving in, and the saloon keepers moving out. Then somebody got up in prayer meet-ing, and said, "Glory to God! the saloon keepers are leaving, and the preachers are coming." Yes, we have preachers in town—the studious Vaughan, the logical Upton, the dignified Harper, and the bombastic Skipper.

I find kind and appreciative people here. Congregations are good; prayer meetings well attended—sometimes as many as one hundred present; aid so-cieties working, and religious enthusi-asm almost at high tide. I took my foreign missionary collection, and got the full amount asked for—$90. Oc-casionally I send in a new subscriber to the ADVOCATE.

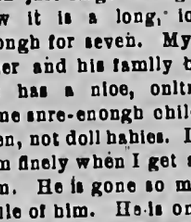
Scrofula in the Neck

The following is from Mrs. J. W. Tillbrook, wife of the Mayor of McKeesport, Penn.:



Willie Tillbrook.

"My little boy Willie, now 6 years old, two years ago had a bunch under one ear which the doctor said was Scrofula. He finally lanced it and it discharged for some time. We then began giving Willie Hood's Sarsaparilla and he improved very rapidly until the sore healed up. Last winter it broke out again, followed by Erysipelas. We again gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla with excellent results and he has had no more trouble. His cure is due to

A VERY REMARKABLE OFFER!

A $40 Sewing Machine for $20, and the N. O. Advocate Thrown In!

This may seem surprising, but we mean what we say. The machine which we handle is "The Favorite High Arm Singer," the manufacturer's catalogue price of which is $40. Read the fol-lowing description taken from the manufacturer's catalogue, and then read our offer.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer Sewing Machine, as you will perceive, is very attractive in appearance, the cut being an exact representation. It is strongly constructed from the best grades of material produced, and its adjustment perfect; also combines simplicity, durability and workmanship of the highest order; and in point of finish, light-running and sewing qualities, is unsurpassed. In addition to the above-mentioned qualities, our Favorite Im-proved High Arm Singer has the latest, most useful and practical improve-ments, such as a perfect Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, positive Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self-Setting Needle, Tension Liberator and Loose Pulley, and is without any exception the best machine ever produced for the money.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer is the only Singer style machine using a Cylinder Shuttle. The bed of machine being sunk flush with table and nicely hinged so it can be turned backed to admit of oiling and cleaning under works without the least inconvenience.

"Automatic Bobbin Winder, used on the Favorite Improved High Arm Singer, is positive in its operation, and works to perfection, winding the thread on bobbin as evenly as thread is wound on a spool.

"Flat Tension Spring. Every lady who has used machines with coil tension spring, knows the value of having a machine with flat tension, 'same as used on the Favorite Improved High Arm Singer,' for the reason that when tension is once set it always remains the same and does not alter while machine is in operation, requiring operator to stop every little while and re-adjust same.

"The Cabinet Work is of the very latest design, made of the best quality of Oak or Walnut, as preferred. Unique and attractive in style, and elaborate in finish. The rich nickel-plated trimmings harmonize with the general hand-some appearance of the machine.

"Furnished free with every machine are the following-named accessories: One Foot Hemmer, one Screw Driver, one Wrench, one Oil Can and Oil, one Gauge Screw, one extra Check Spring, one Package of Needles, five Bobbins and one Instruction Book.

"Extra Set of Attachments also free with each machine, consisting of the following: One Tucker, one Foot Ruffler, one Set of Plate Hemmers, four dif-ferent widths, up to seven-eighths of an inch; one Binder and one Thread Cutter.

Bishop Galloway in Birmingham.

We are sorry that our space is now so limited that we can only give a brief notice of the Bishop's very able and eloquent address last night at First Church. The magnificent auditorium and galleries of the church were well filled. The Bishop was at his best. His theme, Missions, fully possessed him, and seemed to thrill and inspire him. His address was a new revelation to the people on the subject of missions. Our obligation to the heathen was stressed with a logic that bore down all opposition and changed opposers into advocates.

The canvass that Bishop Galloway is making of the church, in the interest of missions, will ultimate in the development of a missionary conscience in the church and an enthusiasm unknown to Southern Methodism. Bishop Galloway's position in the church, his universal popularity, his burning zeal, impassioned eloquence and brilliant oratory, pre-eminently fit him for the great mission. Let the whole church pray that he may be so baptized with the Holy Spirit as to achieve the desire of his heart. — Alabama Advocate.

Dr Broadus.

Dr. John A. Broadus, of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, died at his home in Louisville, Ky., on the sixteenth instant.

We indorse the following extract from Dr. Kingsbury's tribute in the Messenger:

He was learned, able, well balanced, wise, conservative and very amiable in temper, a most genial, lovable, true man. We do not think anyone could know him well without holding him in reverence and affection. He was one of the foremost Grecians in Southland, and an author of useful, learned and able works. His preaching was a model of simplicity, lucidity and directness. He was not in a high sense an orator, but he was effective, interesting, thoughtful and scriptural. He could take a whole chapter for a text and most dexterously and luminously handle it, bringing out all of its main teaching and bending and focalizing it. The Baptists are indeed bereaved in the departure of so admirable a Christian minister, of so excellent an exegete, of so fine a preacher, of so learned and useful a scholar. The South is a decided loser because Dr. Broadus was indeed one of its best endowed divines, one of its best all-round men—a good, useful, able, true, noble man, and a humble disciple of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Some person with a lively imagination inquires: "Suppose people should preach what they practice."—Standard.

A Disgraceful Affair.

We think it would be difficult to find in the annals of any country calling itself civilized a parallel to the disgraceful scene which occurred recently in the Indian a Legislature on the eleventh. A bill had been passed by the Lower House, the effect of which was to supplant a Democratic official with a Republican. The governor vetoed the bill, and sent in his veto message a few minutes before the hour when the session would expire by limitation. If the veto message could be prevented from reaching the speaker before the hour arrived, then the bill would become a law and the Republican official would be installed. An effort was, therefore, made and successfully caried out to cut off the veto message. First, the governor's private secretary with the message in his hands was locked up in the elevator of the Capitol until the police came to his rescue. Then the door of the Representatives' Hall was closed against him, until the Democratic members of the House opened it by force. Then ensued a scene such as one naturally expects only among Comanche Indians. The Democrats tried to carry the private secretary to the speaker's stand, while the Republicans did all in their power to prevent it. There was yelling and hooting. Men were knocked down and trampled upon. Chairs and desks were broken in pieces. The Democrats finally succeeded in getting the governor's secretary to the speaker's stand, but just as they did so the speaker, in stentorian voice, pronounced the House adjourned. Just at this time some one snatched the message and disappeared in the crowd The governor's private secretary came out of the contest bruised and bleeding, and with his clothing torn into tatters. If this is civilization, what is barbarism? The pulpit and the press have still much work to do to educate the people of this country up to the point at which they will prefer right to the triumph of partisanism.

Why Superannuates Need Help.

A good many church members display an astonishing amount of ignorance with regard to the condition and needs of our Conference claimants. The uninstructed believe that a preacher who has grown gray in the service ought to have laid up enough of this world's goods to supply all his wants after retirement. The almost utter dependence of the worn-out itinerants is not fully realized by our people; else they would be better cared for. Many of the faithful already have this matter upon their hearts and consciences, but we wish to stir up the minds of all by way of remembrance. Let us consider briefly some of the reasons why these veterans of the ministry have a peculiar claim upon us.

1. The salaries they receive during the time of service are, as a rule, barely sufficient to cover the cost of the necessaries of life, to say nothing of comforts and luxuries. The average salary of a preacher in this country is startlingly low; so much so as in many cases to excite surprise and contemptuous pity on the part of professional men. We suppose it is well that this is so, for large salaries would no doubt attract many unworthy men into the ministerial ranks. In not a few instances, however, the heralds of the cross are so pinched that they can hardly escape going in debt. Many are forced to supplement their meager salaries by selling books, raising vegetables for the market, running dairies, etc. In few homes is such rigid economy practiced as in the homes of our Methodist itinerants. Now and then, however, some stingy soul raises the cry that the preachers are getting rich.

Occasionally a preacher possessed of extraordinary business sense succeeds in accumulating a small fortune. Once in a while we hear that unexpected good luck has attended an investment made by a minister; but how many such cases can we count? The minister who dabbles in business usually does so to the detriment of his temporal as well as spiritual interests.

From the start, then, a minister must resign all hope of becoming rich or even independent. Fortune-hunting, the hope of acquiring earthly riches, he must leave to others, and bend all his energies to the one work of saving souls. In every other business, if we may use such a comparison, men by exercising due diligence have a chance to lay up something for a rainy day. In the commercial world all energies are bent in the direction of money-making. No matter what the occupation, there is always the attempt to get the best equivalent for the labor bestowed. While not all are successful in money getting, yet for each merchant and mechanic and professional man there is the possibility of achieving a fortune, or at least of laying up something for the future. It is commendable in any man to labor diligently and to strive to increase his earnings, provided he use legitimate means. Business men of all classes alike take advantage of every opportunity to better themselves. Moreover, the longer a man is in business the more skill does he acquire, and the better are his chances of success.

The minister of the gospel, however, must be content with whatever, people see fit to give, whether it be sufficient for his needs or not. Though often slandered and reproached for preaching for money, he must meekly bear his burden. After devoting the best of his life to the work of saving humanity, at last in his declining years he is turned out upon the cold world, homeless and helpless. His only skill is in winning souls to Christ. His work as a preacher of righteousness has unfitted him for success in money making; and even had he skill in this direction, his strength is failing, and capital he has none. It is not an overstatement to say that the average preacher could make far more money in any other calling.

2. Preachers in order to be most efficient must continually be buying books. A carpenter must have tools. Likewise a preacher must have books, and must study them, else the fountain of thought will soon run dry. The preacher who never buys and reads a new book in this age of book-making will scarcely be able to present fresh, vigorous thought. Now, books cost money, and so away goes all the spare cash of the itinerant for these repositories of knowledge. How sadly many a preacher is hampered because he is too poor to have a well-stocked library! We have known a few brethren of the ministry to forego many of the comforts, and even some of the necessaries of life, in order that they might have money to buy books.

3. Preachers are expected to entertain largely — in fact, to keep open house. Such being the case, even if they received princely salaries, there would be little chance of laying up anything for the future. No other class of men have so many calls made upon them in this direction, or exercise so kindly a hospitality. It is an anomaly that some persons after partaking of this hospitality will criticise a preacher for extending it.

4. No matter what the salary, it is expected of preachers and of their families that they shall dress well. The minister who wears shabby clothes, whether he can help it or not, is usually at a discount. Extravagance in dress surely can not be charged against our ministers. But can good clothes be had for nought?

5. Our preachers are under the necessity of moving at least every four years, and, on an average, much oftener. Hence any money that an itinerant may have saved during his stay at one charge is used up in moving to another. And so it goes as long as he is efficient.

6. Preachers are, perhaps, the most liberal-hearted set of men in the world. Their calling makes them so. They would be unChrist-like were they not. The calls for charity made upon them are almost innumerable. The church, it is true, responds to most of these calls when presented; but still there are many cases where the pastor, out of excess of pity, himself gives, and so his purse is kept constantly drained. Again, preachers contribute more to missions in proportion to salary than any other set of men in the church. The same is true of them in regard to all our Conference collections. Where then is there room for accumulating a competency?

7. Preachers do not own their homes. Parsonages are church property. Consequently, when dropped off the effective list, unless their children have homes, they are homeless. Furthermore, the furniture used by the itinerant in most cases belongs not to him, but to the church; and so when he is retired he has to buy everything. We know of one itinerant who, after serving the best stations in his Conference, at the time of his retirement owned nothing in the way of household furniture save a rocking-chair and a small table.

In view of these considerations, what wonder that our superannuates and the widows of deceased preachers are largely dependent upon bounty? The church has no more sacred duty than the care of the gospel veterans who "have borne the heat and burden of the day."

Very Liberal.

When the Protestant Episcopal Church some time since took action looking to a union with other Protestant Churches, this was accepted by some as evidence of increasing liberality on the part of this church. What progress has been made in liberality is evidenced by the following fact: The commission appointed to revise the constitution and canons of the church recommends the following canon for adoption:

No person shall be permitted to officiate or serve in any congregation of this church by preaching or by performing any priestly, clerical or ministerial act without producing sufficient evidence of his being duly ordained to minister in this church.

This is simply re-enacting in different words the same canon now in force. There has been no increase in liberality whatever. The position of the church is the same as ever. "We are the only church, and our ministers are the only ministers of Christ." The church would be very glad to unite all the other churches in the same way that the wolf unites with the lamb—by swallowing them.

A New Book.

THE PASTOR'S COMPANION. By Rev. M. R. Drury, D. D. W. J. Shuey, Publisher, Dayton, Ohio.

A pocket manual of forms, services and Scripture readings for special occasions, together with a brief summary of rules of order for deliberative assemblies, and suggestive outlines for revival and funeral sermons. Adapted to the use of ministers of all evangelical denominations. This little book has been prepared in response to a demand for a convenient volume containing forms and services for all occasions. It is practical and useful, and will be welcomed by a large number of ministers. A valuable feature is the section giving in concise form the rules which govern the proceedings of deliberative assemblies. Handsomely printed and bound in fine pliable leather. Postpaid, 75 cents, net.

If it is possible to abolish indolence and prodigality, intemperance and dishonesty, imbecility and ignorance, then we may hope to abolish poverty; but we shall find no scheme which will avail to improve the general conditions of men without improving their characters.—Arkansas Methodist.

When we read of a revival in which a hundred people, more or less, were converted, and not a single church paper put into one of the homes thus brought into the church, we do not consult a prophet as to the outcome. The next preacher will have a time hunting up and dropping names.—Central Methodist.

A Chicago judge, in sentencing two men to the penitentiary for sending immoral pictures and books through the mail, said: "You are vipers, and your crime is second only to murder. I would rather that a rattlesnake came into my house and crawled into my children's couch, than to have your vile literature carried to them."

It is announced through the secular press that Rev. W. R. Sims, professor of English in the University of Mississippi, has resigned his chair, surrendered his credentials, and left for parts unknown, under charges of immoral conduct. Mississippi Methodism would not have been more startled by a clap of thunder from a cloudless sky.

A Japanese of our acquaintance in this city of San Francisco says that it seems a little strange to him that Japan had been regarded as an uncivilized country until she whipped China in war, but now is complimented highly on her advanced civilization. It is an encouraging sign that the Emperor and Empress of China are reading the Bible. Should they, as the result, open their minds and hearts to its saving truth, how much it would mean for Christian civilization and for the enlightenment and redemption of the millions over whom they rule! God is at work in the shaking which their vast empire is now receiving.—Presbyterian.

A student at Oxford, England, said to some companions, as they came out from chapel: "I ought not to have come to chapel this morning." Being asked why, he replied: 'I am going to write a criticism on ——'s picture at the Academy, and I want to be in a perfectly diabolical temper." There are some brethren who seem to act on that principle when they go to write about what they regard as errors.—Western Recorder.

***

It is astounding that some pastors, and the people generally, are so little interested in the circulation of a worthy denominational paper. Pastors stand sadly in their own light when they fail to encourage the members of their churches to take a good denominational paper. It is simply impossible for church people to be in the largest degree useful to their churches, to their denomination and to the cause of Christ at large, if they do not take a religious paper. There is no investment of money which will bring larger returns for the church.—Mid-Continent.

***

A careless or inefficient steward may, without positive opposition, starve out the ministry in the midst of plenty and a willing people; for no other member feels at liberty to act in his place without appointment. He stands between the pastor and his support. He is the commissary of the church militant, and by his non-action can contribute more to defeat than all the strategy of the enemy. On the contrary, when energetic and liberal stewards are employed, the church partakes of their spirit; the congregation devises liberal things, poverty vies with wealth, and comparatively small and feeble societies amply sustain the institutions of the church.—Bishop McTyeire.

Spain as well as France is open to evangelical agencies. The Protestant movement started there a few years ago is making decided and encouraging headway. According to latest reports, the Reformed Spanish Church numbers ten thousand adherents, the most of them belonging to the laboring classes. At the same time, other workers are on the field. The American Board has missionaries at Santander. Nor are the Baptists idle, having six small churches. A missionary is authority for the statement that it is no unusual thing to preach to a congregation of from three hundred to six hundred persons, while sometimes the hearers are as many as fifteen hundred. Let the gospel have free course and be glorified in the land of the Inquisition!—Presbyterian.

In an exchange we see the statement that "the exploration going on at Babylon, under Prof. Peters, is yielding rich results. A temple of one hundred and thirty rooms has been uncovered, and tons of clay tablets and inscribed bricks have been found." The temple is supposed to be one that was enlarged by Nebuchadnezzar. In such a large collection of tablets much additional information as to the history of Babylon will doubtless be secured. The wisdom of God in keeping these records concealed and protected until the present time is worthy of our admiration. In earlier centuries men were not prepared for the careful study of the tablets, or for a due appreciation of their contents. Just at the right time God offers us these records.—Observer.

Domestic Missions.

A LESSON FROM THE MINUTES OF OUR CONFERENCE.

To "read" a dictionary and to "study" statistics may be alike dry and uninviting, but good ideas may be absorbed by either.

Looking over the Minutes of the Louisiana Conference for 1894, one is surprised at what he sees. Out of a total assessment for domestic missions of $3,401, only $1 814 70 was collected. Two charges paid a small amount above their assessments. Only thirteen charges paid the assessment in full Thirty-three charges paid 25 per cent. only (or less) of their assessments—from 2 per cent. to 25 per cent. Thirteen charges, aggregating 2,936 members, paid nothing, although one of these charges paid the pastor $677 35, and another paid the pastor $370. Every charge in the New Orleans district paid something, while one charge in the Baton Rouge district reports nothing for domestic missions. In the Opelousas district there are five charges which report nothing, which charges have an average membership of 66, and paid an average of salaries amounting to $99 45. Alexandria district has two non-paying charges, which paid salaries averaging $107 05

The worst showing is in the Shreveport district, where there are seven charges paying nothing for domestic missions. These seven charges paid for their pastors an average of $128 09, and have an average membership of 193, aggregating 1 625 souls—fractions omitted.

The Arcadia district has one non-paying charge which has a membership of 125, and paid the pastor $175 The Delhi district also has one non-paying charge, which has 139 members, and paid the pastor $370.17.

That these thirteen pastoral charges with thirteen consecrated preachers and 2 936 members, should make such reports would be incredible were one not confronted with the fact. Is it possible that one could shut his eyes and pass through a crowd of 2,936 people, asking each for a contribution for domestic missions, and come out with nothing? Can it be that there are thirteen preachers in one Conference who do not try to collect money for the enlightenment of "the heathen at our door?"

We forbear to catechise, and leave the brethren composing these delinquent charges, and the pastors "who are over God's heritage" therein, to ponder and pray over these matters.

Sec'y B'd of Missions, La. Conf.

Epworth League Conference.

[The following circular explains itself.—EDITOR.]

The second International Conference of the Epworth League, that meets in Chattanooga next June, is being extensively advertised, and we earnestly desire that your section shall be represented.

If you have a chapter in your charge, we'll take special interest and early action with a view to sending delegates. If you have not organized a League, do so, or present it to your Sunday-school or congregation, and urge them to take part in that great gathering.

We stress these points: The railroads have given a rate of one fare for the round trip; board can be secured at reasonable rates, viz: $1 to $3 per day; the meeting will be the largest assembly of Methodist young people ever known, coming from all parts of the United States, Canada, and perhaps Mexico; we base our estimate of attendance not less than 10,000; it is not a legislative body, but assembled in the spiritual interest of Methodism.

We are depending upon every Leaguer to help make the Conference a success. Agitate the subject fully, and advise us as early as possible what to expect.

The official program, containing sketches of those who take part therein, all of the music used and many items of "historic" interest, will be ready about the middle of April. Price 25 cents each. We will gladly fill your orders.

Chairman Att. Committee.

Once More.

TO THE BRETHREN OF MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA.

Our Bishop Galloway has returned from the East more than ever filled with enthusiasm at the bright prospect for mission work in those "regions beyond." Among the many openings for work where 'tis most sorely needed he puts, in the very front rank of usefulness and need of help, the "Kobe Industrial and Training-school for Girls." He was charmed with the success already being achieved in straitened quarters, and very anxious to see the institution equipped with a suitable building. The Board is not able at this time to do this urgently needed work. Its accomplishment is the burning desire of our dear sister, Mrs. M. I. Lambuth, who has already done so much for our work in China and Japan, and is gladly offering to spend the remnant of her days in this service. We could find no one more competent, more zealous or loyal. It is her purpose, authorized by the Board, to go to Japan in May.

She will be badly hampered unless we at once raise the means to build the house so long delayed. I make this last urgent appeal to all lovers of our holy religion and true philanthropists, to send some amount according to your ability to T. B. Holt, at Nashville, giving this special direction to your gift.

Will not every pastor (specially in Dr. Lambuth's old and honored Conference) present the matter to his congregation some fair Sabbath morning in the near future? State the case kindly and plainly. Some will be sure to respond with free-will offerings. It will not interfere with any other claim—will prove a blessing to the givers and the solicitors. Just about five hundred dollars more will make Sister Lambuth supremely happy, and set in motion currents that shall swell to rivers of joy in the near future where all is now practically dry and sterile. Who will set the key-note high? Report to Dr. Black, who will keep an open column.

Hopefully, J. P. DRAKE.

That's What.

When with your head you suffer pain,
Indicative of weary brain,
You simply take that substance pure,
PRESTON'S HED-ACHE—the cure is sure.

Get Ready. Do Not Delay.

Pastors and Sunday-school superintendents of North Mississippi Conference, please send me your orders at once for Children's Day Programs. They are now ready, and will cost you nothing but the observance of the "Day," according to paragraph 248, page 107 Discipline, 1894. Let us prepare in due time, and do better in this cause this year than ever before. Read and observe the above-mentioned paragraph and let us carry it out in the letter and spirit. Remit the whole amount collected to Rev. Geo. H. Lipscomb, treasurer, Como, Miss., who will remit from the aggregate to the General Boards.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

JOB'S PIETY AND FIRST TRIAL.

(Job 1, 1-22)

Prof. Ewald, the celebrated Hebrewist of Goettingen, declared the Book of Job to be a poetic drama, designed to teach the divine philosophy of suffering.

1. Job was a devout man, though rich. His wealth immense. His piety unquestionable.

(1) The poor not pious because of poverty. Nor the rich wicked because of riches. The salvation and ruin of Dives and Lazarus resulted from a difference not pecuniary.

(2) Not those who are, but they that will be rich, the apostle says, fall into temptation and snares.

(3) Many of the patriarchs, as well as Joseph of Arimathea and Cornelius, were rich.

(4) The church of our day has reason to congratulate itself that not a few of its members are opulent, pecuniarily as well as religiously.

2. Job was a devoted father. Offering now sacrifice for his children indicates that he was habitually concerned about their religious well-being.

(1) See to it that your offspring develop physically and mentally faithfully. Only the best schools are good enough for them. But neglect them not religiously.

(2) Assist in making the Sunday-school what it should be—the spiritual birthplace of the children.

(3) Not send them, but take them with you to church. Sit with you. Inquire at home about the chief points of the sermon.

3. Tragically Job lost wealth and health. But in this calamity his religion asserted its true lustre. Hear him: "The Lord gave, the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord."

(1) Wealth and health are a gift of God. His suffrage permits retention.

(2) As God was familiar with the character of Job—"one that feareth God and escheweth evil"—so he is familiar with us. Knows of our struggles to lead holy lives.

(3) Job did not become morose, sullen, sour, because of reverses. Sad that misfortune fills so many people with bitterness! Hate God and man.

4. Satan's agency in this transaction is food for solemn thought.

(1) Satan is a person. Beelzebub the chief of devils. His subalterns numerous.

(2) Very powerful. The atmosphere, bad man's actions, flitting microbes of disease are at his disposal. He directs them.

(3) He is a fomenter of brawls. By lying and by malicious insinuations he embitters man against man. He even attempts to deceive God: "Doth Job serve God for naught?"

Beware!

Ransacking old desks and garrets may be turned to advantage. Mr. Wm. Hewitt, of 44 Irving Place, New York City, will buy old U. S. postage stamps used prior to 1861, other than the one, two and three-cent issues, and also Confederate stamps.

We invite special attention to the ad. of the Bank of North America in this issue. In addition to all the usual banking facilities, this bank offers special advantages to its patrons in the matter of banking hours. Instead of putting yourself to a world of inconvenience to do your banking before three o'clock, you have the entire day from 9 A. M. to 8 P. M. This is a very decided advantage to business men in the city and out of it.

TRUE WORTH.

BY ALICE CARY.

True worth is in being, not seeming—
In doing, each day that goes by,
Some little good, not in dreaming
Of what things to do by and by;
For whatever men say in their blindness,
And spite of the fancies of youth,
There is nothing so kingly as kindness,
And nothing so royal as truth.

Books are Reading for Young People.

BY MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER,
Editor Harper's Bazar.

By all means encourage the children to read. The formation of a taste for reading and of a love for good books will do much to tide them over the rough places they will surely meet during the years between fourteen and twenty-one, years when they are children no longer, but young people facing life and its duties.

Parent are often perfectly happy and at ease about their boys and girls when they see them occupied in reading. "He is all right," the mother says, contentedly, when she goes to look for Jack or Tom, and finds the lad absorbed in a printed page. "He is all right; he has a book in his hand." And the young daughter, sitting by the window in the waning light, so engaged in the story which claims her attention that she is for the moment deaf and blind to everything else, father and mother exchange pleased and delighted glances. They like to have a girl of their own whose tastes are so evidently intellectual and refined. To many busy American parents it does not occur to inquire very closely into the character of the books their children read, a book seeming to their minds to carry its passport of respectability along with its type and its cover.

When you think of it, friends, this is very short-sighted, since of all inanimate things in the world nothing is so alive as a book. It is thought and expression crystallized. It is an embalmed personality. I take the warm, throbbing hand of an author when I read his book, and I feel his heart-beat in his printed talk, though he and I may be separated by the width of the seas, or he may have left this earth a hundred years ago. A man lives in his book, and a book, good, bad, or indifferent, is always more or less vital.

Therefore, as much care should be taken in the selection of reading for the young as in the choice of their friends or companions.

Naturally, young people, like older people, prefer the book which is chatty and entertaining to the book which is dry and dull. They ask for a story, or if they read essays and histories, they want the story style, rather then the didactic and prosaic style which demands the sort of exertion that one's mind must make when studying arithmetic and algebra. Deep in us all lives the love of a story; and the best of books, the Bible, shows us that our Father in heaven approves of this instinct, for the book inspired of God is simply a succession of stories, stung like pearls on a string of historical sequence.

Still, our bright young person, with every avenue to the brain open, and every faculty awake and alert, must not read only stories. Nor will he or she, as the case may be, wish to do this, if the mother has taken tactful pains to cultivate a regard for reading, and for reading along approved lines, while yet the child has been under her moulding hand.

In the home there should always be an evening hour for reading aloud. In this hour, some grown person who can read acceptably should act as author's interpreter to the family. A good volume of biography, the life of a great man such as Abraham Lincoln, of a soldier such as Napoleon, of a missionary, or an explorer, or a hero of any description, is admirable for general reading to a family. Of course, the youngest ones do not understand everything they hear; but they understand more than they receive credit for; they enjoy the pulse and rhythmic flow of a story, and insensibly they acquire a fuller and richer vocabulary than in almost any other way. If a religious periodical is taken—as it should be in every Christian home—let it be read aloud to the children, fostering not alone their intelligence, but educating them in denominational loyalty, and making them, in a sense, citizens of the Christian world. A family without a religious paper misses a fine and broadening influence; and a family in which the religious paper is read by the elders only is defrauded of a grand privilege, and a weekly opportunity for reaping definite advantages.

I am often asked by anxious mothers whether I think they should let they children read fairy stories. I always answer in the affirmative. Imagination is a glorious faculty, and one that needs more than ever to be developed, not suppressed, in a period when commercial standards are very highly honored, and material wealth seems more desired than any other gain. Far from wishing to bring a child up on a diet of facts, I would supply him liberally with beautiful fancies, and fill his daily life with thoughts which belong to the invisible, perhaps to the impossible. The faith faculty flourishes best in soil where the imagination is vivid, and the soul has been encouraged to find and use her wings. Hans Christian Andersen was not far from wrong when he called imagination "a leaf from the sky."

Stories of adventure, and stories which tell how to do things, are wholesome reading for young people of either sex. But we must draw the line on the one hand at those wild and thrilling tales which glorify robbers and pirates, and set little fellows on the runaway road, with rusty pistols in their pockets and a tramp's outfit in knives and bundles and stolen money. No good ever comes of that kind of dime-novel reading, and equally unprofitable and as deleterious are the silly, sentimental, and rubbishy novelettes which get into the hands of young girls, giving them false notions of life and suggesting evil thoughts. Of the many popular novels of the day, read and passed from hand to hand, it must sadly be confessed that for the reading of young people they are absolutely unfit. Never again will the mind be so pure and virginal as it was before its introduction to some brilliant books of the period, which outline scenes and dwell upon facts of which young girls should remain in ignorance. The protection of innocence should be afforded our boys and girls so long as may be practicable; and, if they must learn of the evil and sin in the world, let it be not in the pages of a fascinating romance, but from parental lips, shorn of meretricious splendor.

I know mothers who make a point of first reading every book which goes into their children's hands. But a hard-pressed woman, with the manifold demands of housekeeping, sewing, cooking, visiting, nursing, and so forth, and so forth indefinitely, has not always time for this. It is safe to trust a good author. The well-known names are not associated, as a rule, with novels which go up like rockets, but they have a certain permanence, like the fixed stars. Buy a library ticket for your boy, and advise him to ask always for the best, not the second best, literature. Do not too implicitly trust even the Sunday-school library when it is your daughter who is concerned. Ask her teacher to look over the catalogue with the child, for a commonplace story, full of sentimentalism, and just flavored with piety, sometimes drifts into the Sunday-school library, and is a source of harm.

Senator Wilson's Courage.

After Henry Wilson's first election to the United States Senate, he gave his friends a dinner. The table was set with not one wineglass upon it.

"Where are the glasses?" asked several of the guests, merrily.

"Gentlemen," said Mr. Wilson, "you know my friendship for you and my obligations to you. Great as they are, they are not great enough to make me forget 'the rock whence I was hewn and the pit whence I was dug.' Some of you know how the curse of intemperance overshadowed my youth. That I might escape I fled from my early surroundings. For what I am I am indebted, under God, to my temperance vow and my adherence to it. Call for what you want to eat, and if this hotel can provide it, it shall be forthcoming; but wines and liquors can not come to this table with my consent, because I will not spread in the path of another the snare from which I escaped."

Three rousing cheers showed the brave senator that men admired the man who has the courage of his convictions.

He afterward filled the office of Vice-President of the United States.—Exchange.

Reading for Children.

No child can attain a vigorous mental development who is allowed free access to the mass of cheap literature to be had at the present time. Trashy reading impairs the memory, saps the mind of its vigor and destroys the relish for useful knowledge. In this age when great moral and even spiritual truths must be clothed in fiction to be made palatable to the minds of the young, it may be impossible to banish all fictitious works; but care will certainly be required that the fiction does not make a deeper impression on the imagination than the truth does on the heart and conscience. The staid maxims and precepts that illuminated the pages of the spelling books and English readers less than half a century ago, although plain almost to severity in language, yet possessed a brevity and clearness of diction that gave them a wholesome relish, while their dignity of style and earnestness inspired veneration and faith. And although this was one extreme, yet may it not be questioned if it was not more wholesome to the growing mind than the present method, that seeks to convey these teachings through the channel of an excited imagination?—Southern Advocate.

There is hardly a sadder spectacle on earth than that furnished by a godless and graceless old man, who has lived in this Christian land perhaps three-quarters of a century, and all of whose days have been spent without any effort to lay up for himself a treasure in heaven. His childhood and youth were thus spent; his manhood and middle age were thus spent; and now there he is, in old age, with life on earth almost gone, on the very margin of the grave, with eternity just before him, and with not the first thing yet done in the way of preparing to meet God in judgment. Death frowns upon him. He finds no pleasure in thinking of the past, none in the present and none in the future. Meditation brings him no joy. Memory and conscience afford him no comfort. He is without the blessing of Christian hope when he most needs it. The disabilities and pains of his body make life a burden to him. The activities of business that once employed his thoughts he can no longer bear. He must, from sheer necessity, lay down the earthly tasks of life. In a short time he will be dead; and he knows it. The book divine is no source of comfort to him. He is not sufficiently familiar with it to be comforted by it, and not in a moral condition to receive its comforts or be entitled to them. Alas! for that man there are no prospects before him that sweetly invite his thoughts to the spirit world. The simple truth is, he has laid up for himself no treasure in heaven. This one thing he has not done. Many things he has done, but this never. He may leave millions to his children, but there are no millions for him in the skies. His whole record on earth is wrong, fundamentally and awfully wrong. And now there is, at last, in his feebleness and decay—near the end of a wasted and misspent existence on earth—a sore affliction to himself and a solemn warning to every passer-by. Who will envy him his lot? Who should imitate his example?—Independent.

So live with men as considering always that God sees thee; so pray to God as if every man heard thee. Do nothing which thou wouldst not have God see done. Desire nothing which may either wrong thy profession to ask or God's honor to grant.—Bishop Henshaw.

HYGIENE.

Health Habits of Susan B. Anthony.

This remarkable woman thus describes her health habits: "I attribute the secret of my good health to the fact that I never abused it. I have always made it the rule of my life to be regular in my habits. I have a time for everything. I live on simple, muscle- and brain-giving food. I have not broken down in my campaign life simply because I never would indulge in dissipation or late suppers after a lecture. I do not eat a hearty dinner before speaking in public; on the contrary, I eat very lightly. After my lecture I do not accept invitations to swell suppers. I go straight to my rooms, take a bath and drink a cup of hot milk and eat a cracker. I think if I lived down in New Orleans I would merely eat an orange and a cracker before retiring, after a heavy evening's work.

"Another thing, human nature demands a certain amount of sleep. Women need at least nine hours of it out of every twenty-four. If you go to bed and wake up in the morning without feeling refreshed, then the human machinery is out of gear, and the equilibrium must be restored or nervous prostration and a general breakdown will almost surely result. This is inevitable. Nature won't be cheated. She keeps an absolutely correct bank account and collects every farthing. Women try to do too much. The overdrawn drafts on nature must be paid. When there is tearing down there must be upbuilding at the same time or the structure falls. This upbuilding of the human wear and tear is accomplished by food and sufficient amount of rest, recreation and sleep. This has been my rule of life. Any woman may build up a strong, healthy constitution by following it."

Miss Anthony has given most useful suggestions to our sex. She understands much better than most of us do the laws of health, for she has been a careful student of them all of her life. A majority of women can not see the necessity for this study, and prefer to go on in ignorance of these beautiful laws. The example of Miss Anthony may well be a lesson from which we may all learn how to retain our physical vigor along the road of life.—The Journal of Hygiene.

If any additional argument in favor of temperance were needed, it could be found in the fact that according to governmental reports in Italy, where the people drink light wine having about 3 per cent. of alcohol, 2 per cent. of all the insanity cases in the asylums are caused by drink; in Austria, where the beer that forms the common drink of the people contains 6 per cent. of alcohol, the drink lunatics number 15 per cent. of the whole.

CREAMED OYSTERS.—Drain the oysters by pouring over them a cup of cold water; lift out of the sieve with the fingers, as care should be taken that no pieces of shell adhere to the oysters. Dry the oysters and season. Make a cream sauce as follows: Rub two tablespoonfuls of flour smooth with two tablespoonfuls of butter. Put in a saucepan and stir until the butter is melted; add one pint of cream (or milk), stir until it thickens, then turn into a boiler, add the oysters, and cook until heated through. Season and serve on toast. This makes a nice dish for the sick.—Table Talk.

LAYER CAKE.—Beat one-half cup of butter to a cream, add one and one-half cups of sugar, and beat until creamy. Add gradually three-fourths of a cup of milk and two cups flour; beat until smooth and light. Whip the whites of four eggs to a stiff, dry froth, and add to the butter with a tablespoonful of baking powder.

CHOCOLATE WAFERS.—Mix one-quarter of a cup of cocoa with one cup of flour and one-half cup of powdered sugar and one-half saltspoonful of salt. Add water until the batter is of the right consistency—that is, will pour from a spoon. Heat the wafer-iron very hot, pour in the batter and bake like waffles over the fire.

IT'S EASY TO GET ILL

where there's a sluggish liver, for any of the germs of disease that surround you. If your liver were active and healthy, it would keep them out of your blood. You'll have to watch your livor for self-protection.

Just as soon as you see the first symptoms that it's wrong (eruptions on the skin, or a dull and worn-out feeling) you ought to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. That will start your liver into a healthy, natural action, purify your blood, too; it will brace up your whole system, and give you strength and color, and put on needed flesh—not fat, but wholesome, necessary flesh.

Milford Centre, O.

Dr. R. V. PIERCE: Dear Sir—I heartily recommend your "Discovery" to any person suffering from general debility as the best thing they can take for it. After taking the "Discovery" I am happy to say I never felt better in my life than I do now.

GILLILAND—JOHN F. GILLILAND was born Sept 14, 1832; professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1867; was happily married to Miss Harriet E Norfleet, Jan. 4, 1859, and died at his residence in Coldwater, Miss., Jan 11, 1895.

Bro. Gilliland was a good man, and enjoyed the confidence and respect of those who came in close contact with him He was a lover of good men, of the church, and God. His home was open to the preacher and to his friends without stint The Sunday-school was his delight. His last words were spoken in the interest of the class he had so long and lovingly taught. His friends miss him, and speak in sad tones of his departure. His family is in deep grief, for he was always so bright and cheerful in his home. His wife and children honored and loved him as few men are loved and honored in the home circle.

His sickness was long standing; yet he was so brave that his outward bearing did well conceal the breaking down of the inner springs of life. Yet, when the summons came, he was ready Calm and conscious in the last hour—"all is well;" not a cloud, not a doubt

Thank God for such helpful, noble lives as that of Bro. Gilliland May we all meet again!

AUSTIN—EUGENE PAULINE, little daughter of Bro. and Sister J. F. and M. S. Austin, died at their home, some miles from Jackson, La., Feb. 11, 1895, at the age of two years ten months and fourteen days.

The father and mother never before sustained a loss like unto this; but they have a hope to be realized in the future, and that is the meeting of their little babe in heaven.

May the God of all consolation and peace comfort them in this sad bereavement!

Their pastor, T. A. LUSTER.

H. P. LEWIS.

WALTON—Mrs. ELLEN WALTON, daughter of John and Esther Poitevent, was born near Wilmington, N. C., July 9, 1816; removed with her parents in early life to Mississippi, and, with the exception of a few years spent in Alabama and Texas, Mississippi was her home from the time she was a grown young lady. She married Henbury Walton, who was her third husband, near Grenada, Miss., in 1852 After spending a few years in Oxford, the seat of the State University, the family returned to Panola county, Miss., where the remainder of her life was spent. She died at the hospitable home of her stepdaughter, Mrs. D. G. Pepper, where from loving hands she received all the attention, medical and otherwise, that could have been given her.

Sister Walton was a member of the Methodist Church for about sixty-three years. An intelligent, cultivated, consecrated, consistent Christian worker, manifesting a deep and constant interest in the work of the church at home and abroad. She always gave special attention to the details of personal religion, such as reading the Bible and church literature, private devotions, and the public means of grace. She was sweet-spirited, gentle and kind to all. She was a "burning and a shining light." None knew her but to admire her character, and "take knowledge of her that she had been with Jesus." Her nine step-children loved her as though she had been their own mother, and those of them who were present did all they could for her until she was laid away in Rose Hill Cemetery to await the resurrection of the just. When asked, the afternoon before she died, what she desired a friend who was about to engage in prayer for her should request God to give her, she promptly replied: "Perfect resignation." And when asked what she would have God do for her children, she responded: "That they may all follow me to heaven." Her last words were: "My Savior! my Savior!"—so characteristic of her, and evidencing an abiding faith in the blessed Christ.

Thus lived and thus died one of the purest and noblest women it has ever been our good fortune to become acquainted with. May we all meet and greet her in the "better land!"

AMOS KENDALL.

HAYMAN—WILLIAM M. HAYMAN was born March 16, 1867, near Summit, Miss., and died in his old home, Dec. 12, 1894

Since his life was spent near his birthplace, he was well known by all the citizens, and he was thought well of by them all. When fourteen he joined the Methodist Church. Since then he has lived a quiet, Christian life till his death. For two years he was a victim of the dread disease, consumption. During the last year of his life the writer was privileged to be with him as his pastor right often, and heard him say repeatedly: "I am ready, waiting the Master's call. The Lord's will be done. I am submissive. All I regret is leaving my loved ones." His last written statement is: "I am going home to die no more. When I get there I'll be out of all trouble. I want my wife and children to meet me in heaven. I lived fourteen years and didn't pray much; but, thank God, it does me so much good to pray now, I wouldn't be without it for all I have. I love my God and church with all my heart. I love my mother, who raised me and lived to see me die, very much."

Bro. Hayman leaves a mother, five brothers, two sisters, a wife and three small children, and many friends, to mourn his loss; but we feel that their loss is his gain. The Lord bless all his family, relatives and friends, that they may live and die, as he did, in the fear of the Lord, and fully trusting him. His pastor, J T. ABNEY.

MURPHY—Sister FANNIE E. MURPHY was born in Natchitoches parish, La., Nov. 11, 1859. She was the daughter of Bro Robert E. Hammett (deceased) and Sister D. E Hammett She married Miles H. Dixon in 1875, who died in December, 1877. Her two children died in infancy, thus making her "acquainted with sorrow" in her early life, all of which she bore in Christian resignation.

Having been converted, she joined the M. E. Church, South, at the age of ten years, ever evincing her enjoyment of true and vital religion. Her whole life was a beautiful commentary on the power of Christ to save. She was married to John R Murphy, June 10, 1880. At her death, which occurred Nov. 19, 1894, she was the mother of four living children and three dead.

Her life was a loving sacrifice to the comfort of her husband and children. She was a good neighbor. Kindness was the law of her life. Her thought for the welfare of others continued to the close of her life; entreating her sister to go back to their sick mother. Other instances are not wanting After a painful illness of a few days she "fell on sleep in Jesus."

Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar has made a name and record in the past fifty years that is enviable. Thousands of people having tried it for coughs, colds, catarrh, asthma, bronchitis and consumption know its value, and would not be without it. Why? Because it cures where other remedies fail. We recommend it for children subject to croup and whooping cough. It will give relief and cause speedy cure. The medical profession recognize it, and physicians frequently prescribe it for lung troubles. These facts have pushed Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar to the front rank. It is the best remedy for coughs, colds, all throat and lung affections, and no family should be without it One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

There are three things extremely hard—steel, a diamond, and to know one's self.—Poor Richard

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper

It is impossible to give in this limited space more than a brief description of this beautiful American Edition of the Bible, and we may say that this is the first time it has been possible to OFFER IT AS A PREMIUM.

The publisher's retail price of this elegant book is $4.50; and it is cheap at that. Many Bibles no better than this are sold at a price ranging from one to two dollars higher. We will send it postpaid to any address on receipt of price. We will do a great deal better than this for our subscribers. We will send it postpaid to any new subscriber (we mean one who subscribes after this date) for $2. Old subscribers can have it at the same rate, provided they will pay up to June, '96, and provided they have not had the benefit of any previous offer. Those who have had the benefit of other offers can avail themselves of this also by paying up to December, '96 Better still, any subscriber who will pay his own subscription to June, '96, can secure it free by sending us four new subscriptions at the regular rate, $2. Moreover, we will give to each new subscriber thus secured a copy of any one of the fifteen poets, or a copy of any book in the Handy Volume series. If you can not secure four new subscribers, get one or two, and we will allow fifty cents on each.

Better still: For the benefit of those who desire a genuine Oxford Bible at a still lower rate we have made arrangements with one of the leading Bible publishers in America whereby we can offer a beautiful Oxford Bible, four by five and a half inches, pearl type, French Seal, divinity circuit, round corners, as a premium for only two new subscribers. In order to get the benefit of this offer one must be himself a subscriber and must have paid his subscription to June, '96. We will send this Book, postpaid, to any address on receipt of $1.62.

We make no promise as to how long this offer will last. Therefore, don't delay.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The Legislature of Nebraska has passed a bill granting a bounty on sugar raised in that State, and will pass it over the governor's veto, if he objects to it, as it is said that he will.

Last week the Fortifications Board of the War Department visited this city and inspected the old forts near the mouth of the river. It is understood that this inspection was for the purpose of preparing plans for properly defending New Orleans.

It is proposed to try the postal car system of distributing mails in a number of large cities, New Orleans among them, during the Spring, and some of the officials of the post office department will probably visit the city to determine the expediency of such an improvement.

A cable message has been sent to Admiral Meade, ordering him to dispatch two war vessels of his fleet to the vicinity of Greytown and Bluefields, Nicaragua. It is thought the purpose is to watch the British soldiers on April 16, when the limit of time fixed in England's ultimatum will expire.

The Texas Cotton Growers' Convention was held at Waco last week. The New Orleans circular relative to the uniform size and density of cotton bales was unanimously adopted by the convention, and matters arranged which will prove of material benefit and advantage to the cotton growers and shippers.

President Cleveland accorded a special reception to the members of the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, last week, and their ladies accompanying them. Upwards of 1,000 persons took advantage of the opportunity to take the President's hand, and it occupied forty minutes for the entire line to pass.

President Cleveland signed the proclamation of the new Japanese treaty on March 21. The only changes made in the treaty since it was published by the Associated Press is the amendment made by the Senate, and announced at the time, allowing the treaty to be terminated on six months' notice at any time after it goes into effect.

It is said that Keely has now completed his vibratory circuit of force, and will soon show the wonderful 250-horse power commercial engine now completed, and which is now being set up in his shop. Mr. Keely claims that the all-important connection has been completed, with the result that he has gained command of an accumulation of ceaseless force drawn from the atmosphere.

The work of preparing the government exhibit for the Atlanta Cotton States and International Exposition is now going on, and by the time the Government Building is completed, which is expected to be by July 1, nearly everything will be ready to forward to the exposition. By Aug. 1, the installation of exhibits will commence and be completed, it is hoped, by the opening day, Sept. 18.

There is much speculation as to the decision of the Supreme Court in the income tax case. Rumors have been current that the court stood five to three in favor of declaring the tax unconstitutional. Should the tax be knocked out the treasury would lose about $30 000,000 in revenue, and as the receipts are still running behind, there would have to be an extra session of Congress or a new issue of bonds.

FOREIGN.

The President of Mexico formally announced, on April 1, in his message that a settlement had been arrived at and the papers signed in the dispute with Guatemala over the boundary.

The Spanish government has forwarded $2,000,000 to Cuba. The troops are rapidly being concentrated at the ports of embarkation. Six large merchant steamers have been chartered for use as transports and will sail from Cadiz, Valencia, Corunna and Santander with troops and war material some time between April 2 and 18.

The Mikado of Japan has announced a general armistice, which will bring about a prompt cessation of hostilities between China and Japan until peace negotiations are concluded. This certainly means that the negotiations are progressing favorably, and that the Japanese government feels satisfied that its demands will be complied with.

There has suddenly developed a very serious complication in the relations between England and France which may readily lead to hostilities, unless temperate counsels prevail. It has been known for some time that France has been disposed to encroach upon what is generally accepted as the British sphere of influence in Africa, and on several occasions already there have been collisions between the colonial forces of the two countries.

The Bismarck celebration is in full swing, and every day seems to add to the enthusiasm displayed by the German people over the eightieth anniversary of the birth of the old chancellor. Every train arriving at Friedrichsruhe is loaded with presents for the aged statesman, and every post brings hundreds of congratulatory letters, not only from people in Germany, but from Germans and others throughout the civilized world.

Whatever may be the cause of blanching, the hair may be restored to its original color by the use of that potent remedy, Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer.

They say that the age of heroism is passed. Three years ago there lived in our neighborhood a beautiful girl who had a rare musical talent and an ambition that promised a brilliant future. The other day we met her—a pale, thin, care-worn woman trying to soothe a fretting child. Pressing inquiry drew forth by littles the history of the intervening years. A sister had died, leaving several helpless children. Shortly afterward a brother died, leaving as many more. No older relative appeared willing to assume the care of the orphans, and this slip of a girl, without a moment's hesitation, laid aside her studies and her ambition, and took them all on her heart and hands—giving her life that they might have a mother's care. There is more heroism in our quiet homes than poets ever dreamed of.—Exchange.

"It made me Hands thot Sor'

I couldn't slape; an' if it was thot harrd on me hands, how harrd it must be on the durrt!" This is the way a good old Irish woman praises some washing-powder or other which she prefers to Pearline. As it was proven she had never tried Pearline, the compliment would appear to be in favor of Pearline.

Whoever heard of any one claiming that Pearline hurt the hands? But there's the trouble—Pearline is the original washing compound; its popularity has drawn out thousands of imitations—so popular that to many it indicates any powdered washing material. If you are using Pearline, you are satisfied; if you are dissatisfied, try Pearline. If you are using something with which you are satisfied and it is not Pearline, try Pearline—you will wonder you were satisfied before. Pearline is economical and harmless. 415 JAMES PYLE, New York.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

"Earthly Footsteps of the Man of Galilee."

A new work of Bishop Vincent, and Dr. J. W. Lee (of St. Louis). A great publishing company is just bringing to light the fruit of much toil and outlay of money. They sent an artist photographer, under the guidance of Dr. Lee, to the Holy Land, there to secure the most exact and perfect pictures of the salient scenes of the earthly life of Christ and the Apostles. We have examined a portion of the work and unhesitatingly pronounce it by far the best thing of its kind ever seen by us. The method of photographic reproduction employed is faultless.

The forthcoming book will contain some four or five hundred of these splendid pictures, 8x10 inches in size. The work will be issued in twenty-four parts, pages 11⅛x13⅛ inches, with chronological charts and colored maps. Each part will contain sixteen pictures, besides the enchanting pen pictures of these renowned writers. The series will run through twenty-four weeks, one a week, at a regular price of 25 cents each. But the ADVOCATE has made a special arrangement by which it will furnish all its subscribers, new and old, for 10 cents a number. Less than half, but very little more than a third of what you will have to pay if your name is not on our subscription roll. The entire series in this way will cost only $2 40; otherwise it will cost $6. This rule of the publishers of this book is the strictest that only to our subscribers can we make this special offer. For $2 40 you may get what another must pay $6 for if you are a subscriber to the ADVOCATE. Send $2.40, and each of the series will be mailed you as fast as issued. Or ten cents (stamps taken) for one issue—any way you prefer.

NOBLE DEEDS AND THOUGHTS.

Whene'er a noble deed is wrought,
Whene'er is spoken a noble thought,
Our hearts, in glad surprise,
To higher levels rise.
The tidal wave of deeper souls
Into our inmost being rolls,
And lifts us unawares
Out of all meaner cares.

From India to Egypt.

BISHOP CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

We left Bombay on the afternoon of c. 12, in the French steamer "La re," which plies between Bombay Aden, connecting there with the s from Australia to Marseilles. went first up the coast five hundred es to Kurrachee, just above the uth of the Indus, and quite near the res of Beloochistan.

From Kurrachee our course was thwest to Aden, over the Arabian , about fifteen hundred miles. We ssed the entrance to the Persian ll, and for most of the voyage were sight of the Arabian coast. Aden reached on the early morning of twentieth, where two days were nt awaiting the vessel from Aus lia, to which we trans-shipped for ia. It is quite impossible to imag- a more desolate-looking place than en, whose bleak volcanic hills are relieved by a single sprig of verdure. rain falls here not oftener than e in three or four years. But as a lling-station and great gateway be- en the Red and Arabian Seas, it is most valuable British possession. ring the two days spent in that e and beautiful harbor, not less n a dozen vessels, including several n-of-war, came in to coal or trans- cargo. One was loaded with Mo- mmedan pilgrims en route to Mecca, nding their last rupee on the jour- , but perfectly happy at the ught, even though their native es should never be seen again. at a charm that shrine of the phet has for the average Musaul- n!

The heat of Aden, though only thir- n degrees above the equator, was so oppressive as was anticipated. eed, the decks of our vessels were ghtful, cool breezes sweeping in the sea every hour we remained. e we read and wrote, and were en- tained by the diving boys and huck- ers of ostrich feathers, shells, and ious stones. For any small coin of those boys would leap from the of our ship and dive under it from side to the other. One little fellow ained so long under water I feared would never reappear, and while gratulating myself that I had not ouraged his recklessness, he popped on the other side of the ship, and ted for another coin and dive.

t noon on the twenty-second, hav- gone aboard the "Armond-Behic," agnificent ship of the Australian we steamed out the harbor of n, and in a few hours were in the ts of Bab-el-Mandeb. The next ning we were fairly launched on Red Sea, with the coast of Africa tionally in full view. There is ing in the water of this historic to justify its name that I could dis- r. it was blue as any ocean we sailed, and as placid as a mill- . When glimpses could be caught he African and Arabian coasts on r side, they seemed as sahen as if ally covered with lava.

had hoped to spend Christmas Day rusalem or Bethlehem; but, fail- in that, was quite content to be on sea and nearing the place where Lord "triumphed gloriously" in salvation of Israel; where "the ds stood upright as an heap, and depths were congealed in the heart the sea." It was an ideal day—a dless sky, a gently rolling sea, and crisp breeze sweeping down from north, quickening step and giving to the heart. The passengers were hearted, exchanging courtesies, wishing each other good cheer. French priest conducted an early , which I attended, more out of ot to the joyous day celebrated any good I hoped to get from re- ous service in an unknown tongue. our right were the bleak hills of bia, and off to the left were the ntains of Africa—all bare as if led by the breath of His nostrils. our right was Mecca, the sacred e of Islam; to our left was the Egypt into which Joseph fled "with the young Child and his mother." Late in the afternoon we saw Mt. Sinai, upon which the Lord descended in fire, and where he wrote down his law in letters of lightning upon the solid rock. I went up in the pilot-house, where the first officer kindly showed his chart of the sea, and with his glass and compass located the "awful mount" for me. All the passengers stood for an hour at the side of the ship and watched the shadows gather on his hoary summit as the sun went down behind the hills of Africa. Could it be true, thought I, that the bald peak on which my eyes rested was really the place where God talked with Moses? Thought ran back over the centuries to the day when "the whole mount quaked greatly," and "the people stood afar off," while "Moses drew near unto the thick darkness where God was." What changes have been wrought since those wondrous scenes! But that law stands immutable as when first written, and is the rule by which increasing millions guide their daily steps.

At two o'clock at night we were aroused, our vessel having cast anchor in the Suez harbor. After some delay we boarded the steam launch, and at five o'clock in the morning stepped upon the great continent of Africa. Only a few Arabs, wrapped in white loose robes from head to foot, were at the wharf, and they looked more like ghosts than men. Guided by a self-appointed dragoman, our baggage carried by coolies, we walked through the narrow, dreary streets to a hotel, to the music of "early cock-crowing" and the braying of donkeys. It has occurred to me that the national anthem of Egypt should be the bray of a donkey, for it is the first note to greet you in the morning and the last sound to die on the ear at night.

Suez is a city of 21,000 inhabitants, and is the official residence of a governor; but, apart from its location at one end of the great canal, and possessing a good harbor, has no commercial or political importance. A walk through the streets in the morning, however, introduced us to some distinctive features of Egyptian life. We saw the peculiar veil worn by the women, which conceals the whole of the face except the eyes. This is of white muslin if worn by a young lady, but of glossy black silk if she is married. Whether this is done to conceal the charms of the other features, or to display the beauty of the eyes, it is a ridiculous custom. Among the higher classes this veil is taken off at home only in presence of the immediate family. I have been amused to see some very black women, perfect facsimiles of many I have seen on Southern plantations, walking the streets concealed by this black veil. Another thing impresses and distresses—the number of persons with diseased eyes. The whole country seemed to be going blind, or to have an epidemic of sore eyes. I am told that a very large number of Egyptians are blind in one or both eyes, and others, because of the sun's intense glare, have a habit of shutting one eye.

At 10:40 A. M. we left by train for Cairo, the beautiful and intensely interesting capital of Egypt, which was reached after six hours' weary travel. Our course was first down the great canal to Ismailia, and then across the desert to the Valley of the Nile. We saw great ships moving slowly through that immense ditch cut across the isthmus, which has revolutionized the commerce and civilization of the East.

I had but a faint conception of a desert until this trip through sandy wastes, only relieved here and there in the distance by a slow-moving camel or an occasional group of palm trees near by a well of water. What life there is in water! I never appreciated before the force of that oft-repeated scriptural figure. Ezekiel's words in his vision of the holy waters came frequently to mind, "And everything shall live whithersoever the river cometh." It produced a strange sensation to recall the fact that over that very desert Abraham came when "the famine was grievous in the land" of Canaan, and near the lines we were traveling Moses led the children of Israel in their escape from "the affliction of Egypt." We passed places that were once the sites of "treasure cities" built by the Israelites during their sojourn in this land of plenty, but now the meanest and poorest of mud villages. And when the beautiful and fertile Valley of the Nile was reached we were in the "land of Goshen," where Israel dwelt and "had possession therein, and grew and multiplied exceedingly." How rapidly did the chronicles of the centuries pass before me! Here Jacob died and was carried up to Canaan for burial. Here the plagues were visited upon the land of the Pharaoh "who knew not Joseph," and who so cruelly oppressed God's chosen people. Here the Passover feast was first eaten, and from the mud villages—doubtless much like the ones I now see—the Israelites started on that memorable wilderness journey. I saw the people harvesting corn, and thought of Joseph in prison interpreting dreams, brought before Pharaoh, and becoming the foster-father and provider of his brethren who had sold him into slavery. I saw others making brick, and thought of Pharaoh's infamous order, "Ye shall no more give the people straw to make brick, and the tale of the bricks which they did make heretofore ye shall lay upon them." All that marvelous history of Providence so thrilled every fiber that I could scarcely retain my seat, and eagerly gazed upon every feature of valley and sky once associated so strangely with the life of the early church.

You can not imagine any scene more beautiful than the Valley of the Nile. It seemed like a veritable paradise as we emerged from the dreary desert. The fields were as green as early Spring. Where cotton had just been picked and corn harvested, already wheat, millet and clover had covered the earth with their rich young life. Long lines of camels were loaded with cotton stalks for market, and were lazily moving toward the metropolis. Everything possible is taken from the soil, and nothing returned. But, thanks to the annual inundations of the Nile! fertilization seems to be quite unnecessary. That valley has been the granary of the East for 4,000 years and more, and nearly everyone has been a year of plenty.

The first sight that greets one approaching Cairo from any angle is the tall, slender minarets of the great mosque adjoining the citadel on the mountain side. And no finer view of the beautiful Egyptian metropolis can be obtained than from a balcony of that splendid alabaster house of prayer. A half-million people crowd those narrow streets, wearing every conceivable dress, speaking almost every language, and engaged in every kind of employment. Some of the irregular by-streets are not more than five feet wide, and built up solidly with houses from one to four stories high. I have been much entertained in walking through these bazaars. Streets and districts are given up almost entirely to one's business; hence there is the shoe bazaar, the leather bazaar, the silver bazaar, etc. With the crudest tools boys and men are busily at work on articles of rare design and exquisite taste. In the Turkish bazaar one tradesman told us he had carpets that ranged in price from a few shillings to £5,000.

The morning after our arrival in Cairo we saw and heard a funeral procession. Such wailing through the streets I never supposed possible or tolerable. The coffin, covered with a red Cashmere shawl, was borne on the shoulders of men. In front were six or eight men wailing and chatting with each other by turns, while just before the corpse were several boys crying in a higher and livelier voice. These are professional mourners, I afterward learned—persons whose business is to cry at funerals. Just behind the corpse were members of the family and a number of female mourners crying and shrieking with hideous voice. These hired mourners are paid for their services at the tomb, receiving usually a piaster each. If the funeral be that of a wealthy person, larger sums are given, and bread is distributed to all the assembly. The body is laid on one side so that the face will look toward Mecca, and the tomb, an oblong vault, with arched roof, is so constructed that the dead may easily sit up when visited and examined by the two angels appointed for that purpose. I am told that the men wear no badge of mourning for the dead, nor do the women on the death of an elderly man, but they do for others. The women dye their veils and handkerchiefs blue, and also stain their hands and arms the same color. They leave their hair unbraided, cease to wear ornaments, and turn upside down the carpets, mats, etc., in the house.

The first morning we were aroused by the notes of a brass band, and the marching of soldiers through the streets. After the reveille of the donkey, this has been the most common daily sound. The Egyptian regiments—fine-looking, soldierly men—are officered by Englishmen, and besides there are several English regiments composing the "army of occupation" in Egypt. This daily display of armed battalions indicates the power by which the country is governed, and this power is controlled by the English. The Queen's ambassador, Lord Cromer, whom I had the pleasure to see, is said to be the real ruler of Egypt. We saw the young Khedive one afternoon as he drove out from his city palace. Twelve cavalrymen on gray horses were marshaled before the palace door, and when the young monarch entered his carriage, drawn by a pair of beautiful grays, four horsemen galloped in front and eight followed behind. He is a small man, wears a mustache, and the inevitable fez, and is only twenty-two years old. He rides out a great deal, and, I understand, is rather popular with his people, but as yet has evidenced no special capacity for rulership.

We visited several mosques, including the one connected with the great Mohammedan University. In this latter we were told that 10,000 students were in attendance. That number may be on the registers, but we saw not more than 1,000, from the little urchin up to the venerable man of sixty. They sat around in small groups, swaying their bodies, and repeating aloud portions of the Koran, or listening to the expositions of an aged teacher who also occupied a seat on the floor. When the hour of prayer is announced, which occurs five times a day, all drop slates and books, and perform their devotions. We arrived just before the time for afternoon prayer, and heard the muezzin chant the call from the gallery of the minaret, in loud and weird voice. This was his chant translated into English: "God is most great!" (this is said four times) "I testify that there is no deity but God!" (twice) "I testify that Mohammed is God's apostle!" (twice) "Come to prayer!" (twice) "Come to security!" (twice) "God is most great" (twice) "There is no deity but God!" Then with frequent prostrations until his head touches the floor, and rapid repetitions of certain set phrases, he concludes his prayer in two or three minutes.

A Revelation.

MR. EDITOR: A second-blessing evangelist from Texas gave an account in the Way of Faith of a meeting he lately held in a Louisiana town. It would seem that never before had the gospel been properly preached there, albeit the pastor of last year is considered by his brethren to be a good man, and is, we believe, a professor of this same second blessing. It is difficult to discover in the following extract from that account any trace of that spirit that should actuate one who has "scaled perfection's heights."

PASTOR.

Friday night a good-sized congregation came out. To find out what they needed, I wanted to find out what they had. After describing a genuine scriptural conversion I asked all Christians to stand up.

Had I been hunting for jack-rabbits I would have found as many there as there were Christians, outside of us two preachers; and there were no jack-rabbits there.

The superintendent of the Methodist Sunday-school and several stewards, with a number of members of different churches, were there, but not a Christian among them!

They were the judges of this matter.

It is a mistake to say that we holiness people minify conversion; but somebody had minified conversion in teaching those people, until all who had joined the church had come in without religion, supposing, according to the preaching they had been accustomed to (before Bro. C. came recently), that they were Christians.

When the light was turned on, they found they had never been converted, but had been deceived.

Some of them came to the altar and got converted; others neglected, or failed to come, but said, "The preacher is right," and kept in a good humor. Others got mad, kicked out of the meeting, and did what they could to help Satan to hold the town. Is it not strange how much ground a little 2 by 4 unconverted church officer can paw up, and how many helpless little bushes (ignorant souls) he can horn into a tangle, when the preacher brings the light to bear upon his poor little dead soul! For pleasantness of pastime you just as well stir any other corpse in hot weather. 'Earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust,"—is the only remedy with some of them. Let us solemnly bury them out of sight and go on with our holiness work.

Board of Church Extension.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

The church in Louisville has, through its Jubilee Committee, invited the Connectional Boards to be present and participate in their proposed celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the meeting of the Convention of 1845, which organized the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. In order that the members of this Board may have the opportunity of attending the interesting exercises proposed, the managers resident in Louisville have agreed to meet at the regular time and place for our Annual Meeting, April 25, and, without transacting any business, to adjourn over to Monday evening, April 29, at 8 o'clock. It is proposed to devote the Monday evening session to the reading of reports and other routine business, and to begin the consideration of applications and other new business on Tuesday morning, April 30, at 9 o'clock.

Your brethren very truly,

Church Attire.

In my pastoral work I find that many people who were once punctual at the house of God stay away from church now, and I have been trying to find out the reason of this. When I dig down—and it takes digging to get down to it in most cases—to the bottom facts, I find that the lack of clothes is the main cause of this neglect. People can not dress as they would like to do; hence they stay away from church. I find, however, that they do not stay away from town and other places on this account. This has led me to suspect that the real reason—or what is claimed as the real reason—is not the main one. I can understand very well how one who had been accustomed to good clothes would feel cramped when shabbily dressed. I have been there myself, and I know how it is, and yet I am never more cramped than when rigged out in a starchy new suit. I feel stuck up and uncomfortable. I am more comfortable and more at myself in the old clothes than in new ones.

The women folks—a man's wife and daughters—are more to blame for the absence of the husband and father from church than he is himself. They tell him plainly they are ashamed of him, and few men have the courage to go when his women folks say that. It gives him a crest-fallen feeling. Somehow the women will have it that people will blame them if husband and father is not fixed up as well as anybody else.

The times are so tight and money so scarce that the people—the common people: farmers, mechanics, and day-laborers—can not dress as they would like to do, not as they once dressed. Everybody knows this, and nobody—none whose opinion is worth anything—expects them to do so. The few who can afford fine clothes ought, in mercy to the poor, to leave them off when they go to church. If plainly dressed, they will not attract so much attention, and they will make the poor people feel more comfortable. Fine-looking people do not need so much dressing, anyway; and if not fine looking, fine clothes only tend to make native homeliness homelier still. I am greatly comforted by this, specially by the first member of the last sentence written. I do not need fine clothes. If one's clothes are clean—as they can be and ought to be where water and soap are as plentiful as they are in most places—it matters little how old and plain they are. Indeed, it matters little what people think or say about it—an idea more prevalent than real. Few people—in fact, none worth considering—think or care how I am dressed at church. Fact is, I go to church to worship God, and not to show my clothes. God gives no attention to one's dress when the heart is all right. "He seeketh such to worship him as worship him in spirit and in truth," and he does not stop to consider whether they are in homespun or in purple and fine linen. Character is worth more than clothes in the house and service of God. Indeed, if one comes into church well dressed, having on a ring, and we run to them on that account, and show them to a front seat—as is often done to good clothes—we sin against God. If we give a good man of God a lower seat because he is poorly clad, we sin. The thought of such things, and such conduct in the house of God, is sinful. God says so in his Holy Word. So I will do the best I can in the matter of clothes, and go along to church as God has commanded me to do, and leave others to be partial and to have evil thoughts, if they will. God knows all about the times, how hard they are, how hard it is to get hold of money, how I would like to dress better if I could, and all of that. He is merciful and gracious, and will make due allowance for things I can not help, and for which I am not to blame. If God be for me, who, then, can be against me? Rather, what need I care who is against me? If God be for me, be my friend, helper, and Savior, what matters it though all men be against me? I must have and retain the friendship of God at all hazards—good clothes, or common clothes, or no clothes; nothing but a beggar's rags, if need be. I can not retain the friendship of God if I habitually stay away from his house and worship. If other people—more nice than wise—are offended by my dress, when I do the best I can, why, I can't help it. The truth of the whole matter is, I have been petting and coddling my pride until it has become a sin to me, and now I have a good chance to crucify it and put it to death, and I am going to do it. Pride is a costly passion. It costs us more than the necessaries of life. Think on these things.

In the Living Present.

Truth, of New York, catechises exquisitely: "What is higher criticism? Baptized infidelity."

In the Forum, of April, W. H. Mallock presents a capital treatise on "The Quintessence of Socialism." The gist of same is contained in this sentence: "Socialism aims at a new division of income, the increase or even the maintenance of which depends on faculties which are decried." We hold that socialism is modern Utopia.

The Lutheran Missouri Synod, headquarters in St. Louis, supports two white missionaries who work among the negroes in New Orleans. Already they have two flourishing churches—one on Annette, the other on South Franklin street.

The chapel of a Universalist Society in New York bears the inscription, "Church of Eternal Hope." Sentimentally beautiful! The same as Pope's "Hope springs eternal in the human breast;

Man never is, but always to be blessed."

But does not the term "hope" imply certain fruition sooner or later? Besides, Universalists teach that all men will ultimately be saved. And still hope, even after the depletion of hell?

The women's rights leaders have organized a joint committee, charged to revise the Word of God and in due time publish "The Woman's Bible." Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton is president; Miss Frances Willard is a member of the committee. The five books of Moses have already been revised. It is claimed that the statement (Gen. ii, 21, 22) of the formation of Eve from a rib of Adam is a mere fable, the outcome of masculine arrogance, designed to teach woman's inferiority? Whither are we drifting?

Pastor Kneip, the celebrated Bavarian hygienist, emphasizes the old saying that sleep before midnight counts double. Should retire at nine. Children less than ten years of age should not sleep less than twelve hours. Sleeping apartments should be well ventilated. Musty old furniture should not be found in it.

Of the negroes in the United States, fifty-five per cent. are analphabetes. Fifteen years ago the per cent. was seventy. Commendable progress! One million three hundred and twenty-nine thousand six hundred and thirteen negro children go to the public schools in the sixteen Southern States. The taxes paid by Caucasians uphold said schools. It is well. Providentially here, we must educate the negroes. Self-protection, if not benevolence, the impellent. Educated Christian negroes make good citizens.

Bro. Hailey Again.

REJOINDER NO 1.

Rev. O. L. Hailey, a Baptist preacher, wrote, "Why They Did Not Join the Methodists." It contained not only the usual amount of unscriptural assertions concerning baptism, the subjects of baptism, and apostasy, but also numerous palpable misrepresentations of the Methodist Church. Most of these I exposed last year in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Bro. H. asked the privilege of replying, claiming that he had been misrepresented and wronged. Dr. Black, the editor, readily consented for him to do so. His papers, however, were in no sense a reply, but a renewed and more vicious onslaught upon Methodism. He sought admission into the ADVOCATE professedly to correct mistakes, but really to continue his fulminations against the impregnable bulwarks of the Methodist Church. The ADVOCATE was never intended to be the vehicle of ecclesiastical tomfoolery, and so the editor informed him. Thereupon Bro. H. betook himself to the Baptist Record, and for over two months vented his spleen in its columns. He denounced the editor of the ADVOCATE in such bitter terms for shutting him out, and dared me so often to reply to his tirades, that I really thought I would be permitted to write something good for the Baptist Record. But not so. Editorial authority is supreme, and I submit with all the grace I am capable of exercising.

The first line of Bro. H.'s so-called reply is set to the old tune of "Persecution." His pathetic wail is, "I have been wronged." "I have been grossly misrepresented and charged with falsehood." Dr. Black "opens his columns to gross and false statements against me." He denied "common justice to the man" whom he permitted "his man to call a 'liar' and such pet names." His name had been freely used in connection with the most disgusting epithets." The good old tune is pitched to bass and tenor and all the intermediate parts. It floats out upon the breeze, and its reverberations fairly make the welkin ring. Surely Bro. H. has been the innocent victim of merciless persecutions. But why, in the name of "common justice," when the Baptist Record was open to him so long, did he not point out some of these "misrepresentations," these "gross and false statements" against him? He did not do so for the best of reasons, and that is, they do not exist. His time, and the space given him in the Record, were taken up in trying "to show that what Mr. Carley called misrepresentations were not misrepresentations at all." I had not misunderstood him, and had not misrepresented him. In only one instance does he undertake to show that I had mistaken him, and in his reply, as I shall show, he puts the same construction upon his language I had done, and so stands convicted by his own testimony. There may have been, to him, disgusting epithets in my papers in connection with his name, but there was nothing so gratuitous as the cold assertion that I called him "a 'liar' and such pet names." He puts the word "liar" within quotation marks as if actually quoting it from me. Why did he do this? The word was not in my papers. Perhaps it helped him to raise the tune "Persecution" a little higher. However, "charity hopeth all things," and it may be that he does not know the meaning and use of quotation marks. A new and revised edition of his little book has come out, and, according to the title page, he has quit Master of Arts and is now practicing Doctor of Divinity. I shall give the reader the benefit of any improvement in Bro. H.'s education or general information.

In my criticisms of Bro. H.'s book I charged him with representing us as guilty of "insulting hypocrisy," and based my charge upon the long story concerning the Eastern king. He says I was mistaken. "This is Bro. Carley's conclusion, not mine. It is not in the tract." Well, when a man says he did not mean what he is thought by others to mean, his statement is ordinarily entitled to respect. But in his reply he uses language that can not be explained except in harmony with the construction I placed upon his words. He says: "If I showed that Methodists reject His authority while they profess to love God and obey Him, the charge will have to stand." Yet he did not make any charge. In speaking of the same matter, he says: "These are not all the reasons for impeaching the Methodist Church under this count. But these are sufficient to show that the charge is sustained and is no misrepresentation." According to his own testimony, he did impeach the Methodist Church under "this count," and did bring the above-named "charge." Then he makes the following malignant assertion: "Methodists do reject the authority of Jesus Christ!" "By thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned." (Matt. xii, 37.) Error not only contradicts truth, but, judging from the futility of Bro. H.'s effort, seems difficult to harmonize with itself.

To save us from "insulting hypocrisy," Bro. H. quotes ten passages from the Bible, showing that God is a sovereign. This was very kind in him; but as we have the same passages in our Bibles, and have never doubted the sovereignty of God, it was wholly unnecessary to go to so much trouble. But he says: 'Methodists get uncomfortable in the face of the Word." That would be sufficient compensation for any amount of trouble. He would make the impression, if possible, that the Word of God occupies a very small place in our estimation and in our pulpits. It seems never to have entered into his cranium that men can differ in opinion as to what God requires without denying his sovereignty. If we do not believe what Rev. O. L. Hailey—once Master of Arts, but now Doctor of Divinity—believes, and if we do not do as he does, then we are impugning the sovereignty of God.

The exceeding narrowness and general littleness of Bro. H.'s conception of Methodism is seen in the following fraternal deliverance: "Now, if Methodists had their way, they would abolish every Baptist Church in the world. There is no need to deny this." Methodists are powerful to persecute. 'There is no need to deny this." None in the world. No one but narrow-minded bigots believe any such silliness, and there is no use to argue with them. I am not writing for that class, but for those who are susceptible to some degree of enlightenment. 'Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh," and I suppose that what Bro. H. would like to do with Methodist Churches he thinks we would do with Baptist Churches. Brethren, be sure to keep your churches insured. There is one big Pope in Rome, and another little Pope in America, but Methodists do not recognize the authority of either.

L. CARLEY.

Second-Blessing Theology.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow me a few words more in reference to the theology of our second-blessing brethren—a theology that is not, apparently, confined to them. I refer to their assumption that the apostles, at the time the Master was talking to them, as recorded in the thirteenth, fourteenth, fifteenth and sixteenth chapters of St. John's Gospel, as well as at all times prior to the consummation of the plan of salvation on Calvary, had experienced regeneration, and that the subsequent manifestations of the Holy Spirit, on the Day of Pentecost and on other occasions, was nothing more or less than the celebrated "second blessing!"

Now, it occurs to me that the experience of regeneration, or the new birth, is peculiar to the Christian dispensation. In the Mosaic dispensation the satisfaction for sin was found in the blood of bulls and goats, which was made by the priest, and with which the sinner had nothing to do, except furnish the sacrifice. Of course, these sacrifices were simply typical of that more excellent oblation offered by our Lord in his own person, but here the similarity between the two ceases. With the new dispensation came the witness of the Spirit, the assurance of adoption into the family of God, and the consciousness of peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ.

Now, the question arises, At what period in the history of our race did the Christian succeed the Mosaic dispensation?—as on this question depends the matter of the spiritual condition of the disciples of our Lord prior to the Day of Pentecost. I do not presume that anyone, in his sober senses, will claim that the Christian dispensation commenced one moment before the scenes of Calvary, the sepulchre of Joseph, and the ascension from Bethany. Until all these things were accomplished there could be no justification by faith in the atonement of our Lord, for that act was not accomplished, and without justification there can be no regeneration; hence the assumption that the apostles and other disciples of our Lord were in a regenerate state before the crucifixion or sacrifice of the Savior for the sins of the world is untenable. There was no such religious experience possible. It follows, therefore, that Peter and the rest were simply good, moral men until after the crucifixion, when the Master breathed upon them, and said, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost!" In other words, Be new creatures. I am perfectly well aware that the claim will be set up that faith in an atonement to be made in the remote future was accounted for righteousness in Abraham and others, and this doctrine is clearly taught in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews; but that fact does not affect the question at issue. None of the disciples had any such faith, and there is little in the teachings of the divine Master to lead up to such faith; hence the inference is just that they were strangers to what we understand as the witness of the Spirit, until after the death and resurrection of our Lord. The whole tenor of the history, as recorded in the four Gospels, indicates that there was nothing in the inner life of the disciples resembling, in the remotest degree, the experience of regeneration. On the contrary, John was vindictive, Peter something of a liar, and the others with faults utterly at variance with a new heart and nature!

Suppose Peter had had a clear case of regeneration; is it reasonable to suppose that his heart would have failed him, and he would have lied and swore in the immediate presence of his Master, when the hosts of martyrs, who have sealed their devotion with their lives, have had no more? The trouble with the disciples was, that they had no knowledge of God in the pardon of their sins, nor did they experience that blessing until after their Master had left them. Then, in accordance with his promise, the Comforter—i. e., the Holy Ghost—came to them and consummated a work made possible by the scenes of Calvary. It is expedient for you that I go, for if I go not—that is, if I do not sacrifice myself for your salvation—the Comforter will not, because he can not come! Why can he not come? Simply because his coming is dependent upon the completion of the plan of salvation, the results of which are justification and regeneration: the witness of the Spirit, and that peace of mind that passeth all understanding!

Thomas was another practical illustration of the sort of regeneration that obtained among the disciples! He was not with them when Jesus first came to them, and when assured by the others that they had seen the Lord, he emphatically declares that, "unless I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe!" Beautiful specimen of regeneration that was! Yet there are thousands of cases similar to it in our day, and the result is, that when, perchance, the eyes of their understanding are opened, and they see their real condition as Christians in name and profession only, realize their need of something more, a simple reformation of bad habits—in other words, when the Holy Spirit convicts them of sin, and they seek and find peace with God in the pardon of their sins—the experience is so different from the utter deadness of their former sensations that they immediately jump to the conclusion that this is a second blessing, when, like Thomas, called Didymus, they had never had a taste of the first.

The message sent to the church of the Laodiceans, in all its fullness, might, with equal propriety, be sent to those pastors and people who make such loud professions of superior holiness. Like the Laodiceans, they imagine themselves to be rich and increased in goods, and that they have need of nothing, some of them discussing the propriety of revising the Lord's Prayer, and eliminating the clause, "Forgive us our debts," etc., as being unnecessary for the elect, who commit no sin, and, therefore, have no need of pardon. But what answer does the Spirit make to this assumption of spiritual wealth? Simply that they are, in reality: "Wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked. I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eyesalve, that thou mayest see!" What a blessed thing it would be if our brethren in white would conform to the suggestion above laid down! We would hear less self-glorification, but much more of the spirit and temper of the divine Master, which is far better.

An article in the Nashville Advocate, of last week, contains enough logic and sense to effectually silence these professors, if they would only read and heed; but they will not. REX B.

Small Things.

Living to Christ in small things, and living for Christ every day, is the secret of large fruitfulness. A peach tree or an orange does not leap into a bounty of fruit by one spasmodic effort; an orchard does not ripen under a single day's sunshine. Every rain-drop, every sunbeam, every inch of sub-soil does its part. A fruitful Christian is a growth. To finish up a godly character by a mere religion of Sundays and sermons and sacraments and revivals and special seasons is impossible. A man may be converted in an instant, but he must grow by the year. The tough fibre of the slender branch which can hold up a half bushel of oranges is very different from a little willow switch. It is the steady, compacting process that makes the little limb like a steel wire. Such is a healthy and holy believer's life. Every honest prayer breathed, every cross carried, every trial well endured, every good work for our fellow-men lovingly done, every little act conscientiously performed for Christ's glory, helps to make the Christian character beautiful. —Examiner.

Sound Sense.

If you don't like the churches, go in and make them better, but do not become a grumbler. Keep yourself aloof from that class of people, for it is the easiest sort of thing to find fault. Any stupid man can do that, but it takes a smart man to make things better. When a man begins to grumble and find fault, you can size him up for a light-weight right away.—D. L. Moody.

A revival that is not followed by the erection of family altars in the homes of the church is a failure in one of the very greatest essentials of revival life. The chances are against the young converts of Christian homes where there is no family altar. Let the pastor report his revival from the family-altar standpoint in his church, and the spiritual state of his converts, especially, may be very correctly estimated. Daily Bible reading, and secret and family prayers, constitute a safeguard which no Christian can ignore and not backslide. Let this be the rule of the life of the new convert, and sanctification will come as cometh the light of a new day.—Pacific Advocate.

Methodists can do nothing without vital religion—the love of God shed abroad in the heart by the Holy Spirit. When we lose this, and drop down to the level of formalists, we are the deadest of all people. Our arrangements were made for live men, live themes and live work. The Spirit gone, we still have a fine system, but it is like a finished locomotive without fire or steam.—Dr. James Porter.

A teacher, pastor or missionary, who would be successful, must feel and show an interest in men. Jesus, the model teacher, was always manifesting his interest in humanity. Whether he met a funeral procession, or a cripple, or a blind man, or a leper, he was interested, sympathetic and helpful. If we would be like Jesus, we should cultivate an interest in the people round about us.—The United Presbyterian.

Each man has his own special form in which self-denial is needful for him. We require pure eyes, and hearts kept in very close communion with Jesus, to ascertain what our particular cross is. He has them of many patterns, shapes, sizes, and materials. We can always make sure of strength to carry the one which he means us to carry, but not of strength to bear what is not ours.—Rev. F. B. Meyer.

As to the matter of preaching we are to be governed ultimately by him whose commission we bear. What is the preaching which he bids us employ? To be diverted from this by reason of what young men, or any class of hearers, tell us that they like, would be seriously to compromise our office and to bring disaster upon the gospel.—Evangelist.

The best way to keep bad thoughts out is to fill the mind with good ones. "I think thy thoughts after thee, O God," was the expression of one of God's great souls. Luther said concerning impure thoughts: "I can not keep the birds from flying over my head, but I can keep them from building their nests in my hair."

God never works only for to-day. His plans run on and on: The web he weaves is from everlasting to everlasting, and if I can fill a part of that web, be it ever so insignificant, it will abide forever. And this is one of the most comforting thoughts to us. While on earth we may do something for eternity.—Bishop Simpson.

A blade is a small thing. At first it grows very near the earth. It is often soiled and crushed and down-trodden. But it is a living thing. The great dead stone beside it is more imposing; only it will never be anything else than a stone. But this small blade—it doth not yet appear what it shall be. —Drummond.

A man who lives right, and is right, has more power in his silence than another has by his words. Character is like bells which ring out sweet music, and which when touched, accidentally even, resound with sweet music.—Phillips Brooks.

Duty is a power which rises with us in the morning, and goes to rest with us at night. It is the shadow which cleaves to us, go where we will, and which only leaves us where we leave the light of life.—W. E. Gladstone.

Sin never gets tired; never is low-spirited; has the courage of its convictions; never frittters away its power and its genius petifogging over side issues. What voluminous lessons the saints might learn from the sinners!

To character and success, two things, contradictory as they may seem, must go together—humble dependence and manly independence; humble dependence on God and manly reliance on self.—William Wordsworth.

Never forget that it is not necessary, in order to overcome gigantic difficulties, that one's strength should be gigantic. Persevering exertion is much more than strength. — Hugh Miller.

It is not enough to once choose Christ before all things else. The choice must be repeated as often as the world, the flesh, and the devil present temptations for our acceptance.

Every duty, even the least duty, involves the whole principle of obedience, and little duties make the will dutiful—that is, supple and prompt to obey.—H. E. Manning.

So live that death may never surprise thee unprepared. Happy the man who constantly keeps the hour of his death in view, and every day prepares himself for it.

It is well to begin right; it is better to keep on doing right. You may not be able to learn a thing the first time you hear it; but keep at it, and by and by you will have it.

Be an epistle of Christ, so clearly written, penned in such large, bold characters that he who runs may read. —Ryle.

District Meetings.

The season for district meetings is approaching, and a few suggestions in regard to them may not be unwelcome. The P. and H. M. S. is particularly blest in its district secretaries. We have consecrated, able women in this office who have done much valuable work in organizing new auxiliaries and in strengthening those already formed. Some of our secretaries, however, not unnaturally, feel it a cross to preside over a district meeting, and the task may be made lighter for them by the hearty co-operation of the auxiliaries in sending a full delegation with interesting reports. Do not let the thought of parliamentary usages be too overwhelming. There are very few women who can not preside with dignity over an assembly of sympathizing sisters. All needful points of parliamentary law will soon become familiar, and when the first strangeness of feeling one's self a presiding officer has worn off, the position is not difficult to fill. If the thought of the work can be kept uppermost and self-forgotten, the task will become comparatively easy. The greatest trouble in these meetings, as it strikes me, is the danger of confining them too strictly to routine work. Do not be satisfied with mere formal reports from auxiliaries, dealing only with figures and generalities, but draw out each delegate, by skillful questioning, on their work at home. Much may be learned by a comparison of methods. Inquire whether the Visiting Committees have been active, and what they have accomplished; whether any help has been rendered in furnishing parsonages, sending barrels or boxes to the families of frontier preachers, and what has been done along all the lines of work undertaken by our society. At this year's district meetings place particular stress on the Cuban mission in Florida and on mountain schools. Find out what each auxiliary has done for our Mutual Building Fund, and remind them that the certificates will not be called in until June, and they will still have the opportunity to aid in this important cause. In the short talks that you will probably make, bring out as many items of interest as you can from the work of the Central Committee, as well as from the Conference society. Let your address be as encouraging as you can make it; let it be full of facts and figures to prove the value of the work already accomplished, and the constantly increasing recognition of its power for usefulness. Above all, let all secretaries and delegates go to these meetings praying for the presence of the Holy Spirit, without whose aid our labors will be in vain.

Barrels and Boxes.

Those of our auxiliaries that have sent supplies to the frontier, in response to Mrs. Scarritt's appeals, have doubtless been gratified by her report in Our Homes of the relief given by this department of our mission work. It is really surprising to read how much has been accomplished by a little effort, a little sacrifice, and a willingness to do a little extra work. Kindnity alone can reveal what these barrels and boxes have done in strengthening faith and cheering drooping spirits. I would especially commend to [illegible] among the leaflets sent out for the quarter, "An Experience," that [illegible] may see what one box accomplished.

Japanese Curios.

Since her return from Japan, for [illegible] year's rest at home, Mrs. B. W. Wa[illegible] has presented the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference a collection of Japanese curios. This gift is very valuable, aiding us, it does, to understand the customs of that interesting people. The collection contains, for the most part, things connected with the everyday life, dress and manners of people. The outfit for a marriage ceremony, with the bridal veil; a jinrikisha and [illegible] showing modes of travel; wooden shoes and stockings and dress, and many other things interesting to us. This little exhibit, well conducted, will not fail to be a source of interest and information to all who see it, and will aid in making missionary entertainments profitable as well as pleasant. Several missionary Japanese tea and birthday parties have been held in different places, netting quite a good sum to our treasury. This exhibit is placed at the disposal of any missionary society within the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference, on condition that the transportation is paid and articles reshipped in good condition. We would urge every society that possibly can to write for them. Let us show our appreciation of this gift by using it to arouse our people everywhere to a degree of interest in the bodies and souls of this people that will prompt them to send them the good news of salvation.

A Word to Delegates.

This is what might be termed "the gate season," and a word to them may be helpful and appropriate. Let those who are elected delegates to the district and annual meetings this summer, and to whom the way is open to attend, feel this a God-given opportunity and responsibility. Let no thought of personal pleasure, or the companionship of friends, fill your heart; but whether you go ten miles or one hundred, remember you go on the King's business. This thought should lead you to go prayerfully, asking the abiding presence and continued guidance of God. In this frame of mind we only do we gain that spiritual help from the devotional services of the meetings. These should be attended and participated in by every delegate. Every woman sent to represent the auxiliaries should have her heart full of love for God and zeal for the cause as to speak or pray whenever occasions present themselves. Furthermore, this motive in going is necessary, that we be prepared to give our best attention to and participate in the transaction of all business. It is our first concern to be in just that attitude toward God in which he may, through us, carry out his divine will. Again, the prayerful, earnest spirit enables us to be a blessing to the homes in which we go. While we plan for the spread of our Lord's kingdom in the uttermost parts of the earth, a "home by constant watching wise," will also hearts in the homes of the entertainers who need comfort and help. Let Christian workers be instant in season and out of season. Lastly, this prayerful motive in our going is necessary that we carry to our home auxiliaries the enthusiasm and intelligence gleaned from the meeting. Those who send us are entitled to some return and this can only be given as we inspire them with the blessing that we have received. Too many delegates return with no quickened zeal, no definite knowledge gained from this discussion that is calculated to be so helpful. Let none who gather at our meetings during the coming Spring and Summer defeat the end for which they go.

Miss Sallie Smylie, of Meridian, asks us to extend to all officers and district secretaries of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference a cordial invitation to be in that city during the meeting of the Woman's Board of Missions, to be held in May. She urges us to feel that the ladies of the North Mississippi Conference are one with our sister Conferences in extending the hospitalities of the city to these workers. Homes will be provided for all officers and for as many visitors from the North Mississippi Conference as will send their names to Miss Sallie Smylie, Meridian, Miss. We trust as many of our workers as can conveniently do will take advantage of this kind invitation and enjoy this treat.

FROM THE WORK.

NEWS FROM THE FRONT.

Rev. Charles Leaman, Nanking, writes: "I was asked by one of our officials if the officials worshiped the idols which he saw all around. He was greatly surprised to hear that the wealthy, polite and powerful rulers, who had feasted him in royal style, kneeled the humblest of the people in his empty service. The Chinese have been marvelously preserved through the centuries in physical, mental, and spiritual capacity. It may be remarked that those seen in our home cities are very unworthy representatives of the nation, and hardly suggest at all the world worth of those grand men and women who live in North China. A thoroughly converted Chinaman of the better element in the Empire is a stalwart character, and can endure hardness as a good soldier of the cross. An example of this is just reported from the seat of war, where the Rev. J. A. Leslie was brutally murdered in Manchuria. Of his deacon, named Lin, it is said: 'He started with his pastor, and right nobly did he stick to him all through. When blows were falling thickest, he made broad his own shoulders to receive them, and even supported his pastor when he was ready to fall. It was only when the two were torn apart that the deacon left the scene, creeping on hands and knees to Yamen, where, though he fainted, he gave the first word.' Such men are true; they are found in every mission of China. I have known them to fast all the Sabbath day without food rather than purchase that offered for sale all around them. . . . Our missionary world must adapt itself to changed conditions. New plans must be made to properly use new opportunities. The changes which are coming will probably exceed the wildest expectations of those of us who have been weighed down and paralyzed by the long prevailing torpor and conservatism, under which we labor and live in that highly civilized, yet wonderful, land. . . . The North China Daily News tells the story of a river god who demanded the annual maiden of the province as his bride. Year after year the demand was answered until desolation had taken the place of peace and plenty. At this time a wise ruler came into authority, who undeceived the people and drowned in the river the witch and the officers who had deluded the people. This ruler's name was Shih-men. Some day—very soon, we hope—a wise Pao Shih-men will arise, who will mark out all these famines, who, though well versed in Chinese lore, have never studied or understood any civilization that is not Chinese; who have advocated hatred, falsehood, and exclusiveness as the national policy toward western nations, and who have brought disgrace and shame on China's fair name. However, these fanatics brought on these troubles of China mostly through ignorance, they should not be destroyed as the witch and government officers must, but rendered forever harmless and their counsels never being listened to any more. Instead of these counsels, this reformer will maintain that Confucius's way is better, teaching all persons to love each other as brethren, to follow truth as the way of the superior Man, and to facilitate full intercourse, so that the whole truth about all nations may be known. He will call attention not only to positive evils which China has sustained at the hands of these fanatics, but also to the unspeakable benefits which might have accrued to her had they not kept her from the source of the great sources of western prosperity, and that hence-forth he intends to follow the counsels of enlightened reformers, who thoroughly know the West as well as the East, by which, in twenty-five years, China can be easily saved from her present desolation and degradation, and made one of the richest, most powerful, and most beneficent nations on the earth. It will be a happy day for China when the Emperor shall discard the former fanatics and henceforth take the modern Pao Shih-men as his chief adviser. Meanwhile, where is this wise deliverer now?"

MEETING AT CROWLEY, LA.

We have just closed an interesting meeting of nearly three weeks' duration at this place. Rev. E. M. Murray, of Mt. Pleasant, Texas, did most of the preaching, and was followed by Rev. J. S. Sanders, of this Conference, a few days. Bros. Whatley, Porter and White dropped in on the meeting while in progress. We number, as well as we can tell, over fifty sanctifications, about as many conversions, and about twenty-five accessions. The membership is more closely welded together in Christian love than ever before, and more ready to work and suffer for the Master, many having tarried until they were endued with power. May God multiply such revivals throughout our Conference and church!

W. WINANS DRAKE

April 2, 1895.

Rev. J. H. Mitchell, P. E., Durant, Miss., April 4: "We have just finished the first round of Quarterly Conferences on the Kosciusko district. In spite of severe weather and bad roads, we have been able to meet all our appointments. The preachers of the district are all in place, and we hear of no friction at any point. The preachers and the people all seem pleased. The indications are that we will have a successful year throughout the district. The Kosciusko is a good district, but it is undeveloped. The people haven't any idea of the possibilities that lie within their reach. With eight thousand Methodists in our bounds, thoroughly consecrated to God, what may we not hope to do? We mark some growth on this first round in a financial way. Every charge, with two exceptions, paid more than they did on the first round last year. Some charges deserve special mention—Lexington and Tchula, Eupora, Ackerman and Louisville. They, in a financial way, far exceeded last year. Durant, under the pastorate of J. T. Murrah, is doing well. This is the first year they have been set off as a separate station; yet they have supplied the pastor with a good house to live in, furnished it as well as any parsonage in the Conference is furnished. They propose to pay his salary monthly. Durant is destined in a short time to be one of our best charges. Eupora, under the pastorate of J. A. Leech, will soon have a good new parsonage, and that will be a fine charge. Chester, under the faithful efforts of R. P. Goar, has repaired her parsonage until it is now comfortable and commodious. Lexington is getting ready to build a four or five-thousand-dollar church which has been long needed. We trust to see great advancement this year all along the line. Pray for us and come and see us."

Rev. M. M. Black, Wesley Chapel, Natchez, March 28: "We were at our post the last Sunday in December, and, with feelings of pleasure, began working for the Lord in this city, where we had once resided in boyhood. We rejoice that it is our privilege to labor among so cordial and appreciative a people. Although the love of some has waxed cold, this church has more than the usual number of earnest, faithful workers. We are meeting with many encouragements, and, of course, some discouragements. We observed the 'Do-without Week' this month, beginning with Monday, the eighteenth instant. Though greatly pressed, financially, our people gave liberally, the total collection for the week amounting to $6 85 The services were well attended. On 'Veteran's Day' the cash collection was $9.75, six dollars additional being subscribed. During January and February there was a good deal of sickness among our members. The prevailing depression in business has caused a number of worthy members of this church to be thrown out of employment. Still, they are hopeful and firm in the faith. Some much-needed repairing is being done to the inside of our church, and we expect, ere long, to have it looking bright and beautiful within, if not without. We are glad to note that our congregations are increasing in size. On Sunday night, March 24, Bro. B. F. Lewis preached for us to a packed house. The cold wave in February caused much suffering among the poor of this city. People with means, however, came to the rescue, for which may the Lord remember them. May God graciously bless the people of this charge."

Rev. James O. Bennett, Zacha y charge, Louisiana Conference: "We reached our work on Dec. 18, 1894. We were cordially received, and have been made to feel very much at home ever since. We were never treated better by any people. We have an intelligent, liberal people to preach to, and, what is better still, they have got religion; no second blessing, but just the old-time religion. Our predecessor, Rev. J. T. Leggett, wrought well during the four years he was pastor of this flock. He has laid a good foundation for our church in this community, and the work which he accomplished while here will abide for many years. We feel it a great privilege to follow such a man. Our people are in full accord with the missionary work of our church. Our assessment, which was fifty-five dollars for foreign missions, has been paid in full, and is now in the hands of the Conference treasurer. The other collections are being looked after. We will present a clean sheet at Conference. The editor and his paper are both in favor with my people. We do not hesitate to say that you are giving us a strong, healthy vigorous paper. We are doing what we can to increase its circulation, and hope to send you a long list of names soon. In conclusion, we extend to you a cordial invitation to come to see us. May God bless you in your work for the church!"

Isaac Hardeman, Macon, Ga., March 14: "Since you were here we have made great improvements in our church-building, not only remodeling its interior so as to make it a thing of beauty, but building in the rear an annex for Sunday-school purposes and our social occasions. You would be charmed with the Sunday-school room, it being, in my judgment, the best adapted for Sunday-school purposes of any building that I have ever been in. It is so arranged that we can have every class occupying a room or section to itself, so as not to be interfered with by any outside influences during the time allotted to the study of the lesson; or we can have the whole thrown into one general auditorium without trouble. We would rejoice very much if you could ever find it convenient to visit us, and preach some of the grand sermons that so thrilled and educated and comforted the congregation you served so acceptably in 1893. I can assure you of a generous, cordial reception on the part of your old charge here."

A Member, Vidalia, La., March 29: "Vidalia is bursting into buds and flowers. I do not know any little town more beautiful than Vidalia in the Spring, with its flower gardens. The Sunday-school is well attended. The children are interested in the lessons. The young people are taking a great interest in the church. Bright examples are set before the older ones. Rev. T. McCrea, from Natchez, was licensed at Wall Street Baptist Church. Text: John iii, 1—'Love one another.' Preached a good sermon. Not more than eighteen years; pure in his language, selecting his subject carefully. Rev. W. E. Akin preaches the first Sunday in the month. He is pastor of the Methodist Church in Vidalia. The first Sunday in May a protracted meeting will be held. All Christians are requested to pray for a revival in our little town."

Rev. M. L. White, Mt. Carmel, Miss., March 26: "This year has begun well with us on Mt. Carmel circuit; but since I've been here the parsonage has received some attention from the people in the way of several presents. The outlook for good in flattering. Eleven accessions during first quarter. Organized one Epworth League. Bro. Carley, P. E., held our first Quarterly Conference last Saturday and Sunday. My people are delighted with him as a preacher and presiding officer. He is the right man in the right place. We are making an effort to bring up our full assessment this year."

I Had Goitre

Or swellings in the neck since I was 10 years old; am now 52. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and the swelling has entirely disappeared. It has been very troublesome. When I began I was feeling so discouraged with the goitre and rheumatism, I would as soon be dead as alive. Whenever I caught cold I could not walk two blocks without fainting. Now I am free from it all and I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla. I received a letter from Mrs. Jennie Bigelow, now of Fremont, Mich., asking if my testimonial in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla was true; I replied it was, and sent particulars. I have a letter thanking me for recommending

A VERY REMARKABLE OFFER!

A $40 Sewing Machine for $20, and the N. O. Advocate Thrown In!

This may seem surprising, but we mean what we say. The machine which we handle is "The Favorite High Arm Singer," the manufacturer's catalogue price of which is $40. Read the following description taken from the manufacturer's catalogue, and then read our offer.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer Sewing Machine, as you will perceive, is very attractive in appearance, the cut being an exact representation. It is strongly constructed from the best grades of material produced, and its adjustment perfect; also combines simplicity, durability and workmanship of the highest order; and in point of finish, light-running and sewing qualities, is unsurpassed. In addition to the above-mentioned qualities, our Favorite Improved High Arm Singer has the latest, most useful and practical improvements, such as a perfect Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, positive Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self Setting Needle, Tension Liberator and Loose Pulley, and is without any exception the best machine ever produced for the money.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer is the only Singer style machine using a Cylinder Shuttle. The bed of machine being sunk flush with table and nicely hinged so it can be turned backed to admit of oiling and cleaning under works without the least inconvenience.

"Automatic Bobbin Winder, used on the Favorite Improved High Arm Singer, is positive in its operation, and works to perfection, winding the thread on bobbin as evenly as thread is wound on a spool.

"Flat Tension Spring. Every lady who has used machines with coil tension spring, knows the value of having a machine with flat tension, 'same as used on the Favorite Improved High Arm Singer,' for the reason that when tension is once set it always remains the same and does not alter while machine is in operation, requiring operator to stop every little while and re adjust same.

About the Epworth League.

The discussion of the Epworth League report in the New Orleans District Conference brought out the fact that the point at which the Leagues are least successful is in the department of literary work. So far as our observation has gone, this is very generally the case. The very hardest part of a pastor's work in connection with the League is to get the young people to read the books of the course. And yet there is no department of League work for which there is a greater necessity. Our young people, as a rule, stand very much in need of information along the line of the history, doctrines and polity of our church. That pastor who succeeds at this point will confer a benefit of untold value upon coming generations.

It is stated that the Epworth League Board of the M. E. Church has made a proposition to the Board of our church to adopt a uniform course of reading for the Leagues of both churches. One important end to be reached is the cheapening of the required literature. It is claimed that the books of the course can in this way be reduced in price from $4 or $5 to about $1. We are sure that this is a consummation devoutly to be wished. And we think there ought to be very little difficulty in agreeing upon the books of the course. There ought to be no politics in the League, and, politics aside, books that are good reading for young Methodists in one section of our country will be good reading for those of all sections.

What Alcohol Will Do.

It may seem strange, but it is nevertheless true that alcohol, regularly applied to a thrifty farmer's stomach, will remove the boards from the fence, let cattle into his crops, kill his fruit trees, mortgage his farm and sow his fields with wild oats and thistles. It will take the paint off his buildings, break the glass out of the windows and fill them with rags. It will take the gloss from his clothes and the polish from his manners, subdue his reason, arouse his passions, bring sorrow and disgrace upon his family and topple him into a drunkard's grave. It will do this to the artisan and the capitalist, the matron and the maiden, as well as to the farmer; for, in its deadly enmity to the human race, alcohol is no respecter of persons.

Fear of Criticism.

Except in pagan countries, Christians in these times seldom suffer bodily harm on account of their religion; and, by reason of changed conditions, it is easier to be a Christian, in the outward sense, than ever before in the world's history. Civilized man has about learned at last that religious convictions are beyond the power of instruments of torture, and so the enemies of the cross no longer appeal to the rack and the thumb-screw, to fire and sword in their war against the forces of righteousness. The world has not yet, however, become so good as to allow Christians to go unmolested. The followers of Christ do to-day meet with persecution no less real than that endured by the disciples of old. Fortitude and self-denial are just as essential to the Christian life to-day as when Paul labored and suffered.

Some Christians, however, are unwise enough to suppose that persecution is all a thing of the past; that, except for the enemy within, they would have smooth sailing. Thinking thus, they do not recognize the tempter when he whispers to them concerning a certain duty: "I wouldn't do that. If you do, people will talk about you." And, sad to say, many church members are actually more afraid of criticism than they are of the devil himself.

The devil, however, is usually back of public criticism, and we may be sure he loves to annoy good men now as much as he ever did. Along with the improvement in morals, which is the result of Christianity, Satan has been wise enough to change his tactics. Finding himself unable any longer to use bodily torture to advantage, he has nearly discarded this method of opposition, and now tries what virtue there is in sarcasm and contemptuous speech. Weak-kneed people can not stand ridicule, and well does Satan know it. Great is his delight when he can frighten Christians out of doing their duty by casting reproaches and base insinuations at them.

Persecution has not yet died out of the world, nor will it die so long as wicked men live and Satan is allowed to work through them. Let us not forget, however, that its form is changed; that in this age the chief weapons of those who hate God are ridicule and slander. People love to sing the praises of the soldier who is ready to do and die for his country; yet many a man displays as sublime a courage, as true a heroism, in performing duty, regardless of public opinion, and in living down its reproaches, as any soldier foremost in the charge. No reformer ever lived who did not have innumerable lies told upon him; no true Christian can hope entirely to escape being scorned and slandered. The world makes fun of the man or woman who ventures to talk religion anywhere except at a religious service, and so the lips of not a few are sealed upon the subject except when in the presence of a minister. We have known church members to be chary of greeting at service any save their most intimate friends, because promiscuous handshaking is frowned upon by Dame Fashion. Not infrequently brethren prominent in the church refuse to lead in public prayer principally through fear that their hesitation and mistakes might excite merriment among the thoughtless and the ungodly. How oft do swearers and the retailers of smutty jokes go unrebuked because of the faint-heartedness of professed Christians!

Young Christians who refuse to take part in worldly amusements oftentimes have to endure snubbing and sarcasm, almost as hard to bear as any tortures that could be inflicted upon the body. If we are zealous, the world calls us fanatical. If we conform to custom, it charges us with insincerity. But happy is he who shrinks not from the faithful discharge of duty, however disagreeable or unpopular. What a field is here for the display of heroism! We are in danger of forgetting that every age of the world has its peculiar forms of trial for the Christian. Great need have we to remember the Savior's words: "If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you."

At Clinton, La.

On the night of the third we gave a lecture in Clinton, La. The object of the lecture was to raise funds for the renovation of the church — an enterprise which has been inaugurated during the present year under the pastorate of Rev. S. B. Beall. We were delightfully domiciled during our stay in Clinton with our old friends, Mr. and Mrs. I. D. Wall, to whom we are indebted for many courtesies. We had the pleasure of meeting in their home for the first time Mrs. Mary Winans Wall, daughter of Dr. Wm. Winans, who, though in her seventy-ninth year, has almost the vivacity of youth. She is full of interesting reminiscences of the early days of Methodism in this section, having had a personal acquaintance during her girlhood days with nearly all the leading spirits of Southwestern Methodism. She knew Bishops George and McKendree.

We made many pleasant acquaintances in Clinton, and brought back several new subscriptions to the ADVOCATE without asking for them—thanks to Bro. Beall. We had the pleasure of a visit to Silliman Institute, and, through the courtesy of the president, Prof. Ramsey, were shown through the buildings. This institution is admirably equipped. It has a capacity for, perhaps, a hundred boarders. The grounds are quite spacious, and the buildings are in good condition.

New Orleans District Conference.

The New Orleans District Conference met at Dryades Street Church, of our Crescent City, April 4-6. Rev. H. H. Ahrens was elected secretary. Two sessions on the first day. One session on each of the two succeeding days.

Bishop Keener presided on the morning of the first day. His remarks were freighted with wisdom. At the subsequent meetings Dr. Sawyer, presiding elder, occupied the presidential chair. His urbanity and tact charmed the brethren. Attendance satisfactory. As a rule, city congregations are not specially enthused on occasions of ecclesiastical convocations. But at this time considerable interest was manifested.

The reports from the various churches were encouraging. Several conversions and additions were reported. The report from the trustees of the Seashore Camp Ground gave eminent satisfaction. The brethren were pleased to notice that the finances are in a healthy condition. The following brethren were elected trustees of said camp ground: J. H. Campman, W. B. Thomson, Henry W. Spear, E. P. Mackie, Philip Werlein, David Zable, W. W. Sutcliffe.

Rev. J. F. Scurlock, the new colporter of the Louisiana Annual Conference, stated his plans and prospects. He was prepared to supply the brethren with the necessary books.

Mrs. Frances A. Lyons read an able report of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society. Important work has been and is being accomplished. The same is true of the Woman's Missionary Society. The report was presented by Rev. Fitzgerald Sale Parker.

The Conference ordered the renewal of local preachers' license of the following worthy brethren: Henry B. Carre, Charles W. Huddleston and J. M. Ethridge.

Bro. W. B. Thomson, member of the Epworth League Committee of this District Conference, presented an excellent report. The vast possibilities of the League movement were elaborately discussed.

The editor of this paper spoke enthusiastically of its important mission and its undeniable claim.

The following brethren were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: W. B. Thomson, E. P. Mackie, W. W. Carre and David Zable. J. H. Keller and T. J. Ferguson, alternates.

Dr. Carter, president of Centenary College, was gladly welcomed by the Conference. He set forth the condition and demands of the noble institution over which he so ably presides.

Next year's session of this District Conference will be held at Felicity Street Church, of this city.

Four sermons were preached at Dryades Street Church during the days of the session of the Conference. They were eminently apropos.

On Sunday the various Methodist pulpits of this city were filled by preachers other than the pastors. Bishop Keener preached on Sunday morning at Dryades Street Church. The people were grateful for his ministration. After the sermon he ordained to elder's orders Rev. Frederick Matthies, of St. Tammany parish.

The pulpit of Carondelet Street Church was ably filled by Dr. C. W. Carter.

Vanderbilt University.

The catalogue of Vanderbilt University for the current session has been received. It shows a total enrollment of 679 students in all its departments. It has an invested endowment of nearly a million dollars, with buildings and grounds (76 acres) valued at over half a million. There are 70 professors and other officers in the faculty. Of the 71 students enrolled in the Theological Department, two are graduates of Centenary College: Rev. B. M. Drake and Rev. N. E. Joyner. The graduates of seventeen other colleges and universities appear in the list of theological students who represent altogether as many as twenty-six of our Annual Conferences.

A sustentation loan fund is available for needy and worthy young ministers in meeting the cost of board in Wesley Hall.

There are twenty-six free scholarships of $100 each, which are open to theological students who are college graduates. With these helps and tuition and room rent free, any earnest and worthy young minister of the church who desires to do so can spend from one to three years at the Vanderbilt. The course of study embraces Hebrew and New Testament Greek, Biblical and Ecclesiastical History, Homiletics, Church Polity, Pastoral and Systematic Theology.

Tom Paine in New Clothes.

"President Harper and President Andrews, of Brown University, with others, had been advocating the methods of modern Higher Criticism, and saying that the last twenty-seven chapters of Isaiah were written by some other men, when Prof. Howard Osgood, of Rochester, arose to reply. He spoke briefly, completely answered the Higher Critics, and then said: 'I have here an article, written almost exactly one hundred years ago. I will read it, and then tell you the name of the author.' He read a criticism on the Bible, and especially on Isaiah, advocating a double authorship of the latter, in almost exactly the language of Harper and his friends. He made a few comments upon the clearness of the ideas of the author, and showed his teachings to be identical with modern Higher Criticism. He then exclaimed, after a long pause, 'The author of this paper was Thomas Paine.' The effect was wonderful. There was a look of surprise on the faces of the critics, and then, as the applause rang out, they looked as though they would like to escape."

And yet these learned (?) men did not know that they were proclaiming the infidelity of Tom Paine! And so they lost the glory of being the original discoverers of the dangerous doctrines which they had been declaring. They were willing enough to be regarded as scholars, but they were ashamed to be found in Tom Paine's company. And we do not wonder. But the surest way to get rid of him is to stop preaching his pernicious doctrines, which doctrines he renounced before his death. It would be an excellent thing if Harper, Andrews, and their associates would imitate his example in this respect.

The devil is not a very original fellow. He simply puts a new dress upon an old heresy, and puts it out as a new discovery. And if he can get some person of prominence to hold it up to the world, he is greatly pleased. This masquerading, which is an attempt to deceive the people, should be a warning. It would seem as if the repeating of old theories which have been again and again shown to be false, should be regarded as a significant sign of the times.—Herald of the Coming One.

A Clerical Slanderer.

During a Methodist Conference, held recently in Massachusetts, one of the preachers, a Mr. Lansing, made a speech in which he spoke of Grover Cleveland as a drunkard. His speech, having been reported in the papers, Mr. Cleveland replies through the press as follows:

"This is simply an outrage, though it is not the first time a thing of this kind has been attempted. I can not avoid a feeling of indignation that any man who makes claims to decency, and especially one who assumes the role of a Christian minister, should permit himself to become a disseminator of wholesale lies and calumnies not less stupid than they are cruel and wicked.

"I easily recall other occasions when those more or less entitled to be called ministers of the Gospel have been instrumental in putting into circulation the most scandalous falsehoods concerning my conduct and character. The elements or factors of the most approved outfit for placing a false and barefaced accusation before the public appear to be, first, some one with baseless motive sufficient to invent it; second, a minister with more gullibility and love of notoriety than piety, greedily willing to listen to it and garble it; and, third, a newspaper anxiously willing to publish it.

"For the sake of the Christian religion, I am thankful that these scandal-mongering ministers are few, and on every account I am glad that the American people love fair play and justice, and that in spite of all effort to mislead them they are apt to form a correct estimate of the character and labors of their public servants."

Our New Bible Offer.

All readers who are in need of a Bible, should read our offer in another column. The Bible we offer is Holman's Self-pronouncing, which is the very best Bible on the market. A meeting is in progress this week at Tchoupitoulas Mission in this city. This mission is conducted under the auspices of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society of the New Orleans district. It has a live Sunday-school which is laying a good solid foundation for the church that is to come by and by. We hope for good results from the present revival effort.

***

The net increase in the membership of Southern Methodism for the year just closed was more than fifty-seven thousand. It is fair to say that the vast majority of these recruits were brought in through the instrumentality of preachers in the regular work. They still preach a pure gospel, and it is owned of God in the salvation of the people. The croakers must find something else to grumble about save loss of power in the ministry and corruption in the church. A thoroughly worldly church and a "old-fogy" ministry could not exercise such wonderful influence in this age of the world.—Nashville Advocate.

The church should be very careful how it espouses any theory of political economy, or allies itself with any patent sociological panacea. Machine-made millenniums will never save this world. No paper programme will regenerate society. A white sepulchre is a sepulchre still. The church that allies itself with the latest theory will pass away when that theory passes. Not an outside painted over, but an inside made righteous, is ever the fundamental need of sinning, sorrowing humanity. Selfishness is the law of all forms of society, and will never be extirpated merely by a change in the form.—Journal and Messenger.

What is known as the "potato patch plan"—a charitable scheme undertaken by Mayor Pingree, of Detroit, last year to provide for the needs of destitute families who might otherwise become a burden upon the city—is simply a loan of land and of agricultural implements, the people to whom the land is temporarily allotted doing the work. Some 7,000 lots of ground were thus loaned by citizens who had no use for the same last year; the municipal authorities furnished the tools; potatoes were raised—the yield bringing in a return of nearly $14,000. The scheme worked so successfully that both New York and Washington are considering it with a view to its adoption.—Zion's Herald.

Community Seltzer Water.

An advertisement of the Community Seltzer Water appears on the fifth page of this issue of the ADVOCATE. The Community Seltzer is a popular and well-established water with the New Orleans trade, and the company that manufactures it is composed of men of the highest character who deserve the patronage of the public, and who especially solicit that of the moral and religious part of the community. See their card and give them your trade.

To All the Pastors of the Mississippi Conference.

DEAR BRETHREN: The officers of your Missionary Board, after due consultation, have reached the following conclusions: The severe Winter weather interfered greatly with the expected observance of Do-without Week. Some were wholly deterred; others held service over the ice and snow, and thus were partially successful. Such an opportunity for seed-sowing and reaping some present result ought not to be missed.

We appoint a new time, and under a slightly different name, to reach the same object. The second week of June seems most suitable to observe "Missionary Week." Let us begin at least as early as Sunday afternoon or night, June 9, by giving to our congregations something strong and tender on the general subject of giving to God's cause, especially dwelling on that which "costs us some sacrifice." We suggest that varied services be held each night during that week. Have songs, readings, essays, talks—by laity and ministry—by home talent and visitors when preonrable. Our missionary secretaries at Nashville, Drs. Morrison and Lambuth, will mail you gratuitously at least one copy each of all the five leaflets prepared for just such use, if you will write in time, stating the purpose for which you desire same. Our "Hand-Book of Missions," prepared by Dr. John, furnishes full data as to beginning and growth of each of our missions. Extracts from this make capital reading for any audience. Our Methodist Review of Missions furnishes thrilling facts of present moment. There is no estimating the enlargement of thought on this great question which a missionary week thus observed—not forgetting to insist on much and fervent prayer—may effect. The immediate financial result will doubtless surprise the faint-hearted and cheer our care-worn secretaries. The pressure on them about June is simply fearful. Let us try to lift some of the load from their hearts. While these contributions (taken each night of the week, or on a grand rally the following Sunday) should be extra to the individual contributor, beyond his regular payment, yet it may be counted as so much on the assessment to the "charge." Thus we may hope for that consummation devoutly wished, but seldom realized: An access on assessments, credited to all circuits and stations where this service is faithfully observed and good, extra collection stressed.

Brethren, shall we not experience this joy. We have put the week off pretty late, so as to secure an open field. "Veteran's Day" and "Children's Day" both fully looked after, we can then feel free to push the heathen's claim.

We write now that due thought and preparation may be given beforehand, and nothing allowed to interfere. Such a week generally observed aright will prepare the hearts and consciences of our people for the revival season. Let us prove God herewith and see if he will not "open the windows of heaven" and flood our Conference from the river of redeeming grace. As helping to prepare the way in the minds of the people, let our newest, brightest and cheapest periodical, "The World for Christ," find its way to every Methodist home. Who can not pay ten cents a year for such a paper?

In behalf of the Board,

To the Pastors of the Seashore District.

DEAR BRETHREN: Will you please be kind enough to inform me at your earliest convenience, according to the suggestion of Bro. Powell, how many of your delegates-elect and ex-officio members of the District Conference will attend the session of the Conference, to convene in this place on the twenty-fifth of this month?

I urge this information so I may be able to arrange for entertainment before you arrive. This being a central point for the district along the coast, and accessible for all the works north of the railroad, we reasonably expect an attendance of a majority of the representation, and by complying with my request you will greatly aid me in the perfecting of plans for your entertainment.

I am in correspondence with the L. and N. and N. E. R. R. ticket agents for reduced rates, which I hope to secure. Let me know who of you will come by private conveyance. This is a very important matter.

Bro. Powell writes me that he has invited Bishop Keener to preside, and I have just received a letter from one of our college presidents giving me notice that he will be on the ground looking after the cause of education and missions.

My heart yearns for a mighty baptism of the Holy Ghost, and I urge you to be constant in prayer to this end. We hope to have great results in the salvation of souls. My people are enthusiastic over the prospect, and if we have strong spiritual results, our church here will start on a new era in the divine life.

This communication is for your good and the blessing of the church; so please heed it by giving me the advice asked for.

Dr. Black, come over and give us the inspiration of your presence, Conference ADVOCATE speech and sermons.

Your brother, ROBT. SELBY.

In the Spring

Nearly everybody needs a good medicine. The impurities which have accumulated in the blood during the cold months must be expelled, or when the mild days come the body is liable to be overcome by debility or some serious disease. The remarkable success achieved by Hood's Sarsaparilla, and the many words of praise it has received, make it worthy your confidence. Give this medicine a trial.

Holly Springs District Conference.

The District Conference for Holly Springs district, North Mississippi Conference, will convene at Mt. Pleasant on May 2, at 2 o'clock P. M., to hold over Sunday, the fifth. Brethren will be met with conveyance at Red Banks on Thursday morning, May 2.

The opening sermon will be preached on Thursday night by M. D. Fly.

The following Committees of Examination are appointed: For license to preach and recommendation for admission on trial into Conference—L. D. Worsham, G. H. Jacobs, F. A. Whitson. For recommendation for deacon's orders—J. W. Honnoll, J. B. Harris, B. P. Jaco. For recommendation for elder's orders—M. D. Fly, J. W. Poston, J. H. Smith.

J. D. CAMERON, P. E.

To the North Mississippi Conference.

DEAR BRETHREN: The president, secretary and treasurer of the Sunday-school Board of our Conference have formulated the following plans of work for this year:

First. The Conference is divided into three Sunday-school districts, to be visited as follows: The president, J. W. Luther, the Grenada, Winona, and Greenville District Conferences; the treasurer, G. H. Lipscomb, the Sardis, Holly Springs, and Corinth District Conferences; the secretary, J. A. Bowen, the Aberdeen, Columbus, and Kosciusko District Conferences.

Second. The purpose of these visits is to act in connection with the presiding elders and any members of the Board who may reside in the districts, together with the Sunday-school agent, in promoting the Sunday-school interest, and report the same to the Board at the next session of our Annual Conference.

Third. The presiding elders of the Conference are requested to see that all the Quarterly Conferences in their districts appoint a suitable person, whose duty it shall be to hold Sunday-school mass meetings in each pastoral charge for the purpose of advancing the Sunday-school interest, and to inform the agent of the time and place of such meeting, and request his attendance. (Discipline, page 104, ¶ 240.)

Fourth. The presiding elders are requested to invite all Sunday-school superintendents to their District Sunday-school Conferences, and to inform them that they are members of the same.

Fifth. The president was appointed to write at once to all the presiding elders in the Conference, requesting their co-operation in the action of the officers of the Board.

Sixth. The president was also appointed to publish an address in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE to the pastors of the North Mississippi Conference in regard to holding Children's Day services.

Seventh. Our Sunday-school agent, Rev. G. W. Bachman, was authorized to draw on the treasurer of the Board for as much money as may be needed to purchase Children's Day programs.

Eighth. The secretary was requested to report the proceedings in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

In our meeting, held in Winona, Miss., March 26, 1895, we were favored with the wise counsels of Revs. J. B. Stone, G. W. Bachman, John Richey, and J. R. D. King. We gratefully acknowledge the Christian hospitality of the preachers and people of Winona.

LET BYGONES BE BYGONES.

Let bygones be bygones; if bygones were clooded
By aught that occasioned a paug of regret,
Oh, let them in darkest oblivion be shrooded;
'Tis wise and 'tis kind to forgive and forget.

Let bygones be bygones, and good be extracted
From ill over which it is folly to frel;
The wisest of mortals have foolishly acted—
The kindest are those who forgive and forget.

Let bygones be bygones; oh, oherish no longer
The thought that the sun of affection has set;
Eclipsed for a moment, its rays will be stronger,
If you, like a Christian, forgive and forget.

Let bygones be bygones; your heart will be lighter
When kindness of yoors with reception has met;
The flame of your love will be purer and brighter
If, God-like, you strive to forgive and forget.

Let bygones be bygones; oh, purge out the leaven
Of malice, and try an example to set
To others, who craving the mercy of heaven,
Are sadly too slow to forgive and forget.

Let bygones be bygones; remember how deeply
To heaven's forbearance we all are in debt;
They value God's infinite goodness too cheaply
Who heed not the precept, "Forgive and forget."

The Power of Our Words.

Little do we realize the magic power of our words. Insignificant though they may seem, yet potent the influence they exert in moulding lives for good or evil in time's ceaseless march from the cradle to the grave. If we only knew the power of our words upon those within our influence, many a regret would be expressed for an idle word spoken hastily, without forcthought, or only in jest; but it has gone, like the random arrow to, perhaps, pierce the heart of an innocent child, and probably within that heart to find lodgment, and be the means of casting a shadow over its whole life. Nowhere should we be more careful in the choice and use of words than in the presence of children. Their susceptible natures imbibe our every word as the tender plant absorbs the evening dew. Tender and fresh are their pure young lives which we are moulding by our unkind and harsh, or pure and gentle words.

In life's busy thoroughfare, as we mingle with each other, let us guard well the words of our lips, for immense is the power they wield for the advancement or degradation of humanity. As a pebble dropped in the ocean has gone from our grasp forever, so our words, once spoken, can never be recalled; and, like the pebble's widening circle, they recede from us on their mission of good or evil till the waves of time break on eternity's shore.

A wonderful musical instrument of rarest workmanship hung for many long years on a tapestried castle wall. Its strings were broken; 'twas covered with dust. No one knew how to mend it or wake its silent notes. A stranger gently removed the dust, reset those broken chords, and from that long silent instrument evoked a melody that filled the old castle with a music marvelously rich and sweet.

Many a soul bowed down by sin and sorrow, bereft of friends and kindred, like that old harp, stands alone, heart strings broken and neglected. We are all members of one great family traveling homeward to the same goal, and it becomes our duty to reset those broken harp strings in the lives of precious souls around us. Kind and gentle words, with patience and prayer, will awake new life within those chords, and fill each neglected and sin-tarnished soul with a renewed heart, revived hopes, and heavenly graces, and, like that old harp,

"Touched by a loving hand,
Wakened by kindness,
Chords that were broken
Will vibrate once more."

Little do we realize half the power of our words. Accordingly, as we use them, they become a blessing or a curse. By our words many have been brought nearer to their Savior, and their souls filled with an inspiration to lead a higher, better, and nobler life. By our words others have been led farther astray in the paths of worldly indifference and sin. As we journey on through the hills and valleys of life, our words are echoed back to us in the same tone and sentiment in which they were delivered. If our words are cold, freezing words come back to us. If hot and hasty, scorching words for them soon follow. If bitter and wrathful, bitter and wrathful they are echoed back. Kind and gentle words image back words kind and gentle as our own.

"Little words, though worthless oft they seem
A life may help to win;
Aye, lift a creature of God's hand
From out the depth of sin."

Then let our words be ever sincere and earnest, and, ere we close these few brief remarks, let's turn the pages of our Bible till we find the thirty-sixth verse of the twelfth chapter of Matthew, and slowly read these warning words: "Every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment." With this solemn warning before us, let us, by our kind, sincere and earnest words, make spotless, worthy, nobly true the life we each one live, and the good, the joy we each will reap, eternity shall tell.

Young Men.

MR EDITOR: I send you a letter written by one of our preachers to his brother in college, and I hope that it may reach the eye of some young man struggling to get an education, and do him as much good as it did the young man who received it. There is many a jewel still in the rough, and if we, in this our age, will do our part, these jewels can be made to shine as the stars in the firmament. Boys sometimes need a spring. They oftentimes grow weary with commonplace things and daily tasks, and if, while in this condition, some inspiration could be furnished them, God only knows how many failures would be avoided and what success achieved.

The letter I send you is prized very highly, and, because of its value to the owner, it is furnished for publication with the desire that it may stir up some lagging soul. As the letter will show, it was written for the twenty-fifth anniversary of the young man. A quarter of a century! What wonders have been wrought in these years! If the young men of America, eleven millions in number, could realize the stupendous possibilities wrapped up in their young lives, and would do with their might what their hands found to do, the hills would rejoice and the valley would blossom as the rose.

Sincerely, ELLISEE

My Dear Brother: In a few days you will reach another milestone in the journey of life. It will bear the figures: 25. Fifteen years ago that age seemed to be a long way off; but now, as you reach it, you realize that there is so much ahead of you that you have not gotten very far after all. You are still a schoolboy, but the remembrance of the tremendous responsibilities awaiting you in life should only make you more determined to be a school-boy awhile longer, that you may prepare yourself to meet those responsibilities like a man. When David was ready to die, and Solomon was about to succeed him, he said: "Be thou strong, therefore, and show thyself a man." The need of this stirring hour is a man. Your school days, your experience on the farm, your two years in the itinerancy—all are to contribute in making you a man.

Twenty-five! How suggestive to the sincere student! There are tremendous possibilities in the young men of this world! David was a youth when he slew Goliath; Daniel was a youth when he was the idol of all Babylon; our blessed Lord was a youth when he walked over the hills of Galilee, and spoke to the crowds that thronged about him; Paul was still a young man when he began his great career as a missionary and apostle; Wesley was still young when he began that great religious movement that has shaken the world; Thomas Harrison's youth is widely known, and he has accomplished wonders. I pray God that you, too, may be useful even in youth. As I go back on the wings of memory to the period of our childhood, many a sweet recollection is awakened in my bosom. How we were boys at the old home together; how we rambled o'er field and wood; how we hoed and plowed and picked cotton and went to school. Sometimes I wish I were a boy again; but, no; oh, no! I turn my face toward the future, bright with fond hopes, and listen to the Master when he says, "Go, toil and reap, and I will be with you." Then I see the fields filled with waving grain, and the Master comes, and we gather up our sheaves and bear them away, and then, oh! what joy will fill and flood the soul forever! God bless you! Your brother,

How Do You Breathe?

I would say, then, cure the affection, usually called "a cold," by breathing pure air and never fear cold air for breathing when the body is properly protected. But it is not enough to inhale pure air. The manner of inhaling it is also of great importance.

How do you breathe is now the question. Do you ever observe how you breathe? Do you breathe through the mouth or nostrils? It makes a wonderful difference. When we talk we are forced to breathe through the mouth, and so many get into the habit of breathing thus altogether, but it is a very bad habit. When not speaking, the lips should be well closed and the breathing should be entirely by the nostrils, but this is not all. The habit of slow, measured deep breathing that covers the entire lung surface, is of more value and importance than you will ever believe until you have tried it, and when you have established the habit of breathing in this manner you will say some very remarkable things in its favor. If you have been subject to any kind of throat or bronchial affection you will pronounce deep nostril breathing "a wonderful discovery" for you. From being often hoarse every Winter you may have the happiness of being entirely free from this affliction. And the advantage will not stop here. It will reach other points of your physical system. All the benefits that occur from a healthy condition of the blood will in a greater or less degree be yours.

The answer, then, to the question, What shall we do for cold? is, discover and remove the cause, and the cause in a great proportion of cases is bad breathing, the breathing of bad air or of good air taken in a bad way, and you may see examples of good air taken in a bad way on any street. You may see children, especially, running along through the frosty air in cold Winter with their mouths wide open. You know they are breathing through their mouths. It seems necessary to them because they acquired the bad habit of mouth-breathing in their cradles. They will tell you, many of them, that when they run they can not help opening their mouths. They can not get breath enough through the nose. But think of it! A strong current of air at the freezing point striking directly upon the delicate membrane of the mouth and throat! That is where "colds" come from. That is where hoarseness and bronchitis come from, a naked throat smitten with ice cold air! I mean the naked inside surface. Now, teach the child to keep the lips closed when not talking or eating, and also to avoid talking in the cold air as much as possible, so that the lips may be closed, and let the cold air be received through the long and winding passage of the nose through which it can not rush in such great volumes and in which it is gradually warmed before it reaches the lungs. Do this and it may safely be asserted that many, very many, colds, and much hoarseness will disappear and that quite as many other cases will be avoided altogether. Pure cold air is the best food for the lungs, but, like all other nourishment, it must be properly taken.

"The Lord Will Provide."

A TRUE STORY.

"Father, do you know I scraped the meal barrel this morning?"

"Well, my dear."

"And the flour gave out last week; there is nothing to cook for dinner."

"The Lord will provide; I have his promise; I can trust him."

"I have been trusting him for a long time, but think it is time something was being done," said Mr. Stone, who was very practical. "That patch of corn must be hoed to-day."

"Sam!" called he, "get the boys and go to hoeing the corn."

"Yes, sir."

Sam, accompanied by five or six negro boys (this happened just before the negroes were set free), went to the field, which was in sight of the house, also in reach of the dinner-horn.

Mr. Stone was a Methodist preacher. He had bought him a small farm and located, but, having no adaptation whatever for the farm, he, as a result, did not make enough to clear expenses. He preached at a little church near his home every Sunday, free of charge.

On this particular morning everything went wrong. Sam went to work, but he could not help wondering what was going to happen. He had been taught to believe every word in the Bible, and it said. "The Lord will provide." Now, thought Sam, is the time. He had not been hoeing long when he looked up and saw a buggy coming up the lane. Before he finished looking at that, there came another, and another, and yet another. He had quit hoeing now, and was gazing at the buggies, when he saw two wagons and two carriages. "My! where do you suppose they are going?" he thought. "There is no graveyard near here" Still he watched them, and his curiosity was painful when he saw them stop at his father's gate. He was too well trained to quit work, but time went by on leaden wings. He thought dinner time would never come. At last he heard the horn, and struck out for home on a run, every little negro after him. When he got there, what was his surprise to find the front gallery and hall filled with boxes and bundles. One of the neighbors had suggested getting something for Bro. Stone; so they came in a pleasant way and paid him a visit, and left a substantial token of their regards. A new suit of clothes for Mr. Stone, and cloth enough for all the others. Such a happy time as they had. When Sam went in, there sat his father in an arm-chair, with tears in his eyes, saying, "The Lord will provide," while his mother, with a very happy face, was putting things to rights, singing snatches of songs as she worked. That example of trust, and the filling of the promise, so influenced Sam that when he was a little older and God put it in the heart of a good woman to educate him, he chose the ministry, and is today one of our most renowned preachers. Let us trust Him, boys; He will do what He says. He says, "My son, give me thy heart," and we are taught that if we give it to Him, He will mold and fashion it in His own image, so that "when He shall appear, we shall be like Him."

"JIM BRIGGS."

When I was a young man, I was sure of everything; but in a few years, finding myself mistaken in a thousand instances, I became not half so sure of most things as before.—John Wesley.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

APPLE COMPOTE.—Select nice, smooth-skinned sour apples; pare and core. This should always be done with care to keep the apple in shape, especially when an invalid, or a person with capricious appetites is concerned. No healthy person can measure the effect little things have upon nervous persons. Nearly cover the apples with boiling water, to which has been added a few strips of the yellow rind of a lemon and a teaspoonful of sugar for each apple; simmer until apples are tender; they must not cook to pieces. When done, take them out of syrup and place them on a dish; boil the syrup until it nearly hairs, pour over the apples, and set aside to cool. Fill the holes with jelly, and serve with or without cream.—Table Talk.

Religion is not needed any more in the church than it is in the store or the workshop.

WHAT AILS YOU?

Do you feel dull, languid, low-spirited, fullness or bloating after eating, tongue coated, bitter or bad taste in mouth, irregular appetite, frequent headaches, "floating specks" before eyes, nervous prostration and drowsiness after meals?

If you have any considerable number of these symptoms, you are suffering from Torpid Livor, associated with Dyspepsia, or Indigestion. The more complicated your disease the greater the number of symptoms. No matter what stage it has reached, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will subdue it.

MRS. MOTT.

MRS. MARY MOTT, of Raven Rock, Pleasants Co., W. Va., writes: "Before using your Dr. Pierce's Goldon Medical Discovery everything I ate would ferment in my stomach, and my tongue was all terribly coated. I thought nothing would remove it. Since taking the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' I can eat a good meal, and enjoy it."

YOUNG—SOPHRONIA ELIZA F. ABBOTT, wife of S. J. Young, was born on Gros Tete, Iberville parish, La., Nov. 14, 1842, and died in East Baton Rouge parish, Aug. 3, 1894. After a protracted illness of near twenty years she entered into the realms of the rest that God has prepared for his people.

She connected her name with the M. E. Church, South, in 1859, and when thus done gave her heart to God, and all after served in the ranks as a true soldier under the captainship of the One only she loved to serve and obey. No poor, travel-worn itinerant ever came by that she did not try to help and give to his relief. No poor, forsaken child of God was ever turned away hungry or naked from her door. She always gave heed to the widow's petition and the orphan's cry. She was the blessed means in the hands of the Master that led this (then benighted) soul out of the dark ways of sin and death into the light of life in Christ.

Yes, had it not been for the pure life, earnest and faithful prayers of that true and consecrated, Christian-hearted wife, the soul that inhabits this earthly tabernacle to-day might have been lifting up its cry in an endless abyss of torment.

Sorrow, do I say. Yes, but not as one without hope, for to-day she is watching and waiting at that "beautiful gate for me." She left the sweet aroma of a life well spent in doing the Master's will, witnessed by all who knew her. May her right living and well-doing be a lasting benediction to all who knew her! She left no children, no mother and no father to mourn her departure—all preceding her to the spirit-land. One half brother, one aunt and a number of cousins—some in Louisiana and others in Massachusetts—remain.

Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord.

GRIFFITH—SARAH CATHERINE GRIFFITH (nee Norwood) was born May 22, 1831, and died at her home in Camaron parish, near Hackberry postoffice, La., Dec. 29, 1894. She was married to Mr. Jno. Griffith, Jan. 11, 1849. This union was blessed with ten children—five sons and five daughters. Her aged husband and six children survive her, four having preceded her to the grave.

She had been a consistant member of the Baptist Church for about forty years. She lived in happy communion with God and blessed fellowship of the Spirit, and answered the call to "come up higher" with perfect trust in the atoning merits of the blood of the Savior. Her genial disposition and amiable spirit won many friends and qualified her for successful Christian work. Her life as a Christian was a blessing to others, in holy conversation and godly, upright examples. No sacrifice was too great for her to make, no cross too heavy for her to bear, no duty too arduous for her to perform, that would advance God's kingdom among men.

When the call came she was conscious that it was a summons to her reward, and expressed to her family her willingness to depart and live with Jesus.

Indeed, the husband has lost a loved companion, the children a devoted mother, and the church a noble worker.

May we all live to meet her in that home where all tears shall be wiped away!

NICHOLSON—The following resolutions were passed by the faculty and students of the Louisiana State University on the death of Mrs. J. W. NICHOLSON:

We, the faculty and student-body of the Louisiana State University, desiring to express our sense of loss in the death of Mrs. J. W. Nicholson, and our sympathy with Col. Nicholson and his family, do hereby resolve:

That in the death of Mrs. Nicholson we, the faculty and students of this institution, have sustained the personal loss of one who had endeared herself to us by her many acts of thoughtful kindness, by her unfailing interest in the welfare and happiness of each one of us, by the loveliness of her disposition, by the rare beauty of her Christian character, and by the ennobling and purifying influences which she diffused around her.

That we tender to our president and to his family our unfeigned sympathy in this, their sore trial and inexpressible grief; that we rejoice with them in the heritage of Christian assurance, of tender memories, and of hallowed associations which has been left to them; and that we invoke upon them the benedictions of Him who doeth all things well, and who Himself, out of the depths of an infinite compassion, wept at the grave of buried love.

That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, and, with request for publication, to the Baton Rouge papers, the New Orleans Times-Democrat, Picayune, and CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE; the Guardian Star, of Homer (La.), and to the Louisiana Advance, of Arcadia.

KENDRICK—JOHN WATTS KENDRICK was born in St. Helena parish, La., March 29, 1819. He was married to Ann Catharine Reames Nov 17, 1842. He moved to East Baton Rouge parish in 1858, and remained there until his death, which occurred Feb. 13, 1895.

He was a member of the Methodist Church. During the last few years he seldom attended church, because of feeble health. He always went when he was able. He read his Bible and held family prayer as long as he was able to stay up. He was a loving husband and a kind father. He had thirteen children, eight of whom are living, and are all members of the church.

He has been suffering for years with heart disease and other afflictions. He was confined to his bed three weeks. He talked about dying, and said he was trusting in the Lord. He did not speak for three days before he died. He bore his afflictions with patience. He passed away as if he was going to sleep without a struggle, with a sweet smile on his face.

He leaves a wife, children and grandchildren, relatives and friends, to mourn his loss. Let us live so that we may meet our loved one in the sweet by-and-by. L. E. K.

SMITH—Little BESSIE, aged four years, died, Feb 22, 1895, at her home near Florenville, La.

The sad angel of death entered the home of Mr. Charles and Mrs. Mollie Smith on Friday night, the twenty-second, and stole from them their beloved little Bessie; but God had some purpose in taking our darling, and we try to say, "God's will be done!" She was sick only two days before she left this world of sin to dwell in heaven. Bessie's death was the first one the writer ever witnessed, which was a sad one indeed. Father and mother were loath to give their darling up. She only budded on earth to bloom in heaven, dear ones, where she will await the coming of parents, brothers, sisters and loved ones.

BESSIE RAWLS.

KING—The whole community around Galloway Church was thrown into the deepest sorrow by the sad and untimely death of Bro. LAWRENCE KING, who was assassinated at Dayton Station, on the L., N. O. and T. R. R., about one month ago. I never saw a community more affected by a death, I think. He was just reaching manhood, and seems to have been a favorite among the young people, and I was highly spoken of by the older ones. A good child, a dutiful son, a true friend; he was respected and loved by many. May God sustain and comfort the widowed mother, and may the entire family meet where there will be no parting! M. J. MILLER.

HILL—Little SAM JONES HILL, son of Bro. and Sister Sam Hill, was born Aug. 13, 1893; departed this life Jan. 27, 1895, aged one year five months and fourteen days.

He was the joy of the home. We might say he was the sunshine of the home. A dark cloud overshadowed that home one Sunday night. I would say to the bereaved ones: Grieve not for little Sam Jones. He is freed from the trials and sufferings of this world. A bud nipped on earth to bloom in heaven.

CRAWFORD—Mr. JOHN CRAWFORD, aged forty-six years, died at his home, Feb 20, 1895, and his remains were buried on the twenty-third.

He was ill only eight days before God called him. He had been a member of the M. E. Church for twenty years. He leaves a wife and five children, and a host of friends, to mourn his death. We can only hope to meet him in fairer worlds on high.

BESSIE RAWLS.

Mr. P. D. D. Dalacroix, Cypremort P. O., La., Nov. 30, 1888, says: "Three years ago an agent representing Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar came into my store. Being busy, was unable to give him any time. Before leaving he gave me a sample bottle of Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, asking me to give it to anyone suffering with a cough or cold. Several days afterward I caught a heavy cold. Remembering the sample, thought I would try it. Six teaspoonfuls cured me. Ordered a supply at once, and have sold it with satisfaction to all. It acts like magic on all my family, and I would not be without it. I take pleasure in recommending it at all times." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as 50c. bottles.

"Earthly Footsteps of the Man of Galilee."

A new work of Bishop Vincent, and Dr. J. W. Lee (of St. Louis). A great publishing company is just bringing to light the fruit of much toil and outlay of money. They sent an artist photographer, under the guidance of Dr. Lee, to the Holy Land, there to secure the most exact and perfect pictures of the salient scenes of the earthly life of Christ and the Apostles. We have examined a portion of the work and unhesitatingly pronounce it by far the best thing of its kind ever seen by us. The method of photographic reproduction employed is faultless.

The forthcoming book will contain some four or five hundred of these splendid pictures, 8x10 inches in size. The work will be issued in twenty-four parts, pages 11¼x13¼ inches, with chronological charts and colored maps. Each part will contain sixteen pictures, besides the enchanting pen pictures of these renowned writers. The series will run through twenty-four weeks, one a week, at a regular price of 25 cents each. But the ADVOCATE has made a special arrangement by which it will furnish all its subscribers, new and old, for 10 cents a number. Less than half, but very little more than a third of what you will have to pay if your name is not on our subscription roll. The entire series in this way will cost only $2.40; otherwise it will cost $6. This rule of the publishers of this book is the strictest that only to our subscribers can we make this special offer. For $2.40 you may get what another must pay $6 for if you are a subscriber to the ADVOCATE. Send $2.40, and each of the series will be mailed you as fast as issued. Or ten cents (stamps taken) for one issue—any way you prefer.

LAST TOUR

By DOCTOR LEE,

ACCOMPANIED BY PHOTOGRAPHIC ARTIST,

Robert E. M. Bain

Was Made in 1894

When author and artist, with note-book and camera, actually retraced (as did Bishop Vincent) the journeyings of the Savior and His Apostles, recounting their toils, trials, and triumphs, which brought to humanity the dawn of a new day.

BEAR IN MIND

"Earthly Footsteps of the Man of Galilee" is a wholly unique offering. Never before has a work of like plan and scope been attempted. The journeyings of Christ and His Apostles were literally followed in 1894 by author and artist with note-book and camera, photographing and describing the scene of every recorded event. Eight hundred negatives were secured and 384 finish the production. It is new, original, artistic, and striking in every respect. The work is copyrighted, is thoroughly exclusive, and can not be secured in this vicinity except through this paper.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. ARENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

SECOND TRIAL OF JOB AND ITS ISSUE.

(Job II, 1-10.)

1. Our lesson contains God's estimate of Job's religious estate. "A perfect and an upright man. One that feareth God and escheweth evil. Holding fast his integrity."

(1) A perfect man is the admiration of God and angels. Liberal, but no less honest; sociable, but also truthful; industrious and frugal, but also charitable, etc. Symmetrically developed.

(2) Upright. A synonym for the adjective sincere. Duplicity is lying. Mean what you say. Sincere to all at all times.

(3) Fear of God banishes the fear of aught also. If God is not feared, then the fear of the uncertain future, impending sickness, death and grave, oppresses.

(4) To eschew evil is the Christian's solemn duty. Jesus was to save from sin. From the evil heart of unbelief, the source of sin.

(5) Holding fast his integrity, notwithstanding adverse circumstances. A child of God, no matter what betide.

2. Among Job's ills it was not the least that he had a silly and godless wife. Notwithstanding his bereavement and pain, she advises him to "curse—i. e., renounce—God and die."

(1) Of all earthly gifts, a sensible, pious wife is the greatest. Sing her praise. Extol her virtue. She is dearer than precious stones, more than flowers.

(2) A good wife is a helpmeet. She contributes largely to a man's success. Is the power behind the throne. The necessary balance wheel. The man's inspiration and impellent.

(3) Frequently the husband is won for Christ and the church by the loving instrumentality of the wife.

(4) A good wife makes home lovely and attractive. The husband is received after the day's toil with kisses and endearing epithets. A savory meal is in waiting.

(5) But the reverse—well met with such miniature hells. Job's wife seemed to be filled with the venom of Satan. Renounce God! Herself an atheist. And die! Was tired of her marital relations. Had promised to keep him in sickness and in health. But now she looked upon husband as an incumbrance.

3. Job's reply was expressive of his unadulterated piety. "What? Shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil?"

(1) We, too, have received blessings from God unspeakably great and numerous. Undeserved. Praise him. Extol his holy name.

(2) If adversity overtakes us, we will not complain. The Lord reigns, he can not err.

* * * "Afflictions
Ne'er from the ground arise;
But oftimes Heaven's celestial benedictions
Assume such dark disguise."

Epworth League Convention.

There will be certain indispensable expenses connected with the State Convention of Epworth Leagues, and, after consultation, the committee has determined to ask the local Leagues of the State to help bear them. Printing and postage will form the chief items. It is estimated that ten cents per capita will cover all necessary expenditures. Leagues in the North Mississippi Conference are requested to send ten cents for every member to Rev. Ben P. Jaco, Abbeville, Miss.; and Leagues in the Mississippi Conference are asked to send ten cents for every member to Rev. R. W. Bailey, Hazlehurst, Miss. These brethren will receipt for same, and turn over amounts collected to the Convention treasurer, who will pay bills incurred in necessary work of printing, postage, etc.

WHY?

Because if you have a policy in The Mutual, you do not want to give it up and take another with an inferior company—FOR THE MUTUAL HAS NO SUPERIOR. If you want insurance you want it in the strongest company with the best record. AS AN AGENT YOU WANT A CONTRACT WITH THE COMPANY THAT GETS THE BUSINESS.

In the Land of the Pyramids.

BY BISHOP CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

Of course, every visitor to Egypt desires first to see the Pyramids, and, if possible, get that magnificent view from the top of great Cheops. Well, I did it, finding the ascent easier than was anticipated, and the view not at all disappointing. We started early in the morning, intending to climb the Pyramid, see the Sphinx, ride across the desert to Sakkarah on donkeys and back the same day. The drive to the Pyramids of Ghieh, across the splendid iron bridge that spans the Nile, out past the Museum, and for nine miles on a macadamized road, shaded by trees that locked their branches overhead, was itself an experience never to be forgotten. Both the distant and near views of Great Cheops are at first disappointing. Though 460 feet high, on account of its broad base of 750 feet seems scarcely more than 100. The ascent is at one corner, and at an angle of about fifty degrees. The great stones are irregular in size and shape, requiring occasionally some effort to step from one to the other.

After paying the old white-turbaned and black-robed sheik two shillings each, he furnished us with three guides—two to hold our hands and one behind to push. This sum is to be divided among the guides—citizens of the village—but each one expects "backsheesh." One of my guides claimed to be a doctor—Dr. Marmoud. He assured me that I was in perfectly safe hands, and when we stopped to rest, had me to shake my head to prevent dizziness. A boy with a bottle of water attended and insisted on supplying me with something to "wet your mouth." They rubbed me, and inquired: "How you feel? You got good guide, master. We satisfy you and you satisfy us." Thus we had the usual experience of tourists to this world's wonder. At length we reached the top, and for a half-hour revelled in old as glorious historic scenes as the human eye can take in at one sweep on this earth. At our feet rolled the mystic Nile, whose source was only discovered a few years ago, and whose fertilizing waters have fed more millions of people than any stream in the world. Canals, out here and there, carried the Nile water all over the green valley, while stately palm trees feathered the villages and stood sentinel along the great river. Cairo, with its graceful minarets and swelling domes and magnificent palaces, was near at hand, while to the left, in the distance, was the site of Heliopolis, and to the right the Pyramids of Sakkarah. Beyond Sakkarah, a few miles, was the site of ancient Memphis, with scarcely a vestige of its glory remaining. In another direction the desert stretched out before us until arrested by the drear Mokattam Hills. Descending, we had the same annoying encounters with the guides. The one behind tied his long girdle around me to hold in the event of accident, while the two in front held firmly to my hands. All of this is quite unnecessary, but I made the rascals earn all the "backsheesh" they received. The donor grew quite familiar and even confidential. He said: "How many children (children) you got?" I said, "five." "How many wives you got?" "Only one, of course." I said with some vehemence, "In my country we have but one." "Ugh," said he; "I have two. I give you one, if you want it—the old one." And the old sinner laughed as though quite sure he had played a good point, and would get several "backsheesh."

After descending from the Pyramid, we mounted donkeys and started across the desert, eight miles, to Sakkarah. Most of the way the little animals had to move slowly in the deep sand, but occasionally we galloped at full speed, the dragoman running on foot and plying the whip. He was in Chicago during the Exposition as one of the donkey-boys in "the streets of Cairo." He had imbibed somewhat of Chicago ideas, in consequence, and named the donkey I rode "Carter Harrison."

At Sakkarah, as lonely a spot as could be found in a sandy waste, we visited the Apis Mausoleum—the tombs of the bulls—probably the largest sarcophagi in the world. To M. Mariette, a distinguished archæologist, the world is indebted for these discoveries and recoveries. The house which he built, and where he resided during those excavations, is the only building to be seen for miles. Through long subterranean, hot passages we were conducted by the light of candles, and saw the various chambers with their massive red and black granite tombs. These contained the bodies of the sacred bulls, which were embalmed and buried with greater pomp than was ever accorded king or prince. There are twenty-four of these sarcophagi, three of which contain inscriptions including the names of Anasis, Cambyses, and Khebasch. A few hundred yards away we entered the tomb of Thi, a royal counselor and confidant of kings, who also had priestly functions. This was a later discovery of Mariette. It was once a palace above ground, but for centuries was buried under the sand. The several chambers of this tomb are ornamented with curious carvings representing the various industries of the country, animals and birds, agricultural and mechanical instruments, and certain ceremonies in religious service. After an hour spent in these tombs of buried centuries we remounted our donkeys and returned to the Pyramids, where our carriage was in waiting to take us to Cairo. This was a laborious, but most notable, day.

An afternoon was given to the Museum, where days could be profitably spent. From one well-filled room to another we wandered and wondered. What gigantic builders and workers in stone those ancient Egyptians were! Here may be seen religious, funeral, civil, historical, and Greek and Roman monuments of every age and description. And what adds special value to this greatest collection of Egyptian antiquities in the world is the accurate and reliable information connected with the place from which each object comes. One of the curious things which arrested my attention was a wooden statue of, probably, an Egyptian sheik. It is not less than 4,000 years old, but, apart from its antiquity, is valuable as a work of art. The pose and expression of the figure are striking. But that which most interests a Christian is the remarkably preserved mummy of Rameses the Great, the Pharaoh who "knew not Joseph," who had seen the infant Moses, and "made the children of Israel to serve with rigor." There is no doubt of its perfect identity. The story of its discovery is a romance, and the fact of its preservation for so many centuries is a marvel. One would be impressed with the strong features—the full brow, the large nose, the high cheek bones, the square chin, and the firm lips—even if unacquainted with the remarkable history of the great builder of cities and persecutor of God's people. The same clothes in which he was wrapped are still on his body, and one hand, well preserved even to the finger nails, slightly lifted from his breast, holds the position it has done for more than thirty centuries.

We visited the site of ancient Heliopolis, the On of the Bible, and its great Temple of the Sun, whose priest, Potipherah, at the command of Pharaoh, gave his daughter Asenath to Joseph for a wife. There Moses became acquainted with all the learning of the Egyptians, and there Plato and other great scholars are said to have come for study. Nothing now remains of the famed city but some old mounds into which Egyptologists have been digging in search of historic treasure, and the splendid red granite obelisk, the oldest in the world. A few poor Arabs occupy mud hovels in the midst of these classic ruins, unconscious of the history they have inherited and unimproved by the lessons of the ages. Not far from Heliopolis we stopped to see the "Virgin's Tree," under which tradition says the Holy Family rested in their flight to Egypt. It is certainly an old tree, and may mark a place where "the young Child and his mother" tarried for awhile; but it is hardly ancient enough to sustain "the traditions of the elders." At any rate, I plucked a few leaves therefrom, and will preserve them as a memorial of the visit and sacred place. It seemed almost a profanation, after walking amid such classic and sacred associations, to visit an ostrich farm; but, as it was near, we concluded to avail ourselves of the opportunity. Think of 1,350 ostriches on one farm! They were of all ages, from one day to fifteen years, and, like some people in this world, are only valuable for their plumage. There were large and small inclosures for the immense birds, and a number of hospitals for the sick. It takes £12 10s. to provide daily food for the farm, besides many other expenses. That will give some idea as to the value of feathers in Western markets, for the investment, I understand, yields a very liberal interest.

On Friday, shortly after noon, the time of their performing, we went to see and hear the howling dervishes. The occasion attracted a large company of Europeans, and the sheik does not fail to make it a source of revenue. They are willing to be religious, but witnesses to their devotions ought to pay for the privilege. I am told that, however sincerely fanatical they may have been, they and their performances are degenerating. The one we attended was rather tame as compared with descriptions read and expectations excited. On a raised stone platform, under an arbor, the performers sat in a large semi-circle. After a prayer by the priest, the singing and swaying of the bodies began. All sorts of noises were made, from the grunt of a pig to the whoop of a Comanche. They would slowly begin on one strain, and then get faster and faster, to the music of drums and tambourines, with their heads swinging from side to side, until the howlers were almost exhausted. Several had very long hair, which flew wildly about with their swaying bodies, and gave them the appearance of madmen. As an act of worship, you can not imagine anything more grotesque. I regretted not seeing the dancing dervishes who entertained at the same hour.

We visited the Coptic quarter of Cairo, and saw the old church where you are confidently told Joseph and Mary tarried during their flight into Egypt. Just between the two spots, in the grotto under that church where the holy pair sat, is a large stone font or small baptistery, used for the baptizing of children. In the Coptic Church boys are baptized at the age of forty days, and girls at eighty days, though this rule is not strictly adhered to. They hold that if a child die unbaptized, it will be blind in the next life. The child is dipped three times in the water, into which a little holy oil from the priest's thumb has been dropped. They also believe that the Holy Spirit descends upon the child in baptism. We visited one of their churches on Sabbath evening, hoping to attend a service, but was disappointed. The Copts have a curious and rather sad history as Christians. Descended from the ancient Egyptians, they have more pure native blood in their veins than any inhabitants of the land. But persecutions and poverty have so dispirited and despoiled them that they have steadily declined in numbers, until now there are probably less than 200,000 in all Egypt. Some of their trials under tyrannous Moslem princes are among the bitterest in history.

The Copts claim descent from St. Mark, who they assert was the first to preach the gospel in Egypt, and was the first patriarch of Alexandria. The patriarch, the supreme head of the church, who occupies the chair of St. Mark, is called the "Patriarch of Alexandria," although he resides in Cairo. He remains unmarried, though the celibacy of the clergy is not one of their tenets, wears woolen garments next his body, and is waked after every quarter of an hour at night to be reminded of his spiritual obligations. All Copts are enjoined to pray seven times in the course of the day, beginning at daybreak and ending at midnight. "In the seven prayers of each day, altogether, they repeat the whole Book of Psalms." There are screens in their churches, and in the Protestant Mission churches also, to separate the sexes. On entering their churches the men take off their shoes, but retain their turbans. And at the early morning service, which lasts about three hours, nearly every worshiper has a crutch, four or five feet long, to lean upon while he stands, which he does most of the time.

Confession is required of all members of the Coptic Church as indispensable to receiving the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. They also observe long fasts, and regard a pilgrimage to Jerusalem the duty of all who are able to perform it. Most of their doctrines and ceremonies resemble the Roman Catholic.

While in the Coptic quarter we crossed to the island of Rhoda and examined the Nilometer, an instrument for measuring the rise and fall of water in the river Nile.

In America we regard the overflow of our rivers as a disaster, and spend vast sums to confine the water in narrow channels. In Egypt the inundation of the Nile is a blessing, and the one guarantee of abundant harvests. The island of Rhoda, formed by the branches of the Nile, is the traditional site where the infant Moses was discovered by the daughter of Pharaoh. I suppose there is no means of identifying the exact spot, and no reason for denying this or any other plausible and pleasurable story.

It gave me pleasure to attend service Sunday evening at the American Mission, and listen to an earnest sermon from a young missionary, Rev. Mr. White, just out from the United States. His father is a pastor in Kansas City. The American Mission of the United Presbyterian Church was established in Cairo in November, 1852, and in the forty years of its history has had remarkable success. There are now 15 ordained missionaries, 8 unmarried female missionaries, 17 native ministers, 35 other native church workers, 32 organized congregations, 4,095 members, and 121 boarding- and day-schools, with 7 600 pupils. The amount paid last year by the people for the support of the work was £7,370. Harem workers teach the gospel to about 3,000 women. They have stations at Alexandria, Tanta, Cairo, and all important centers in the Nile delta and valley.

On Tuesday morning, Jan. 1, 1895—happy New Year's Day—we "booked" for Alexandria by rail, and arrived in that bustling, thriving, thoroughly modern city in three and a half hours.

The Mississippi Methodist Orphanage.

The joint commission appointed at the recent sessions of the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences to consider the advisability of establishing an Orphan's Home under the auspices of the M. E. Church, South, in this State, met in Winona on the twenty-sixth of March. There were present R. J. Jones, W. A. Gunning and A. F. Watkins, from the Mississippi Conference; J. A. Bowen and J. R. Bingham, from the North Mississippi Conference. Dr. J. D. Cameron was unable to attend. Permanent organization was effected by electing W. A. Gunning president, and J. A. Bowen secretary. On motion of R. J. Jones, it was resolved that it is the sense of this joint commission that there ought to be established a Mississippi Methodist Orphanage. Pending the adoption of the resolution, J. A. Bowen read a letter from Judge Wood, of Selma, Ala., explanatory of the workings of the Alabama Methodist Orphanage. In the discussion of the resolution the fact was brought out that the two hundred thousand, or more, Protestants of Mississippi support but one orphan asylum, and have nothing in the way of a hospital for the sick, or home for the poor and needy; and that the eighty thousand white Methodists of the State are doing absolutely nothing in the way of organized benevolent work, and have left the care of the indigent, the diseased and the orphaned to the State. The humanitarian work of the church can no more be committed to the State than can its educational work. It is strange that evangelical Christianity is so long in learning this lesson.

On the other hand, the Roman Catholic Church in Mississippi, having about twelve thousand communicants, maintains two flourishing Orphans' Homes in Natchez, and may have similar institutions in other parts of the State. It was claimed that two-thirds, or three-fourths, of the children in these orphanages are the children of Protestant parents, and that practically all of them leave the institutions zealous Roman Catholics and earnest propagandists of that faith. These institutions are in large measure supported by Protestants, who could much more wisely support similar institutions established by their own churches. That there are no children needing our help is simply the statement of thoughtlessness or ignorance. We do not find them because we do not look for them. We do not look for them because we have made no provision for their relief and care.

The pioneer Methodists have preached the gospel from sea to sea across this continent until the whole land is dotted with Methodist Churches. Now, as the population increases, the great work of the church is the cultivation of the fields already won; and one of the most imperative duties of the church, and one of the most important means of denominational growth, is the care of the children of the poor. The cry, "How can the churches reach the masses?" will be answered only when the church goes to the masses and shows that it loves them—loves their bodies as well as their souls, and loves them with its gold as well as with its words of truth. The church that does not systematically care for the poor and helpless deserves to lose, and will lose, the respect of right-thinking men. The most dangerous element in society is reinforced by those who in childhood were orphans, or the children of irresponsible and degraded parentage; and the church owes the world the duty of doing all in its power to make of these unfortunate children law-abiding citizens and honest and virtuous men and women.

On motion of R. J. Jones, it was ordered that we recommend to the Annual Conferences the appointment of a Board of Directors, to consist of three preachers and two laymen from each Conference, whose duty it shall be to procure a charter for the Mississippi Methodist Orphanage, and, as soon as practicable, locate and put into operation the same, and that the president and secretary of this joint commission report this action to the next sessions of the Conferences.

On motion, each presiding elder of the two Conferences was requested to select some preacher in his district who will undertake to bring this interest before the people of the district, especially at the approaching sessions of our District Conferences.

A. F. Watkins was elected corresponding secretary, and instructed to make a report of the work of this meeting through the columns of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and to solicit correspondence in the interests of this movement.

In the Living Present.

Early to rise! President Faure, of France, rises every morning at five o'clock. After a bath he attends to his private correspondence. When his secretaries arrive at eight o'clock he is ready for public business. He is a very temperate eater.

H. E. M. Stutfield, in "Blackwood's Magazine," assures that the celibate tendencies of the latter-day males is attributable to hard times; are not misogamists from choice. Could not afford the luxury of a wife. Too expensive. When will parents learn to train their daughters to be a helpmeet instead of an expensive luxury to a man?

Six years ago the daughter of Chief-Justice Fuller clandestinely left the parental roof and married a dudish vagabond, a man whom her parents would not tolerate in their house. Now she returns home, asking forgiveness, etc. Says that besides great poverty, she suffered much from ill-treatment of her husband. Divorce proceedings have been instituted. A lesson to wayward damsels.

Balfour's book, "The Foundation of Belief," is favorably commented on by able theologians. Unlike Gladstone, whose style is verbose, Balfour's diction is epigrammatic. Unlike Paley and Butler, who endeavored to prove that belief in Christianity was quite rational, the great leader of the opposition in the English House of Commons holds that the causes of belief transcend reason. I am that I am, said God. Thus saith the Lord. We must accept it, though reason quail.

Dr. Parkhurst, in "Public Opinion," laments the decline of home-life: Marriages decrease. Divorces multiply. Club-life thrives. Spinsters agitate for "emancipation," and in the meantime occupy remunerative positions formerly held by men.

The editor of "The Atlantic Monthly" told a Boston audience that reading a daily paper should not occupy more than twenty minutes. Hostile criticism and numerous interviews followed. The majority of the parties interviewed, mostly preachers, agree with the speaker. It was a wastage of time to read the tedious reports of crime and casualty.

Rev. S. J. Herben, A. M., hitherto assistant editor of the Epworth Herald, has been chosen by Dr. Buckley as his assistant in editing the New York Christian Advocate. Mr. Herben is a brilliant writer.

Louisiana State Sunday-School Association.

NINTH ANNUAL CONVENTION.

The ninth Annual Convention of the Louisiana State Sunday-school Association will be held in the Broad Street Methodist Episcopal Church, South Lake Charles, May 7, 8, and 9. Evangelical Sunday-schools throughout the State are urged to send delegates, and these will be entertained by the people of the church in Lake Charles. Those purposing to attend will please inform Mr. George D. Price, Lake Charles, in order that entertainment may be provided in time. The several railroads in the State have granted reduced rates on the certificate plan, i. e.: one and one-third fare for the round trip, taking a certificate going, and returning at one-third fare.

Discussions of many subjects of importance to Sunday-school workers will be led by clergymen and laymen familiar with the work.

The association exercises no control over schools represented, makes no assessments, does not organize Sunday-schools, but seeks to bring about better methods of working, to beget enthusiasm, and organizes parish associations for Sunday-school institute work.

ONE SOUL

Perchance in heaven one day to me
Some blessed saint will come and say,
"All hail, beloved; but for thee
My soul to death had fallen a prey."
And, oh, what rapture in the thought,
One soul to glory to have brought!

Bro. Hatley Again.

REJOINDER NO 2

Nothing seems to give Bro. H. more real pleasure than his baseless assertion that Methodists reject the authority of Christ. As well as I can learn from his incoherent vociferations, he bases his assertion upon about three facts. The first is our teachings in regard to what constitutes the church. He utterly repudiates the Methodist Church. "Bro. Carley is right when he says that I claim that the Methodist Church is man's church." Certainly I am, and I am right in every other charge of misrepresentation. He proceeds to say: "I,"—the Methodist Church—"has no authority nor warrant in the New Testament. There is not a word nor line that contemplates it, much less authorizes it. I is purely a human institution in its conception, in its origin, and in its structure. I has no more right to be called a church than the Knights of Pythias or the Masons."

Now, we know exactly where Bro. H. stands, so far as the Methodist Church is concerned. He says: "It is about time we had a clear understanding of some little matters." I think so, too; and if Bro. H. is a reliable exponent of Baptist pretensions, we ought to turn on the light until the scripturalness of our church and its ordinances is seen by even the most bigoted leaders of narrow-minded sectarianism. God will not hold us guiltless if, having the truth, we do nothing to save the people from the darkness intensified by blind leaders of the blind.

In my criticisms of Bro. H.'s little book I quoted from the Standard Dictionary the following definitions of the word "church:" "1. A body of Christians with a distinct history, creed, ecclesiastical government, and forms of worship; a denomination; as the Baptist Church." "2 The whole body of Christian believers, called sometimes the church universal, or church catholic." He says: "I reject both of Bro. Carley's definitions of church. That is not what the Bible means by the use of the word." I have never contended that the word "church" is used in the Bible in the sense of the first definition—that is, as signifying a denomination. All that I have said is that Christians have a right to combine and call themselves a church, meaning thereby a denomination. There is nothing in the Word of God forbidding it, and what the Bible does not forbid is certainly allowable. I have never contended that the word "church" is used in the Bible to signify a house of worship; but in popular speech it is so used, and no harm results. But I do contend that the word is used in the New Testament in the sense of the second definition, as given above. This Bro. H. rejects. He has no conception of such a thing. Hear him: "All this talk about a universal church is just so much noise in the air. What is the universal church on earth?" I had said that when we speak of the church universal, or church catholic, we mean the church in its generic sense. Bro. H. asks: "What sort of a church is that? I warrant you it is not scriptural as you conceive it. Is there a whole brood of them? Come, teach us something about it." Well, that is what I shall now proceed to do.

Let the question at issue be fully understood. Bro. H claims that the church is a local organization, and nothing more. This is sound Baptist doctrine. Armitage, in his "History of the Baptists," says: "In the apostolic age the church was a local body, and each church was entirely independent of every other church. The simple term ecclesia designates one congregation, or organized assembly, and no more, this being its literal and primal meaning. . . . This word ecclesia was borrowed from the Greek translation and naturalized into Christianity. Jesus and his apostles used it with the strictest regard to its etymology, and if we would catch their meaning in its use, we must interpret it by its primitive sense. Its contemporary use in common secular life answered exactly to its sacred use. . . . A local organization fully expresses the meaning of the word ecclesia wherever it is found in Holy Writ." (Pages 118-120.)

That the word ecclesia, translated church, is used in the New Testament to signify a local organization, no one was ever known to deny; but to assert that it has no other meaning is to hold to a very narrow and one-sided view of truth. Methodists, in common with most other Christian people, hold that, in addition to this meaning of the word, it has a broader signification. Dr. Schaff, in the critical notes in Lange's commentary on Matthew xvi, 18, says: "II"—ecclesia—"is used in the New Testament (1), in a general sense, of the whole body of Christian believers, or the church universal; . . . (2) more frequently, in a particular sense, of a local congregation." This witness is true. The word will be found to have one of these meanings in every place where it is used in the New Testament. Like many other words, it has a narrow and also a broad signification. Baptists give the word its narrow, secular meaning everywhere, while we claim for it, also, a signification in many places wide enough to embrace Christ's disciples in every time and place.

Baptism of the Holy Ghost.

Dr. Carradine, in his book, "Second Blessing in Symbol," makes the "second blessing," by which he means a second cleansing, to be identical with the baptism of the Holy Ghost. Bro. Lewis, in the ADVOCATE, of Feb. 21, does the same thing, and tells us that writers on entire sanctification, so far as he knows, always do. Let us study this matter carefully!

The work of the Holy Ghost is:

1. To convict of sin. This he does for the sinner.

2. To regenerate. This he does for the penitent.

3. To witness to our salvation. This he does for the Christian.

4. To fit the Christian for his work.

5. To guide and aid the worker in his work.

6. To aid the Christian to grow in grace.

7. To illumine and thus aid the devout student to understand God's Word.

Which of these may be, and was, in the New Testament denominated the baptism of the Holy Ghost? Surely, not all of them. (See Acts i, 5, and ii.) That which is in these passages thus named and characterized as the baptism of the Holy Ghost, that which came to the disciples first on Pentecost, is described by our Lord as being "endued with power from on high." This is the only explanation of its nature and purpose given in the Bible. Thus the Christian is fitted for his work. It is subsequent to regeneration. Certainly the disciples were regenerated before Pentecost. "Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed?" asked Paul of some Christians. Yes, it is a work subsequent to regeneration; but not a subsequent cleansing. It is a fitting for one's work, and nothing more. To make it more is to add to the words of our Lord—a very fearful thing to do. The world does not need any man-made gospel; it needs "the truth as it is in Jesus," with nothing added to it, and nothing taken from it. A very great deal of error harmful to the church and lost men, who need saving, comes by care less interpretations of God's Word.

Brethren, we must be careful to teach only what God's Word teaches. God grant that we may all be more careful in this matter.

Mississippi Y. M. C. A. Convention.

The eighth Annual Convention of the Young Men's Christian Association of Mississippi, which met in Jackson, March 14-17, was probably a very notable gathering. Six colleges were represented, two of them from Louisiana. The address of welcome was delivered by Rev. Dr. W. B. Murrah, president of Millsaps College. Dr. Jones, of the University of Mississippi, made an appropriate response. After the electing of temporary officers, Rev. Vernon H. Cowsert, pastor of the Baptist Church of Natchez, delivered a very able address on "Christian Manhood the Need of the Hour."

On Friday morning, after the routine business was disposed of, Bishop C. B. Galloway spoke on "Missions." He said that the church is but an organization of the Christ-spirit; the Y. M. C. A. another form of it.

On Friday afternoon a paper was read by C. R. White, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of Natchez, on "Social Work for Men in the Association."

This was followed by a conversation on "Bible Study," conducted by H. P. Andersen, of Atlanta, Ga., one of the international secretaries. It was found that ten out of eleven associations reported systematic study of the Bible going on, with an enrollment of 178 men in the classes. In these associations last year there were reported 97 conversions—a very strong testimony to the value of systematic Bible study.

Prof. Dabney Lipscomb, of the A. and M. College, Mississippi, delivered a very fine address on "Spiritual Results, and How to Obtain Them."

Friday night Chairman W. A. Gunning read the State Executive Committee's report, which showed the work throughout the State in a very healthy condition. The work of State Secretary Willis and Treasurer R. F. Reed, of Natchez, was highly commended.

Dr. C. Alphonso Smith, of the Louisiana State University, spoke on "How to Study the Word." Dr. Smith, himself a young [illegible] made very decided impressions on [illegible] who heard him. He said: "We make tremendous claims for the Bible to know so little of it. Many educated persons know the great works of literature far better than they know God's Word, and yet these are often the people who scoff at its teachings." He said each book of the Bible should be read as a whole, with an effort to catch the writer's thought in it just as we do other books.

On Saturday morning a paper by Mr. C. F. Webb, of Yazoo City, on "How to Organize Christian Work among Young Men in Small Towns," was the first on the programme. Mr. Webb explained the methods used in his town in this work, and made numerous helpful suggestions as to the management of it.

Mr. F. S. Brookman, of New York, then spoke on "Bible Study." The object of this talk was to suggest some lines of systematic study.

The afternoon was given to two parlor conferences—one at the home of Maj. Millsaps, for the city and town delegates; the other at the home of Mr. J. R. Dobyns, for the college men. The object of these conferences was to discuss the special need of each of these divisions of association work, and they were both of great interest.

On Saturday night Mr. Brockman spoke on "The Growth of the Association's Work in the Medical Colleges of Our Country," where, he said, men are more tempted than in any other institutions of learning. Bible study and personal work were being rapidly pushed in numbers of these colleges now, where, a few years ago, they were unknown.

Mr. H. W. Luce, of the Student Volunteer Movement, delivered an interesting and able address (in the interest of missions) on "The World for Christ."

On Sunday two delegates were sent to each of the churches, where they spoke of the Association's work at the morning hour.

In the afternoon a men's meeting at the First M. E. Church, addressed by Mr. F. S. Brookman, proved a blessing to the large crowd present. Between fifteen and twenty men accepted Christ.

On Sunday night the farewell service was held in the First Presbyterian Church, all the churches uniting.

C. R. WHITE,

Col. De Lap, alias (MR.?) Rex B., of Natchez Miss.

MR. EDITOR: I attempt no answer to MR. "rex b." His piece is only an output of carnality, as any ordinary observer can easily determine. Of course, the fling at me as to my failure in my course of study was made without knowing, or caring, whether there were any facts behind it or not. There were none. The people on the charges where I labored will testify that I did hard and successful work. Nothing but neuralgia, that prevented the possibility of study, caused it. Thank you for your indulgence. No further draw will be made on the ADVOCATE in this matter.

Be Cheery.

Why should a person make himself a nuisance? What gain is there in grimness, and sourness, and unsociability? Few people care to listen to whining and complaint. On the whole the world uses us as well as we deserve. It is very hard for the defeated to admit this, but it is a fact nevertheless, and, if only admitted, one of the chief reasons for defeat is removed. A cheerful philosophy is an important element of success. He who is perpetually suspecting others of ill-treating him and keeping him down is not a welcome companion. Suspicion is usually folly as well as injustice and unhappiness. Moreover, gladness is one of the great rules of health. To be well, be glad. To be cured, be jolly. It is easy for the average man to hate, or at least to avoid, the unhappy. Nobody wants a death's head at his table. Nobody considers himself regaled when forced to listen to other people's wrongs and slights, most of them either imaginary or exaggerated by over-sensitive conceit. Every man is of less importance to the world around him than he likes to think. But he can easily test it by asking how much he himself dwells upon the condition of others. By as much as their grievances do not particularly concern him, by so much his own are matters of indifference to them. So let him be pleasant, bury his sorrows, pocket his affronts, make himself agreeable, trust in Providence, and thankfully take what comes.—Zion's Herald.

When we turn away from some duty, or some fellow-creature, saying that our hearts are too sick and sore with some great yearning of our own, we may often never the line on which a divine message was coming to us. We shut out the man, and we shut out the angel who had sent him on to open the door.—Edward Garrett.

Character Influence.

There are ministers of the gospel of moderate intellectual resources, with no grace of style or manner, who yet exert a commanding influence over their parishioners by their discourses, because through them shines a holy character, a zeal and sincerity, a love to God and the gospel. It is their excellence of character, known to all, and, unconsciously to themselves, manifest in all their performances, that hides a thousand imperfections and produces the effect. It has been said that the strongest evidence that Christianity is from God is the circumstance that it was not long ago destroyed by its friends. But it deserves to be noticed that when Christianity has been placed on untenable grounds, and supported by unsound and blundering arguments, there has yet been manifest often a holiness and love which have counterbalanced intellectual weakness and error, and convinced the heart.—Sunday-School Times.

Weary Work.

The worst part of martyrdom is not the last agonizing moment; it is the wearing, daily steadfastness. Men who can make up their minds to hold out against the tortures of an hour have sunk under the weariness and the harass of small prolonged vexations; and there are many Christians who have the weight of some deep, incommunicable grief pressing, cold as ice, upon their hearts. To bear that cheerfully and manfully is to be a martyr. There is many a Christian bereaved and stricken in the best hopes of life. For such a one to say quietly, "Father, not as I will, but as thou wilt," is to be a martyr. There is many a Christian who feels the irksomeness of the duties of life, and feels his spirit revolting against them. To get up every morning with the firm resolve to find pleasure in those duties, and do them well, and finish the work which God has given us to do, that is to drink Christ's cup.—F. W. Robertson.

The Christian, Plus God.

Everywhere in the Bible the thought projects itself that, as an individual working-force, the Christian man does not stand alone. It is not merely what the Christian, as an individual, can accomplish, but what he and God together, as a united force, can do. The Old Testament speaks of God working with his people; and emphatically does the New Testament set forth this thought. Paul virilely grasped it when he wrote: "I can do all things through Christ that strengtheneth me." It was Paul, plus Christ, doing all kinds of good things. Christian, a heavy load you are called upon to take up and carry. You impulsively say that it is too great for you. But you forget that Christ adds himself to you, and, lifting the load with you, the burden is light.—Exchange.

The place where a Christian lives spiritually has a good deal to do with his power to turn souls to Christ. There are people who live too high up on the mountain or too low down in the valley to ever do the cause of Christ much good. There are people who help the enemy by making too much noise around the altar, and there are others who help him because they don't make noise enough. There are people who go wild with excitement in politics on election night, who are quiet as a drum with a broken head during a revival. They weigh a ton for the party, and not more than an ounce or two for Christ. They look too happy at a horse-race, and too dismal at a prayer meeting, to have any drawing power for the Lord. They live too much below their privileges to lead anybody to Jesus.—Our Young Folks.

A Christian should never be troubled because he is asked to give. If he can not give, he may well be sorry; but if he does not wish to give, he ought to be more than sorry—he should be alarmed. Lack of money is by no means so serious as the lack of a generous disposition. A man often shuts the door in the face of his best friend when he shuts out an appeal to his benevolence.

Little self-denials, little honesties, little passing words of sympathy, little nameless acts of kindness, little silent victories over favorite temptations—these are the silent threads of gold which, when woven together, gleam out so brightly in the pattern of life that God approves. — F. W. Farrar, D. D.

Disinterested love and self-denying service to our fellow-creature are the most acceptable worship we can offer our Creator. Genuine greatness is marked by simplicity, unostentatiousness, self-forgetfulness, a hearty interest in others, a feeling of brotherhood with the human family.—Channing.

It takes a lifetime for some people to learn that worrying over the shortcomings of other people does not divert attention from their own.

Life, like war, is a series of mistakes; and he is not the best Christian nor the best general who makes the fewest false steps. He is the best who wins the most splendid victories by the retrieval of mistakes. — F. W. Robertson.

Hold fast to love. If men wound your heart, let them not sour or embitter it; let them only expand it more and more, and be always able to say, with St. Paul, "My heart is enlarged."—F. W. Robertson.

It is a little puzzling to plain, ordinary folk how some men can acquire a world-wide reputation for piety without once learning the a, b, c's of Christian courtesy.—Richmond Advocate.

Every duty, even the least duty, involves the whole principle of obedience, and little duties make the will dutiful—that is, supple and prompt to obey.—H. E. Manning.

Every hour comes with some little faget of God's will fastened upon its back.—Faber.

Furniture for Parsonages.

I do not refer to parsonages in stations, or on rich circuits fully able and ready to provide needed furniture, but to those harder places where the preacher's salary is a difficult question, and where a comfortable home for his family can only be secured with the help of the P. and H. M. S. These are the parsonages where furniture is most needed. A delegate suggested, at the last Annual Meeting of our North Mississippi Conference Society, that we say "spare furniture," instead of "second-hand furniture," for these preachers' homes, as there were few families who could not spare some article of furniture, and we did not like to talk about giving second-hand things to any of our preachers. In some parts of our Conference a good deal of work has been done along this line; but, to make it as effective as possible, it should be carried on with as much system as any other branch of our work. When any article, or articles, of furniture can be spared for this purpose, the district secretary should be notified, and she can easily find where it is most needed; or the district secretary might acquaint herself with the needs of the parsonages supposed to be somewhat under her watch-care, and notify her auxiliaries, and let them do what they can to supply what is needful. You can never know who can conveniently give furniture until you mention the subject. A casual reference, on a railroad train, to this plan for making more comfortable certain preachers' homes, was the means of securing the unsolicited donation of a nice set of furniture for a needy parsonage. I think this idea of furnishing, as well as building, parsonages should be stressed a little more.

A Sketch.

The pew seemed very hard and straight to the plainly-dressed, plain-featured little woman who felt the need and the longing for an easy chair or a soft couch. There was no rest for the tired limbs, and no relief for the aching head, in the heavy atmosphere of the church. She was so weary, this hard-working woman who, scorned dependence and only asked work enough to support herself and her invalid sister while life should last, and to provide a fund to bury them decently when the end should come. Day after day there was the same dreary round of finishing off work and carrying it home; night after night there was the same patient stitch, stitch, until tired eyes demanded rest. Every Sabbath found her at church with the same regularity as happier souls, but the week-day services did not seem for her. But on this day of which I write the weariness was so intense, the craving for comfort so great, that she laid aside her work and came out to afternoon service. The sermon was strong and practical, and the earnest thoughts were uttered in a sweet, persuasive voice; but the throbbing pain seemed to have benumbed her brain, and the words sounded like a distant echo from some far-off hills, with no message in them for her. Even the prayers that came straight from a warm heart awoke no devout response in hers. As she passed sadly down the aisle, her expressionless face gave no indication of the disappointment she felt. She knew there had been comfort and hope in the sermon, but she was too tired to receive them. Just then, when her spirits were at their lowest ebb, she felt the warm pressure of a hand, and heard a softly-spoken inquiry about her health and her sister's. When the tender voice added, "I will come to see her to-morrow," she raised her eyes to the face of this friend, who never came empty-handed, and who always brought light and cheer to the invalid, and the sympathizing glance which met her own so warmed her heart that pain and weariness were, for the moment, forgotten. It was like an electric thrill, and she suddenly realized that, after all, the sermon and the prayers were for her. The human touch and the human sympathy had made them real, and, as she went out of the church, the world looked brighter, though the sun was low, and her step insensibly quickened to keep time to the time within her heart. When she reached home and went about her evening tasks, she hummed softly to herself:

"Only a beam of sunshine,
But, O, it was warm and bright;
The heart of a weary traveller
Was cheered by its welcome sight.
Only a beam of sunshine
That fell from the arch above
And tenderly, softly whispered
A message of peace and love."

Sisters, are there no other timid workers in our congregations who are faint for human sympathy and love? Is there not some one in whom a kind word or cordial hand-clasp would touch a chord that would vibrate in sweetest harmony? Home missionary work means more than the giving of charity; more, even, than sending the gospel of hope to the needy. It means the gospel of love in its fullness, which will not let us separate ourselves too widely from our gifts, and which makes us seek opportunities for even little kindnesses and Christian courtesies. It means the eyes wide open to see where there is sadness or discouragement; the lips quick to speak the "word in due season." Is it indifference or thoughtlessness that so often makes us fail just here?

MARY ANDREWS, Conf. Treas.

Vicksburg, Miss., April 9, 1895.

We would suggest that all District Secretaries of the North Mississippi Conference, and others, have announcements to make concerning the district and annual meetings, that they send them to the editor for the North Mississippi Conference, that they may be inserted in our own column. This will require some forethought and planning for, but we owe it to the editor who has so kindly furnished us this column, and we also owe it to the societies that the announcements may be promptly found.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. Jno. B. Kent, Bayou Chicot Charge, Louisiana Conference, April 1: "Closed the first protracted meeting of the year at Lone Pine Saw Mill last night with six accessions on profession of faith and the church revived generally. We are under obligations to Bro. Sweeney for faithful and efficient services."

Rev. R. A. Breland, P. C., Camden, Miss., April 3: "Here is my report for the month of March. I met every appointment during the month; traveled 90 miles; preached twenty-four sermons; made fifty-two pastoral visits; held four prayer meetings; held one love-feast; baptized five adults and five infants; received eight persons into the church on profession of faith and seven by certificate; collected $55 on an assessment of $50 for Conference claimants. The Lord is blessing us graciously. Pray for us."

Rev. E. S. Lewis, Rosedale, Miss., April 8: "Our church at Rosedale is improving. Since Conference we have secured the church-building, cleaned away the rubbish left by the cyclone of '93, and made the grounds somewhat more attractive. We organized an Epworth League two weeks ago, which now has thirty-eight members. The League membership exceeds that of the church. Our Sunday-school is doing a good work. At Phalia the Sunday-school has come out of Winter quarters, and put on her beautiful garments. Rev. J. S. Oakley is to lecture here on Tuesday night on John Wesley, and the Rise and Progress of Methodism. We begin special services Wednesday. The League has been started, and the interest, so far, is good. We hope to see the entire church and community powerfully revived, and to this end we have been toiling and praying with all of our might."

Rev. T. B. Malone, pastor, West Point, Miss., March 4: "Allow me to say of a very sweet and profitable meeting just closed in our church here. The meeting was conducted with a view of building up the spirituality of the church, and was a success. The congregations were large and attentive. The preaching, for the last eight days, was done by Dr. I. W. Cooper, of the West End Church, Meridian. For plainness, earnestness, faithfulness and tenderness I have never heard this preaching excelled. He captured his audience and the town regardless of denominations, and all were benefited who waited upon his ministry. He will always get a warm welcome in West Point. God blessed the ministry to the upbuilding of many souls. He preached purity of heart and life; held up sin, great and small, in its most hideous light, till men hated it, and determined to mend their ways. Christians are drawn nearer to Christ. There were no conversions. Indeed, the whole work was aimed at getting the Christians right. I thank God for the past ten days of work in the church, and pray God to bless Bro. Cooper in his work."

Rev. W. D. Bass, Eufaula, I. T., March 28: "Thinking that a few dots from this portion of our Zion might be some consolation to the readers of our excellent paper, I write for the encouragement of all whom it may concern, and I feel quite sure it will interest all who are preaching, praying and paying for the universal spread of the gospel and the coming of the kingdom of our blessed Lord. I thank God that the men and money spent among the different tribes of the Indians have not been in vain. While preaching the gospel to an intelligent congregation the other night—mixed, of course, with white people and Indians—the Holy Ghost fell on us with such power that many believers praised God aloud, and then our choir, composed of white and red, sang, 'Our theme is marching on,' and such 'hosannas' and 'praises,' as followed, would have carried the mind of our dear preachers back to the good old days of the past, when the 'Hallelujahs of Methodism,' first shook the American continent. No one can visit this country and look in on these different nations of people, and fail to see where the wheels of the gospel chariot have been along, making its indelible and life-giving impressions. It's no more than a repetition of what has been said, and widely circulated, when they say that the story of Jesus has done more for the civilization, education, and salvation of the Indians than all other forces combined. While our church has demonstrated her God-given wisdom in her appropriations for the sending of the gospel to the Indians, yet let it be remembered that it is by no means because of the financial poverty of this country. It does my heart good because our church is here, and here to stay. Let no one be unbelieving about the success of the Indian Mission Conference. Let our Board alone. God is her guide. She has wrought a good work over here, and it will not be long, thank God, until our Zion will be self-supporting, and able to refund the money and men to aid in sending the story on to the millions beyond. We have had a good meeting here in the town of Eufaula, where the District Conference will soon meet, with Bishop Hargrove presiding. This town seems to be the leading town of the Creek Nation. Ex-Gov. Perryman lives here, and has charge of the Territorial Mission School. The college is quite an elegant three-story brick building. The attendants are from all over the nation, and many of them full-bloods. I go from here to Nowata, I. T., in the Cherokee Nation, where I join my brother, Sam Bass, in a revival with the pastor of our church there next Sunday. If the Lord wills, I hope to reach home—dear old Mississippi—by the first of July to fill the engagements I have with the brethren. God bless all the pastors and all the local preachers, and all of our members, and you too, Mr. Editor, and give us the victory for Jesus Christ with a great ingathering of souls this year, and the prayer of your unworthy scribe will be answered. Bro. Wm. Buck is our pastor here, and is quite a good man."

OBITUARIES.

GORDEN—MARION ELMER, the only son of Bro. and Sister C. Gorden, was born March 28, 1893, and died March 25, 1895.

This was a very severe shock to the parents, being so unexpected to them. Little Elmer was the pet of all who knew him. Being an unusually bright child, he attracted the attention of all, and thus entwined his little self around many hearts. May this sore bereavement be blessed and sanctified of God to the good of the parents, and may they find comfort in him who said, 'Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven!"

C. M. CROSSLEY, P. C.

STEWART—JAS. A. STEWART was born in Cowata county, Ga., April 11, 1829, and died at his home in Harrison county, Miss., Feb. 12, 1895.

Bro. Stewart joined the Methodist Episcopal Church when about twenty-five years old, and remained within the fold until death. In August, 1853, he was married to Miss Margaret Holly, and of this union were born eleven children—eight daughters and three sons—all of whom are living except one son. These children are the influential citizens of the country.

For several months before his death Bro. Stewart seemed to know that he must go soon, and just before his departure he gave positive testimony of his readiness to meet God. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord!"

E. T. BRELAND, P. C.

STRONG—MARY JANE STRONG (nee Ritchey) was born in Hinds county, Miss., Dec. 13, 1852, and died, after a long and painful illness, at her home in Hinds county, Miss., Nov. 15, 1894.

When only sixteen years of age, while in the fresh morning of life, she gave God her heart, joined the M. E. Church, South, and ever afterward lived a consistent Christian life.

Nov. 29, 1871, she was happily married to Joseph W. Strong, who still survives her. This union was blessed with fifteen children, twelve of whom still live to mourn her loss.

I am glad it was my privilege to know Sister Strong, and to visit her during her last illness. She bore her intense suffering without a murmur, and ever exhibited a saintly, submissive spirit and the most intense Christian fortitude.

She was a faithful wife, a fond and devoted mother, and a true servant of God. A good woman has gone, but our loss is heaven's gain. Servant of God, well done! May the Holy Spirit bless and comfort the family!

W. M. STEVENS.

WINGFIELD—DORA COLLINS, the only daughter of F. G. and Robbie Wingfield, was born Dec. 16, 1893, and died March 9, 1895.

Dora was a sweet little girl of gentle disposition and of a tender nature. Though her stay in this world was short, still she had so woven her young life into the life of her parents that the sorrow they experienced at her death well-nigh overcame them. She was just a little bud plucked by angel hands for the beautiful bouquet of heaven. She was just a little flower opening to the rays of the rising sun, into whose life heaven had poured her sweetest perfume. The family harp has been broken, but another chord has been added to the celestial harps above.

Little Dora was the idol of her mother and the pride of her father. The parents have lost a promising child, but heaven has gained a bright jewel. She was baptized just before her death, and soon passed sweetly into the other world. The Savior, who doeth all things well, has taken her unto himself. God bless the bereaved family!

E. S. LEWIS.

BERRY—BESSIE AURORA BERRY, infant daughter of E. S. and M. A. Berry, died Jan. 30, 1895, at 5:30 o'clock P. M., aged one year four months and six days.

As the sun was sinking behind the golden clouds, and the last bright rays were fading away, the spirit of our "darling baby" took its flight from this world to a better one beyond, where pain and suffering will be no more.

Little Bessie was a loving, meek, gentle and intelligent child for one of her age. She suffered great pain for nearly four weeks of bronchial pneumonia. Skillful physicians and the best nursing were to no avail. God's ways are mysterious. Why he took her we can not tell, though Christ said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Like a little flower, she has been transplanted from earth to bloom in heaven. It is a sore trial to have to give up our dear baby. Home is so desolate without her. Still I can but bow in sadness and shed tears of deepest sorrow when I realize that I can nevermore see her dear little form, or those bright eyes, and her sweet voice calls "Mama" no more. Dear little Bessie has passed beyond to that peaceful haven of rest, and is now waiting to welcome papa, mama, and a dear little brother, who is so lonely without her.

MAMA.

BETHEA—MARY ELIZA LEGETTE was born in Marvin district, S. C., March 11, 1832. She was converted when quite young at Centenary Camp Ground, S. C., and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. On July 14, 1852, in her twenty-first year, she was married to Dr. R. C. Bethea. Three years afterwards she, with her husband, moved to Alabama, where they lived until 1858. They then moved to Mississippi, where the remainder of her useful life was spent. They lived in Meadville, Caseyville, Brookhaven and Summit. Her last days were spent in Summit. On the nineteenth of February, surrounded by her husband and most of their children and others, she quietly passed away from earth to her home on high. Her last words were, "Lay me down and let me sleep."

Sister Bethea was a good woman, true to her God, her church, and her family. She was, indeed, a friend to the poor. "Blessed is he that considereth the poor. The Lord will deliver him," etc. (Psa. lv, 7.) She was a friend to her pastor.

Within the last few months two of our best women have passed away. Sister Kaloolah Lamkin, wife of Hon. Jas. C. Lamkin, another good woman who "considered the poor," went home to rest last October.

May the blessing of God rest in great abundance upon the families of these two noble women!

Mr. S. G. Derry.

I spent trying to find cure for Salt Rheum which I had 13 years. Physicians said they never saw so severe a case. My legs, back and arms were covered by the humor. A VERY REMARKABLE OFFER!

A $40 Sewing Machine for $20, and the N. O. Advocate Thrown In!

This may seem surprising, but we mean what we say. The machine which we handle is "The Favorite High Arm Singer," the manufacturer's catalogue price of which is $40. Read the following description taken from the manufacturer's catalogue, and then read our offer.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer Sewing Machine, as you will perceive, is very attractive in appearance, the cut being an exact representation. It is strongly constructed from the best grades of material produced, and its adjustment perfect; also combines simplicity, durability and workmanship of the highest order; and in point of finish, light-running and sewing qualities, is unsurpassed. In addition to the above-mentioned qualities, our Favorite Improved High Arm Singer has the latest, most useful and practical improvements, such as a perfect Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, positive Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self-Setting Needle, Tension Liberator and Loose Pulley, and is without any exception the best machine ever produced for the money.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer is the only Singer style machine using a Cylinder Shuttle. The bed of machine being sunk flush with table and nicely hinged so it can be turned backed to admit of oiling and cleaning under works without the least inconvenience.

"Automatic Bobbin Winder, used on the Favorite Improved High Arm Singer, is positive in its operation, and works to perfection, winding the thread on bobbin as evenly as thread is wound on a spool.

"Flat Tension Spring. Every lady who has used machines with coil tension spring, knows the value of having a machine with flat tension, 'same as used on the Favorite Improved High Arm Singer,' for the reason that when tension is once set it always remains the same and does not alter while machine is in operation, requiring operator to stop every little while and re-adjust same.

"The Cabinet Work is of the very latest design, made of the best quality of Oak or Walnut, as preferred. Unique and attractive in style, and elaborate in finish. The rich nickel-plated trimmings harmonize with the general handsome appearance of the machine.

"Furnished free with every machine are the following-named accessories: One Foot Hemmer, one Screw Driver, one Wrench, one Oil Can and Oil, one Gauge Screw, one extra Check Spring, one Package of Needles, five Bobbins and one Instruction Book.

"Extra Set of Attachments also free with each machine, consisting of the following: One Tucker, one Foot Ruffler, one Set of Plate Hemmers, four different widths, up to seven-eighths of an inch; one Binder and one Thread Cutter.

"The Stand is among the handsomest in design. Finely japanned. Has large drive wheel."

This machine is manufactured by an old and reliable company, who guarantee the machine for ten years.

At Bay St Louis.

We spent last Sabbath at Bay St. Louis, preaching at 11 A. M. to a large and appreciative audience. At night a very interesting children's Easter service was held. In addition to a good musical programme, there were well-selected recitations by the following young ladies, all of whom acquitted themselves with credit: Misses Dora Butler, Pearl Meek, Laura Fayard, Nannie Graham, Johnnie Hart, Marie Arlo, and Lilian Meek. Several children, both boys and girls, also participated, and performed their parts well. The church had been handsomely decorated for the occasion. We were delightfully domiciled, during our stay, at the parsonage. We also enjoyed the generous hospitality of Bro. and Sister J. F. Joyce.

The pastor, Bro. Harmon, has just returned from a trip to Jackson, Miss., in the interest of the new church which he has enterprised. Although he had not time to make a thorough canvass, he was quite successful, the good people of Jackson, in keeping with their record, responding liberally. Bro. Harmon will visit other places in Mississippi in the near future on the same mission. Methodists throughout the State ought to contribute to this cause. Bay St. Louis has a Winter population of four or five thousand, and a Summer population of, perhaps, ten or twelve thousand. The town extends along the beach for more than ten miles. Yet we have only one church there, and it does not at all represent Methodism. We ought to have at once a handsome, modern church on the site of the present building, and then we ought to have soon two or three more good churches in this beautiful city. The Methodists of Bay St. Louis are doing their best in this matter. Considering their numbers and their resources, they have really wrought wondrously within the last few years. They have built on a very eligible lot a good, comfortable parsonage, and, although they are themselves destitute of such a house of worship as the situation demands, they have founded a mission Sunday-school in a part of the city where it is much needed, and it is doing admirable work, and laying the foundations for a church at an early day. We bespeak for Bro. Harmon a generous response in all the towns of Mississippi to which he may go on this important mission.

Christian Philanthropy.

Love to God and man is the cardinal principle of our holy religion, and, according to the teachings of the Scriptures, our love to God is best evinced by deeds of mercy to our fellowmen. A Christian is a follower of Christ—possessed of his spirit and seeking continually to imitate his example. Now, his example is summarized for us in the statement: "He went about doing good"—doing good both to the souls and bodies of men as opportunity offered. Did Christ preach the gospel to the poor? So should the church that bears his name. Did he minister to the physical necessities of men? So must his church in all ages. The obligation to give the gospel to those who have it not is beginning to be recognized by the church of the present day, as is shown by her manifold missionary operations, both in home and foreign fields. Far less marked, however, is the church's appreciation of her obligation to engage in those activities that are usually spoken of as benevolent or humanitarian.

Methodism is doing more in every other direction than in caring for the sick, the poor, the orphaned, and other classes of unfortunates. And yet there is no duty which is more positively enjoined or more frequently inculcated in the Word of God. The parable of the Good Samaritan, with its pointed injunction, "Go ye and do likewise," settles the question with all who accept Jesus of Nazareth as a teacher sent from God. And more forceful still is the twenty-fifth chapter of Matthew. "Come, ye blessed of my Father; inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world," is the plaudit given to those who have ministered to the necessities of their fellow-men; while those who have steeled their hearts against the claims of mercy hear from him who sits upon the throne those awful words: "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels." "Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me." That philanthropic work occupies a chief place in the system of religion given to the world by Jesus of Nazareth, can not, therefore, be called in question. That this duty has been so largely overlooked by the church is one of the anomalies of ecclesiastical history. The time has come when we need to take a new departure. And we are making a beginning.

Our church is entitled to very little credit for the existence of the magnificent hospital which is now operated under its auspices in the city of St. Louis, as it was founded by a member of another communion and donated to us. But we have within the bounds of Southern Methodism several orphanages. There are two in the State of Georgia alone—one belonging to each of the Conferences. The Methodists of Alabama have one also. So have several other Conferences. The two Conferences in Mississippi have recently taken the preliminary steps towards founding an orphanage under their joint patronage. This forward movement comes none too soon. We have too long relegated to the Catholics the work of caring for those whom death has deprived of their natural protectors. We felicitate the church in Mississippi upon this evidence of progress in doing the will of our divine Lord. Let everyone read the communication of Bro. Watkins in another column, and see the exact status of this movement. We firmly believe that the time is near at hand when the proposed orphanage will throw open its portals and Mississippi Methodism can no longer have the taunt thrown into her face that she is doing nothing in the way of benevolent work.

On to Grenada.

We call the attention of pastors and church workers to the programme of the Mississippi Epworth League Convention on another page. This convention ought to be made a huge success, and it can be with proper effort. Let every League send some of its very best material as delegates. Let every pastor who has no League in his charge proceed at once to organize a League in every church. Then let some of the live young men and women be selected to go to Grenada. By attending this convention they will acquire a great deal of information about methods of work, and will also become imbued with the spirit of the organization. They will come home to be centres of enthusiasm in the cause. It is a universally admitted fact that one of the great needs of the church at the present day is an increased interest in church work on the part of our young people. No live pastor can, therefore, afford to be apathetic in this matter. There is time enough yet before the convention for the organization of hundreds of Leagues in Mississippi. Will they be organized? We believe they will.

Hand-Book of Louisiana.

We are indebted to the Louisiana State Immigration Association for a copy of a fifty-six page pamphlet bearing the above title. The work is from the pen of W. C. Stubbs, Ph.D., director Experimental Station. It is a most excellent compilation, replete with useful information. It treats of the agricultural resources of each parish. It also gives valuable information concerning various other industries, such as stock raising, lumbering, fisheries, etc. It takes note of climatic conditions and influences. Transportation facilities in the way of railroads and navigable water courses receive adequate attention. It also treats of health, education, journalism, etc. Those who for any reason desire information concerning the chief characteristics of the Pelican State should send for this pamphlet, which will be mailed free of charge to any address by the Louisiana State Immigration Association, 620 Common street, New Orleans, La.

The Income Tax Decision.

The Supreme Court of the United States has rendered its decision in the celebrated Income Tax case. The decision affirms the constitutionality of the act, but sets aside two of its provisions as violative of the Constitution of the United States. The two sections nullified are those which impose a tax upon incomes from rents and from State and municipal bonds. This completely emasculates the law, as these are the chief sources of income which the law aimed to reach. Under this decision the revenue derived from income will be comparatively quite insignificant. We venture the prediction that the next Congress will repeal the law. Those who think that the millionaires of the land should bear a larger proportion of the burdens of taxation must hereafter work through State Legislatures rather than Congress.

A Wise Decision.

The ADVOCATE chronicled, several months ago, the commencement of a libel suit for $25,000 against the Times-Democrat, by one Meteye, accused of being a leper. The Times-Democrat had made no deliverance on the subject except to publish the court proceedings in which evidence was adduced bearing upon the question of Mr. Meteye's alleged leprosy. The case was decided in favor of the Times-Democrat, whereupon an appeal was taken to the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court, a few days since, rendered its decision sustaining the action of the lower court. This is a wise decision. Incalculable harm would result from the policy of holding newspapers responsible in damages for the publication of court proceedings.

A Forward Movement in Missions.

BY BISHOP CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

It seems very evident that our church is ready for a great missionary forward movement. In Atlanta, Birmingham, Memphis, and other points visited, I have noted not only increased interest, but genuine enthusiasm. Every day's mail brings assurance of quickened zeal throughout the connection—a forerunner, let us hope, of a widespread and mighty missionary awakening. Several well-equipped young men and two young ladies have signified their readiness to go at the church's call. In the Atlanta Preachers' Meeting several pastors reported increased collections over last year, and all without exception expected to report substantial advance over previous receipts. The morning after our great meeting in Memphis, I had a cheering note from a stranger, in which occurred these words: . . . "I am a traveling man, and for the past nine years have endsavored to keep myself unspotted from the world. God only knows how hard the struggle has been. But 'he is faithful that promised.' . . . I am an old 'Blue-stocking Presbyterian,' though at present I am an elder in a Dutch Reformed Church at ——, N. J. However, that matters not, I herewith send my check for $10 toward the collection which you did not take up. May the Lord bless you and your church in every effort put forth." One liberal brother told me he expected to double his offering, and others promised larger gifts and more diligent study of the cause. I do believe that if every pastor would sound an advance down the line, our great church would move many paces forward. Cheering news comes from Japan, and glad tidings are heard from China. Bro. Reid reports two hundred additions to the church as the fruits of the wonderful revival yet in progress.

There were never such inviting opportunities for missionary enterprise. Barred doors are falling from their rusty hinges, and frowning walls are crumbling at the blast of the gospel trumpet. The Orient is stirred as never before. The "Sunrise Kingdom" is sweeping to the high noon of a civilization that assures the most generous hospitality, not only to Western thought, but to Christian truth. "The Land of the Morning Calm" is feeling the throb of a new life, and the inspiration of a larger hope. China, "the giant sleeper," aroused by the thunder of war, is rubbing from its eyes the slumber of centuries, and, in alarm, is crying loudly for help. The sublime conceit of ages has been humiliated—the serene satisfaction of unnumbered cycles has given way to the piteous wail of want. Now is the church's opportunity! We should be the friend indeed in this hour of need. The nation can now be made to feel that Christianity alone has uplifting and sustaining power. That out of defeat it can organize the victory of a grander civilization and a nobler history. Shall we not heed this call, louder and clearer than has ever rung in the ear of the church since the morning stars sang together and all the sons of God shouted for joy? Will we let this day of opportunity pass without adding a single battalion to the Lord's army or a single province to our Redeemer's inheritance? I do not believe the church will disappoint the hopes of the hour. The men are ready, and, I feel assured, the means will be provided.

Jackson, Miss., April 6, 1895.

The Mississippi Chautauqua.

We are pleased to hear cheering reports as to the outlook for the Mississippi Chautauqua. A very fine programme has been arranged. Dr. R. W. Jones, of the Mississippi State University, is booked for a series of lectures on Physiology and Geology. None who know Dr. Jones will need to be told that a treat is in store for his auditors. Other celebrities will occupy the platform. We rejoice at the prospect of a Mississippi Chautauqua as an accomplished fact. Nearly every State now has a Chautauqua, and several of them have more than one. Why should Mississippi lag behind all the other States in this matter? The Chautauqua movement is one of the great educational agencies of the day. Its benefits are manifold and far-reaching. Let the high-toned, aspiring citizenship of the State, irrespective of political or religious creed, unite and make this movement a decided success, and they will accomplish a work which will tell tremendously upon the destinies of unborn generations.

Our Bible Offer

Don't fail to read our Bible offer. Remember that it has all the helps of the Oxford Bible and the additional feature of giving the correct pronunciation of every proper name just where it occurs in the book. Moreover, we are selling it to our subscribers at a lower rate than any paper or anybody else has ever done. The regular retail price of the work is $3.15. Some papers have had a run on it at $1.95. Our subscribers can get on conditions named in our offer for $1.85. This offer may not last long; therefore, don't delay.

Medical Department of Vanderbilt University.

We make the following extract from a private letter recently received from Chancellor Kirkland, of Vanderbilt University:

DEAR SIR AND BRO.: As you are perhaps aware, Vanderbilt University has never had a Medical Department of her own, but for the past twenty-one years we have shared the Medical Department of the University of Nashville. But I am glad to say, we have at last made arrangements to change all this. We are erecting, perhaps, the most complete building in the South, outside of Baltimore, for medical teaching; we have selected our own faculty, and will henceforth run our own Medical Department as an integral part of the University, as much so as is the Academic or Theological Department.

We congratulate the church upon this, the inauguration of this new enterprise. This is a matter of vast importance not only to our church, but to the entire South. If there is a class of men in the land who need to be trained under Christian influences, it is physicians. That the medical schools of the present day are all schools of pure morality is believed by those who do not know any better.

District Boards of Education.

The Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences, at their last annual sessions, provided for the organization of District Boards of Education. This was a movement in the right direction, and will greatly promote our educational interests if wisely managed. The District Conferences will soon meet, and the presiding elders will doubtless see that this matter receives the attention its importance demands. We ought to have special meetings in the interest of education in connection with all of our District Conferences. It would be well for our leading laymen to be invited to address these meetings. We want expressions from them. We want them thoroughly committed to this work.

We must move forward in Mississippi. We have done well, but have only made a beginning. We can not afford to stand still. Our opportunities are great, our resources are great, our responsibilities are great. We need just now a campaign of education in the interest of education. The last General Conference projected a great scheme. We ought to witness a new era in our educational work. Let the District Conferences at their approaching sessions see that our forces are thoroughly organized.

W. B. MURRAH.

NOTES.

Bishop Keener preached a capital Easter sermon, last Sabbath, at Ryan Memorial.

Rev. W. W. Drake is assisting Rev. R. H. Wynn in revival services at Parker Chapel. The outlook is encouraging.

We greatly regret our inability to accept an invitation to preach before the Epworth League Convention, to be held at Grenada.

The celebrated Baptist evangelist, A. B. Earle, died a few days since in the eighty-third year of his age, having been in evangelistic work forty years.

We are glad to see that our brother on the Cumberland has the good sense not to attempt to defend his folly in classifying himself with the Holy Ghost.

Charles Shipley, of Baltimore, has donated to the Baltimore Conference $20,000 to be used as an endowment fund for the benefit of superannuated preachers—a wise use of the Lord's money.

We invite special attention to the notice of Dr. Murrah with reference to District Boards of Education. This is a matter of great importance. Our educational system needs very careful management at this time in order that the demands of the church may be met.

Dr. H. B. Ridgway, president of Garrett Biblical Institute, died recently at his home at Evanston, Ill. He was a fraternal delegate to the General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, in '82, at Nashville, and delivered a fine address that breathed the spirit of true Christian fraternity.

Dr. B. Carradine will hold a series of services at St. Charles Avenue M. E. Church (corner Calliope and St. Charles Ave.), beginning on Sunday, April 21, at 7:30 P. M., and continue daily at 10:30 A. M., and 7:30 P. M. until April 30. The object of these meetings is the conversion of sinners and the sanctification of believers. Dr. Rinehart will conduct the service of song each evening. Everybody is invited.

An ex-priest, H. C. Hicks, lectured in Denison, Tex., on the evening of March 22. Town councilman, P. O. Donnell, who was present, denounced the lecturer, and the police had to eject him from the room. Such things go on while the friends of Catholicism contend that there is no ground for the charge of intolerance among Catholics. Protestants may learn by painful experience what they have been slow to accept, that Romanism is essentially intolerant.

The recent advance in the price of cotton is regarded by many as a trick of the speculators to prevent a reduction of acreage. We do not doubt that it will accomplish this end in some measure. Many planters, deluded with the enchanting hope of high prices next Fall, will plant a large crop of cotton. Those who pursue this course will rue it when harvest time comes, and will then wax eloquent in denouncing the speculators. But their abuse will not hurt the pockets of the speculators, and they will get very little sympathy from any source. Moral—Beware of over-production.

The last issue of the St. Louis Advocate is a woman's number. The matter for it was all prepared by feminine hands. Among the contributors are Mrs. J. W. Lambuth, Mrs. M. D. Wightman, Mrs. E. E. Wiley, Mrs. Lucy Kidd Key, Miss Laura Haygood, Miss Frances E. Willard, Lady Henry Somerset, Mrs. Stonewall Jackson, Miss Belle Kearney and Mrs. Baltington Booth. Portraits are given on the first page of sixteen of these contributors. The mechanical execution is strictly first class in every respect, while the literary quality measures up to a high standard. Dr. Palmore is to be congratulated upon his success in this new venture.

At a regular meeting of the Central Woman's Christian Temperance Union the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That, as members of the W. C. T. U., of New Orleans, we wish to define our position on the question of woman suffrage. We have never adopted this department of work in Louisiana. We are working on separate lines, and are unwilling to have the temperance cause merged into the suffrage work.

This action on the part of the W. C. T. U. is taken none too soon. It is simply a fact that the public generally regard the W. C. T. U. as committed to woman suffrage, and that fact has been for years a tremendous barrier in its way. We firmly believe that but for its supposed complicity with the suffrage movement, the W. C. T. U. would had for years past ten the strength which it has in the South. A large percentage of our best citizenship will let it severely alone so long as its attitude on this question is doubtful.

My Duty.

These figures ought to stir up each preacher to do his duty. So far we have reported to Bro. Thornton:

From Brookhaven district	$150 15
From Natchez district	84 75
From Vicksburg district	28 00
From Seashore district	78 75
From Brandon district	52 85
From Meridian district	16 15
From Enterprise district	20 00
From Jackson district	176 65
Total	$607 30

Dear brethren, how can we pay $1,500 to your aged and sick brethren and to the widow and orphan, unless you do better things? Will not each preacher who has not already done so make a special effort at once?

Will not each member of the Joint Board of Finance constitute himself a committee of one to see that his district pays at least one-fourth of its assessment? Men of Israel, help. Nine hundred dollars are needed at once. Let us have the money now. I conclude this short note by giving a few reasons.

A widow writes: "I have been sick for the past six months. I am heavily in debt. Can you not relieve my necessities by sending me $50 in April?" Another widow says: "The orange trees, our sole dependence, have been totally destroyed. More sorely than ever do I need your help." Still another: "You know how long I have been sick. Last Winter I have been worse than ever, and my physician advises me to go to the hospital. . . . . Before I go, I would like to be able to settle my house rent." Another, of our dear sisters is lying at death's door, and we ought to send on her quarterage that it may comfort her dying hours. An old veteran writes: "Do not forget me. I am poor and needy." Another says: "Have you forgotten that I am a Conference claimant? I can not live without your help." Another, in extreme old age, writes, with trembling hand: "I have not been able to earn a cent for months. I am living as cheap as I know how, yet I am out of funds, out of clothes, out of food, out of everything except the love of God."

These letters were not intended for publication. They came to the chairman and treasurer of your Board, carrying a burden of woe which we could not relieve. In the name of Jesus Christ, who said, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these, the least of my disciples, ye did it unto me," I exhort you send forward the funds that there may be meat in the house of God's children. JOHN W. CHAMBERS.

All readers who are in need of a Bible, should read our offer in another column. The Bible we offer is Holman's Self-pronouncing, which is the very best Bible on the market. We will send this Bible for $1 85 to all subscribers who will pay their subscription for one year in advance, provided they have not had the benefit of other premium offers. In that case they must write to us for special terms. Persons who are not subscribers can have it for $3 15.

N. B.—When we say a year in advance we mean one year from this date, i. e., April, '96. A little later it will be May, '96.

One of the most remarkable statements ever issued by an insurance company is that of The Mutual Life of New York, which appears on the last page of this issue of the ADVOCATE. The Mutual has been for a long time the largest and strongest life insurance company in existence, and its business shows a large increase every year. All this can mean but one thing, and that is, that The Mutual offers a better and safer guarantee for the money invested by its policy holders than does any other company of its kind. Messrs Post & Bowles, whose advertisement is a regular feature of the ADVOCATE, are the managers for The Mutual for the States of Louisiana and Mississippi, and they, like the great company they represent, are men of the highest standing both as to personal character and business integrity; so you can do no better than to place your insurance with The Mutual through them or their agents.

JUST AWAY.

BY JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

I can not say, and I will not say
That he is dead. He is just away!

With a cheery smile, and a wave of the hand
He has wandered into an unknown land.

And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be, since he lingers there.

And you—O you, who the wildest yearn
For the old-time step and the glad return—

Think of him faring on, as dear
In the love of There as the love of Here.

* * * * * * *

Think of him still as the same, I say:
He is not dead—he is just away!

Good Manners.

BY VIRGINIA FRANKLYN.

I am not going to write a sermon, but I want to point out to young people the most direct and thorough way of acquiring the "polish" for which most of them long. The good manners which are learned by thoughtfulness for others can not be put on and laid aside at will. To be perfect, they must be practiced quite as conscientiously in the privacy of one's own home as in the most critical assemblage. The boy whose unselfishness prompts him to rise and give his mother the comfortable chair which he has been occupying, will not forget to do the same for the elegant woman he meets in society. On the other hand, the young man who speaks gruffly to his sister will, when off his guard, drop his "company manners" in conversing with some other fellow's sister.

To be a polished gentleman is such a simple and yet beautiful thing, I marvel that more men do not strive after proficiency in the art. To rise when a lady enters the room and remain standing until she is seated, to rise again when she leaves the apartment, to lift for her the chair or footstool she wishes moved, are some of the trifles which distinguish the gentleman from the boor. Not long ago I saw a man do two things which showed me instantly that while he might have acquired a certain air which to the unobservant would pass for courtesy, he was lacking in that breeding which never forgets. He was dining at the same house with myself. The repast ended, the hostess suggested that we repair to the drawing-room for our coffee. In passing from the dining-room this man went through the door in front of the ladies. Still unconscious of his error, he sank into a chair in the parlor, and when his hostess came forward with the cup of coffee she had poured for him, he sat still, and smilingly received it from her hand.

The most thorough gentleman I ever knew lay delirious with typhoid fever. The trained nurse, who had just been engaged to attend him, approached his bed-side with a drink of water. As she held the glass to his parched lips, the patient struggled to rise. With a firm hand pressed on his shoulder the nurse urged him to lie still. "Madam," gasped the perfect gentleman, "I can not sit still while a lady stands to wait on me!" Even in his delirium that chivalry which was part of his innermost nature asserted itself. I often think that in that better land to which he has gone, he had little to learn, even from the glorified ones, of that unselfish love which makes of life one continual sacrifice to others.

I am sorry to find fault with my own sex, but I have often noticed that while boys seem to feel it incumbent upon them to exert themselves for the sake of other people, girls of the same age do not deem it necessary for them to give any special thought to gentle manners. In many ways a girl may show breeding, or a lack of it, quite as plainly as does her brother. To be sure, she can not raise her hat or offer her arm to women, but she can give her seat in parlor or in car to the white-haired woman near her; she can show a gentle deference towards those older than herself; can listen with modest interest to discussions or arguments among others in which she may not join. The intolerance of youth is proverbial, and leads our boy and girl into many lapses from courtesy. A few weeks ago I had the pleasure of talking with a thoroughly well-bred girl. She was telling me of her presence at a discussion over a well-known novel. She acknowledged to me that she had not at heart agreed with the opinions then advanced, and proceeded to voice her ideas so eloquently and clearly that I asked her why she had not thus expressed them to the group of excited talkers. Her answer was to the point: "I could not," she said, simply. "Not one of those women was under thirty years of age. It would have been impertinence for me, a chit of nineteen, to say what I thought in the presence of women so much older and wiser than I."

Would that there were more boys and girls who held the same modest convictions! Some day the young man or woman who, fresh from studies, thinks that he or she "knows it all," will be desperately ashamed to remember the information on things in general, and a good many in particular, which is complacently bestowed on his indulgent elders. Only yesterday in reading, I came across such a pithy saying that I must quote it here for the benefit of the young people who may see this article: "His idea of his own present importance and future greatness would appall any but a newly-made graduate."

Dear boys and girls, when there is so much that is sweet and lovable in you, can not you add to your other virtues that of "in honor preferring one another?"—The Congregationalist.

Do Something.

You are not here to vegetate or to dream; you were born to act. Every man coming into the world is furnished with a commission of service. That you are here is evidence that a work awaits you, for the great Master sends no one into the field save to find his task and to fall into line with the reapers. Service is the key to a human life; all else is subsidiary, mere by-play. So you perform the allotted task, you shall, at set of sun, hear the "well done," and receive the accustomed "penny." Blessed are those servants who, when the Master of the harvest calls, shall be found, sickle in hand, among the stalks of golden grain!

But, sad to tell, not all perform the tasks assigned them in the divine order; and, what is more strange, it is not always the bad who refuse to recognize the divine command that fail to do their work; it is often the well-meaning men who recognize the obligation and intend to discharge the duty. Simply they do not do it. They dream of doing, without ever taking the task in hand. The reasons for not doing are various; often plain, but sometimes obscure, to the individual himself, and possibly such as he would not venture to put in words. Some never get ready. They imitate the bobolink, which persistently swings on his "briar or weed," ever ready to mount, making many attempts, while remaining an inveterate procrastinator. The intentions of such people are good, but they are never effectuated in action. Others fail to perceive just what duty is. They may never see until they begin to act; the first step will make clear the second. They may never have an outline of duty ten miles ahead, and because not thus favored, they refuse to do anything. There are those who do not like the tasks assigned them. If they were called to something else, if the task of some other had been assigned to them, they would be valiant soldiers. Still others fail because they do not like the regiment into which they were mustered. That you are there is a reason why you should fight there. Providence often selects our associates in service, and such selections are usually the best. To get out of these relations is too often to get out of the service. But be sure to do something and begin to-day. Delay means failure.—Zion's Herald.

The Bible.

Wholly apart from its religious or from its ethical value, the Bible is the one book that no intelligent person, who wishes to come into contact with the world of thought, and to share the ideas of the great minds of the Christian era, can afford to be ignorant of. All modern literature and all art are permeated with it. There is scarcely a great work in the language that can be fully understood and enjoyed without this knowledge, so full is it of allusions and illustrations from the Bible. This is true of fiction, of poetry, of economic and of philosophic works, and also of the scientific, and even agnostic treatises. It is not at all a question of religion or theology, or of dogma; it is a question of general intelligence. A boy or girl at college, in the presence of the works set for either to master, without a fair knowledge of the Bible, is an ignoramus, and is disadvantaged accordingly. It is in itself almost a liberal education, as many great masters in literature have testified. It has so entered into law, literature, thought, the whole modern life of the Christian world, that ignorance of it is a most serious disadvantage to the student.

How this is to be overcome in our machine system is a grave question. It results partly from the discontinuance of the use of the Bible in the public schools, but more especially from the change in the estimation in which it is held in the family. In comparison with its position in the family a generation ago, it is now a neglected book. It is neglected as literature. There are several suggestions for reviving interest in it. One of them is already in operation in Sunday-school work. Another is its study as literature in the schools and colleges. But we believe that the change will only come effectively by attention to the fundamental cause of this ignorance, the neglect of its use in the home in childhood. If its great treasures are not a part of growing childhood, they will always be external to the late possessor. In the family is where this education must begin; and it will then be, as it used to be, an easy and unconscious education, a stimulus to the imagination, and a ready key to the great world of tradition, custom, history, literature.—From the "Editor's Study," by Charles Dudley Warner, in Harper's Magazine for March.

Experience.

Knowledge is not always valuable in proportion to the cost. Sometimes it is better not to know. While playing with other children, little "Lena" became curious to find out certain things about "Fido," who was enjoying the frolic with his biped friends. In a little while screams were heard, and Lena was carried to her mother with blood flowing freely from two ugly wounds on her face. The doctor came in haste and relieved the sufferer as much as possible. When all was quiet again, the mother questioned her child as to the cause of her misfortune. Lena quickly answered: "Me didn't know if him would bite. Me hit him—him bite." She seemed thoroughly satisfied with her experience, and I dare say will not venture further along this line.

We laugh at the child's foolishness; yet how many grown-up people do the same thing, and are not satisfied till the scars of experience attest that certain things will bite, when we should have known this from their very make-up. H. C.

Shoes for Children.

Recently I met a mechanic who resides in our street, walking out on Sunday morning with his little two year-old daughter. The father I have often admired for his vigorous physique. He had on a pair of boots with soles very thick. The little thing at his side wore a pair of red slippers, with soles not much thicker than pasteboard. "Why do you wear those immense boots?" I asked. "To keep my throat and lungs all right," he replied. "Is your little girl well?" "She is rather poorly. The doctor says we must take her out in the fresh air." "Do you think you could come out this morning on this cold, damp walk with slippers?" I asked. "No, sir; it would give me my death." "How do you think your little delicate daughter can escape with those thin morocco slippers?" "Well, it does seem curious; but I don't know much about such things. You'll have to ask the old woman."

The usual dress of children's feet, during the cold season, is a shameful violation of physiological law.

But in the Summer they should be allowed to run in the garden without shoes, and play with their little feet in loving contact with the bosom of mother earth. —Journal of Hygiene.

Temperature of the Feet Again.

This subject is so important that I desire to consider it in another aspect.

Congestion of the head, throat, or any of the organs of the chest and abdomen, is relieved by a good circulation in the feet and legs. Being far from the vital apparatus, and thus liable to become cold, they are, in addition, kept in the coldest part of the room. During the cold season the air at the floor is several degrees colder than that at the ceiling. The anxious mother shows her familiarity with this fact when she says: "Children, you must not lie on the floor; you will catch cold."

Notwithstanding the marked difference, the feet have less clothing than the body. Our chests would suffer on a cold day if they had but a single thickness of cotton and one of morocco. Warmth of the lower extremities is indispensable to health of the head and chest. Cold bathing, friction, stamping, and other exercises, with proper clothing, will generally secure the needed temperature in these parts. But in many, whose vitality is low, and whose occupation compels long sitting, the feet, even with the measures suggested, will become cold. To such I advise the use of artificial means. A jug filled with warm water, and placed under a stool which is stuffed and carpeted, will diffuse a gentle head about the feet, and secure a temperature equal to that about the head.—Journal of Hygiene.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

MARBLED CHOCOLATE CAKE.—One and one-half cupfuls of white sugar, one-half cupful of butter, a generous half cupful of milk, two and one-half cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, beaten whites of four eggs. Flavor with vanilla. Take out one teacupful and add to it five tablespoonfuls of grated chocolate moistened with a little milk. Pour a layer of the white batter into the baking pan, then drop the chocolate batter with a spoon in spots and spread the rest of the white batter over it. Frost with chocolate frosting.—Selected.

PEARL CAKE.—One pint of flour, one pint of sugar, one teacupful of cornstarch, one of sweet milk and one of butter, one teaspoonful of baking powder and the whites of six eggs beaten to a stiff froth. Cream the butter and sugar well together, then add the cornstarch which must be well dissolved in the milk beforehand, then the flour into which the baking powder has been sifted, and lastly the eggs well beaten. Season with bitter almond or rose water, and bake in either large or small pans.—Good Housekeeping.

Nothing is easier for a selfish saint to imagine than that he can do God a greater service by rebuking error than by looking after the needs of his children.—Richmond Advocate.

Sixteen weeks ago, I began to use your Favorite Prescription, and now feel better and stronger than I have felt for years, in fact, my health is thoroughly restored and there are no signs of any return of my former trouble. I owe it all to your wonderful 'Favorite Prescription' which I shall always praise wherever I go."

GUNN—Miss FANNY GUNN was born onto Wm. G. Gunn (now deceased) and Fanny E. Langhter, his wife, March 24, 1870, in "Old Middleton," near Winona, Miss. She was received into the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on profession of faith, at Wesson, Miss., Aug. 28, 1886, by the Rev. B. F. Jones, P. C. She found neither the commandments of God nor the rules of the church of her choice grievous or horlensome. She was thoroughly in earnest when she took upon herself the vows of church membership, and by the grace of God she kept and performed her vows. At the Sunday-school and in the sanctuary her seat was seldom vacant. She was an obedient daughter, an affectionate sister, a faithful friend.

For many weary weeks and months she was kept at home by incurable sickness, but through it all no murmur escaped her lips. She was submissive to God's will. Perfectly conscious that the end of her earthly pilgrimage was near, she moved onward with unfaltering faith and ever-brightening hopes. Not able to speak above a whisper, she was always ready to comfort her loved ones and to witness for Christ. Bright and cheerful even unto the end, she was very thoughtful and considerate of those who kindly waited on her. She was willing to stay with her loved ones, but perfectly ready to go and be with her Lord. For her death had no sting, the grave no gloom. She had gotten the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

About two hours before her departure I inquired of her if the way was still bright. Looking me steadily in the eye, every feature expressing perfect peace, she answered: "Yes, it is just as bright as it can be." Some paroxysms of pain followed. Then to another she said: "Yes, I am easy now." Closing her eyes, she gently breathed her life away, falling asleep in Jesus, March 20.

The widowed mother and sisters and brothers are graciously sostained amid their sorrow by the blessed assurance that it is well with her, and heaven is nearer to them since she went home. They all promised to meet her there. Amen. T. L. MELLEN, P. C.

DAVIS—Whereas, It has pleased All-wise Providence to remove from our midst our beloved sister, Mrs. MARY DAVIS, whose life among us has been so pure, her influence so helpful, and her death so triumphant; though we bow submissively to his mysterious will, we can but grieve to part with one so lovely and so kind; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of Sister Davis the Woman's Missionary Society of Capitol Street Church has lost one of its most valued and useful members.

Resolved, That the whole community suffers a loss by this sudden and unexpected death.

Resolved, That we tender our deepest sympathy to the bereaved family, and order that they be furnished with a copy of this preamble and resolutions.

Respectfully submitted.

HUNDLEY—Mrs. MARY ANN, wife of Prof. C. I. Hundley, died at her home in the parish of Acadia—Pradhomme, La.—Jan. 27, 1895, at the mature age of sixty-five years five months and fifteen days. Born in Humphreys county, Tenn., she moved with her father, Conrad Stevens, to Marshall county, Miss. She was converted at the age of twelve under peculiar circumstances. Her father was having a well dug by a very wicked, profane man. When at the depth of one hundred and twenty feet the walls caved in upon him; without hope, without God, hurried into eternity. The awful consequence of a soul being thus hurled into eternity unprepared preyed upon her mind, causing such wretchedness of heart at the thought that she was a sinner, that with repentant sobs and groans she fell at the feet of Jesus, and after hours of bitter agony she found the secret of trusting in Christ, and the fear of the well-digger's doom gave way to a perfect resignation to God's will. She joined the M. E. Church, South, at Pradhomme, La., in 1870. Her service was constant and true to God, and when I first visited her I found her ready to be called home. She well knew that the time of her departure was at hand, and, though in great distress, she would request prayer and song about her bedside.

She leaves a distressed, heart-stricken husband and five children and their families to mourn her loss—a void that can never be filled on earth, but hope to reunite as a family, unbroken, in heaven.

The life of such women as Sister Hundley is a heritage to the church. A Catholic neighbor, so full of his Romish loyalty that he fears to attend any other church, said to me, with much feeling: "She was a mother to me. No one could have done more for me and my family than she has done." "Her children call her blessed." May they be like her! S. H. WHATLEY.

Pradhomme, La.

GASKINS—LEVIN GASKINS, the subject of this sketch, was born in North Carolina, Sept. 26, 1830, and died at his home near Caseyville, Miss., Jan. 20, 1895.

He moved from his native State to Mississippi when quite a boy, and first settled in Jefferson county, but spent most of his life in Lincoln county.

He was twice married: first to Miss Margaret Simmons, Dec. 10, 1849, and then to Miss Matilda A. Farmer, Jan. 12, 1871, who, with nine children, survive him.

He Gaskins joined the Methodist Church about 1850, and lived a faithful, consistent Christian to the end.

Of a quiet, unobtrusive disposition, he had to be well known to be appreciated at his full worth. He was a good man, full of faith and the Holy Ghost. He loved the church, and was faithful to his vows and obligations. He loved his preachers, and did all he could to minister to their wants. He adorned every relation of life, and the writer never knew a better man. It was, perhaps, in the bosom of his family where the love and sympathy of his noble nature found its fullest expression. He has left to the church the influence of a beautiful Christian character, and to his family the heritage of a good name. His end was peace. He died triumphantly. Just before he died his face shone with a transfigured glory, and he shouted. "Jesus, blessed Jesus, I see ten thousand hosts. Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord!" May his loved ones follow him as he followed Christ, and all meet him one day in the eternal city of God!

W. G. BACKUS.

BROYLES—LALLIE M. BROYLES, little daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Laura Broyles, of Aberdeen, Miss., was born Dec. 1, 1892, and died Feb. 12, 1895.

No sweeter, lovelier child ever graced an earthly home. She was the joy, the gladness and brightness of her parents' lives. Her sparkling eyes, her playful humor, her sweet and amiable disposition won for her more than passing notice. That she was loved but poorly expresses it. Upon her was lavished the wealth of deep and tender parental affection. She reciprocated every manifestation of love to herself. She was what most children are not—all that her parents wished her to be. In her they saw no fault, but everything to love and admire. Quick to obey and anxious to please, she drew all hearts to her. It is a sad thing that she should be taken, leaving her parents heart-broken, their home desolate, and a large family of relatives to mourn. But God knows best, and he does all things well. Often he tears to pieces the "home nest," and breaks into the happiness of the present hour, that we may connect ourselves to higher and better things. He moves in a mysterious way in accomplishing his purposes with men, but by and by the mystery will be cleared away. That their little daughter is now in heaven, we say to the parents: Mourn not, but so set your affections upon things above as to some day realize a blessed companionship with her in the city of God.

TIGNER—Died at her home in Oak Ridge, La., Monday, March 4, 1895, at 9 P. M., Miss CARRIE HESTER TIGNER, daughter of Wm. Noland Tigner and Mary E. Palmer, of Woodville, Miss., aged thirty-four years and nine months.

She was for years a faithful member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. She died in the full assurance of faith, and with the blessed hope of immortality with Christ.

For over fifty years Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar has cured coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis, throat and lung affections. It is the regular prescription of a physician of extensive practice, who, after prescribing it for twenty years, was induced by the gratifying results to make it a proprietary medicine. Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar soon became known as the best remedy for all throat and lung troubles. Why? Because it has merit and will cure. A. C. Hafflefinger, Philadelphia, says: "I know a man suffering with his lungs who was in the hospital a year without benefit. I induced him to take Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and to-day he is well. I know it saved his life." Try it.

The preacher who delivers his Master's message may not always please his hearers, but he is their friend.—Selected.

on the one hand—ruined garments on the other. That will be the result of your trying to save money by using poor, cheap washing-powders, instead of Pearline. Just consider. How much could you save in a year if you bought the cheapest and most worthless? And how far would it go toward paying for the things ruined in a single month? You can't save anything by buying cheap washing-powders. The way to save money in washing is to use what has been proved to be absolutely safe. That is Pearline. Millions use it. 417

"Earthly Footsteps of the Man of Galilee."

A new work of Bishop Vincent, and Dr. J. W. Lee (of St. Louis). A great publishing company is just bringing to light the fruit of much toil and outlay of money. They sent an artist photographer, under the guidance of Dr. Lee, to the Holy Land, there to secure the most exact and perfect pictures of the salient scenes of the earthly life of Christ and the Apostles. We have examined a portion of the work and unhesitatingly pronounce it by far the best thing of its kind ever seen by us. The method of photographic reproduction employed is faultless.

The forthcoming book will contain some four or five hundred of these splendid pictures, 8x10 inches in size. The work will be issued in twenty-four parts, pages 11½x13¼ inches, with chronological charts and colored maps. Each part will contain sixteen pictures, besides the enchanting pen pictures of these renowned writers. The series will run through twenty-four weeks, one a week, at a regular price of 25 cents each. But the ADVOCATE has made a special arrangement by which it will furnish all its subscribers, new and old, for 10 cents a number. Less than half, but very little more than a third of what you will have to pay if your name is not on our subscription roll. The entire series in this way will cost only $2.40; otherwise it will cost $6. This rule of the publishers of this book is the strictest that only to our subscribers can we make this special offer. For $2.40 you may get what another must pay $6 for if you are a subscriber to the ADVOCATE. Send $2.40, and each of the series will be mailed you as fast as issued. Or ten cents (stamps taken) for one issue—any way you prefer.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

JOB'S THREE FRIENDS.

(Job ii, 11-13.)

Napoleon Bonaparte—faithless to friend and foe—remarked truthfully: "A faithful friend is the true image of Deity."

1. The human heart craves for friendship. In the literature of all civilized nations friendship is highly extolled.

(1) Job desired sympathy. Though the three friends agreed among themselves to visit the great sufferer, we doubt not that they had been severally invited.

(2) It is a great comfort in misfortune and fortune to unbosom ourselves to a faithful few, whose friendship we have tried. In distress we need consolation; in prosperity, advice.

(3) There have been men who decry friendship. Avoid it. Shut themselves up in a hermit's cloister. It must be that their misanthropy has been caused by a seared conscience. Morally wrecked, they seem to think that wreckage is general.

2. True friends are rare. Rarer than diamonds.

(1) Job's friends were not recreant, not false; but they were foolish. Their folly intensified the patriarch's suffering.

(2) They comprehended not God's providential dealings with men. That afflictions are not invariably punitions, but frequently correctives. Sent for disciplinary purposes.

(3) The friendship of persons, neither wise nor pious, will injure us. Others will class us as on a par with them.

(4) Avoid persons who declare friendship a farce. Faithless themselves, they deem others equally corrupt.

(5) We find pleasure in reading of the friendship of David and Jonathan, of Damon and Pythias.

3. But, after all, our best friend is our Lord and Master.

(1) Men may abuse our confidence, prove recreant. Friends become enemies.

(2) Never was this true of Jesus. To him we can safely unbosom ourselves. No danger in making him our confidant. In his presence we can shed our tears of sorrow and sing our songs of joy, fully assured that he fully sympathizes with us. What a friend we have in Jesus!

(3) When ultimately in the dark valley and shadow of death, he—he only—will not leave us alone. At the cemetery our earthly friends will consign us to the lone tomb. All leave us. But not our Savior. He sustains us in time and eternity.

At the last meeting of the Union Epworth League, held in Rayne Memorial Church, the following were elected to serve as officers for the ensuing six months:

President, John T. Crebbin; first vice-president, H. B. Ross; second vice-president, M. B. De Pass; third vice-president, T. L. McKnight; secretary, Miss Addie McKnight; treasurer, Miss Barbara Lutz; editor, Rev. H. H. Ahrens.

WHILE OUR HEARTS UNLEARN.

Our Father! while our hearts unlearn
The creeds that wrong thy name,
Still let our hallowed altars burn
With faith's undying flame.

Not by the lightning gleams of wrath
Our souls thy face shall see;
The star of love must light the path
That leads to heaven and thee.

If 'mid the gathering storms of doubt

Selections.

From Alexandria to Jerusalem.

BY BISHOP CHAS B GALLOWAY, D. D.

A day in Alexandria is quite sufficient to see all places of special interest, for almost nothing remains of the great city founded by Alexander, 323 B. C., and which he designed as the magnificent capital of his vast Empire. Once the seat of learning and the home of scholars, having the largest and brilliant library in the world, she has not now a single savant, or great theologian, and the "Alexandrian schools" of philosophy and theology have become very ancient history. Once a city of splendid palaces and great temples, where kings reveled and conquerors ruled, and the beautiful Cleopatra held her amours and intrigues, it is now not unlike any European commercial metropolis, where fortunes are made and wealth accumulates. But it must ever command a conspicuous place in the world because of its rich historic associations. It was here that the Septuagint version of the Scriptures was translated and given to the world. Here St. Mark founded, as the popes assert, the Church of Alexandria, he being its first patriarch. This is the birthplace of the eloquent Apollos, "mighty in the Scriptures," and here, at a later period, Athanasius defended the faith against the Arian heresy.

We drove down to Pompey's Pillar, a large, round monolith of red granite about ninety-eight feet high, and on an elevation that commands a splendid view of city and harbor, and the blue Mediterranean stretching far away to Europe on the north and the Holy Land on the east. We drove along the great canal which connects Cairo with Alexandria, the construction of which cost £300 000, and the loss of 20 000 men by accident and disease. Two hundred and fifty thousand men were employed in its building, and the work was completed in one year. It furnishes cheap transportation between the two cities. The immense flatboats loaded with cotton reminded me all too forcibly of my home in the lower Mississippi valley. We passed a number of handsome villas and palaces owned by wealthy natives. They are vacant now, as "the season is on" in Cairo. They spend the Winters in the capital, and come to Alexandria to get the Mediterranean breezes during the summer.

On Wednesday, Jan. 2, in "a ship of Alexandria," we sailed for Joppa. Our party had two valuable and appreciated additions—Rev. Mr. Patterson and Rev. Mr. Hislop, of the Church of Scotland, who will make with us the tour of the Holy Land. We have found them accomplished and courteous gentlemen, good travelers, and agreeable companions. We had a smooth and speedy passage over the Mediterranean lasting less than twenty-four hours from Alexandria to Joppa. The ship's company was not large, but was varied in nationality, profession, and character. We had preachers and horse jockeys, missionaries and globe-trotters, a young lady with a pet monkey, a young benedict with his blushing bride, and dwellers in different parts of the world, all going to the Holy Land. At nine o'clock in the morning the blue Judean mountains were plainly visible. Soon the rugged hills on which Joppa is built came into full view, and at noon we cast anchor in the open roadstead, where Jonah took ship for Tarshish. But of that ancient city by the sea nothing has come down from the time when Peter had his vision on the house of "one Simon the tanner," except the ruins of an old Genoese breakwater. Some of these massive stones still vainly attempt to keep back the surging billows, and tell of the early, but unsuccessful, efforts to make a safe harbor for the port of Joppa. The small boats that land passengers and cargo from the ships anchored outside have to pass through a narrow gateway of twenty feet between those ancient rocks. That passage is called "Jonah's Strait," and when the sea is rough is very dangerous. Indeed, in stormy weather ships are compelled to pass without attempting to send passengers ashore. Fortunately—providentially, I prefer to believe—the day of our coming was calm and cloudless. In a few minutes we were safely through "Jonah's Strait," and planted our feet upon the sacred soil toward which the hopes and plans of years had fondly turned. Through dirty, narrow, crooked streets we walked, with scarcely room for passing camels and donkeys, until a carriage was reached outside the site of the ancient wall, which carried us quickly to a comfortable hotel in the 'American quarter."

After lunch and final arrangements with Mr. Floyd for a tour of Palestine, we started out to see Joppa, under the conduct of Mr. Abdallah G. Kayat, our dragoman for twenty days. He is a native of Beyroot, but was reared in Joppa, a Christian in communion with the Greek Church, quite well informed, and speaks English fluently. We found him affable, courteous, and unwearied in attention. Having been accustomed in his church, and in his business as dragoman, to so distinguish the Bishops of other churches, he persisted in addressing me as 'my Lord." Though not agreeable to my American and ecclesiastical democracy, I submitted, for two reasons: 1. The dragoman evidently enjoyed it. 2 It occasioned special consideration at the hotels, without constant demands—a fact appreciated by those who have traveled in the Orient. I suspected, however, that the dragoman more than once thought me too unconventional for such a dignity.

Joppa, in the tribe of Dan, and one of the oldest cities in the world, was a port of some pretensions in the time of Solomon. Here the cedars from Lebanon, furnished by Hiram, King of Tyre, for Solomon's Temple, were brought by floats, and transported over the hills to Jerusalem.

The first thing that attracted attention in our afternoon walk was the small door cut in the large doors and gates that open into the houses and courts of the people. That is the "needle's eye" of the Scriptures, and is everywhere seen in Palestine. It is only used to admit persons. A camel can not go through the eye of that needle, but must have the great doors thrown wide open to admit his ponderous awkwardness and ugliness. The scriptural figure and the hard case of the rich man I never quite fully appreciated before.

The women on the streets were heavily veiled, the entire face being covered. Unlike the Egyptian dames, who will allow a peep at their eyes, these Mohammedans cover the face entirely, though the veil is thin enough about the eyes for them to see others quite well. It was rather amusing to see them draw the veil over an exposed face on the approach of gentlemen. The Christians, I am glad to say, do not adhere rigidly to such a foolish custom.

We tarried for a few moments at a Mohammedan cemetery, which was quite crowded with persons whose custom is to spend several hours every Thursday at the graves of their dead. They bring flowers and a lunch, and are supposed to talk over the virtues and the lives of their departed loved ones. Just inside the sacred inclosure turbaned and hooded hucksterers were selling fruits and ware of every kind. There is no place too holy for a Mohammedan to ply his petty business. Here we saw the locust, a bean of long pods, which John the Baptist is supposed to have eaten.

We visited Miss Arnold's school, but just too late too see the children in their classes. This institution, called the "Tabeetha Mission School," was founded by Miss Arnold, of Scotland, in 1863, who yet conducts it with increasing success. In the boarding- and day-schools there are 150 children, about 40 of whom are inmates of the college home. These are from the families of Greeks, Copts, Protestants, and a very few Mohammedans. The last would probably be more accessible to the gospel but for the fanatical and tyrannical Turkish government. It is worth a Mohammedan's life to make an open confession of Christianity. In some mysterious way he will soon disappear, and the authorities never be able to discover the assassin.

Through a narrow, winding lane we reach the traditional site of the house of "one Simon a tanner." Over the arched entrance is an Arabic inscription from the Koran, and on the spot itself is a small Mohammedan mosque. What a commentary, thought I, that a place with such associations should fall into hostile and fanatical hands! We climbed to the top of the building, which is quite near the sea, and recalled that wonderful vision Peter had of the sheet let down from heaven, which taught him and us the world-wide mission of the glorious gospel. Near by are certain stones, which, it is claimed, were the vats of an old tannery. Adjoining the mosque is an ancient and very deep well, from which water is drawn in a bucket of goat-skin, as in the olden time.

On a hill quite outside the city there is a handsome Greek Church on the reputed site of the home of Dorcas, and where, in answer to Peter's prayer, she was raised from the dead. We visited the sacred shrine, the successor of one built by the Crusaders, long since destroyed, and recalled the tender scene when Peter appeared in that upper death chamber, while "all the widows stood by him weeping, and showing the coats and garments which Dorcas made while she was with them." As an appeal to his interceding faith, they had something to show of her good works. Well, indeed, will it be if each of us can have something to show that our lives have not been fruitless in service for others. Returning to the hotel, we passed through groves of orange, lemon, pomegranate, apricot, and olive, with here and there a stately palm, which yields an abundant harvest of dates. We walked along hedges of acacia, and had attention called to the sycamore tree, so prominently mentioned in the Scriptures. The orange industry of Joppa was to me rather surprising. There are from 8 000 to 9 000 groves in and near Joppa, with an average of nearly 2,000 trees to the grove, and a yield of from 200 to nearly 2,000 to the tree. The income from this crop last year was over one million francs, Joppa oranges commanding a premium in European markets. When storms prevail and shipping is impossible, a "donkey-load" of oranges—300 or 400—will sell in Joppa for five cents.

On Friday, Jan. 4, at noon, we "booked" by train for Jerusalem. This road was completed several years ago at a cost of 14 000,000 francs, the first passenger train reaching Jerusalem Sept. 26, 1892. We hesitated as to whether to go by carriage or rail from Joppa to Jerusalem, but finally concluded to take the railroad, for two reasons: 1. The day was cold and stormy. 2. More places of biblical interest and importance would be seen. We missed Kirjath-Jearim and the Valley of Ajalon, but made more than compensating gains. The locomotive which pulled the train was named Lydda, and manufactured in America by the Baldwin Locomotive Company, of Philadelphia.

As far as Ramleh the railway and carriage road runs parallel. Beginning just outside the city, we noticed small stone houses along the carriage road at intervals of two miles. These are guard-houses, built by the Turkish government some years ago for the protection of the highway, each house being occupied by two soldiers. It has transpired, however, that many of the robberies of recent years have been committed by these appointed guardians of the peace.

The Plain of Sharon is entered shortly after leaving Joppa. It is wide and fertile, a beautiful picture of olive groves and well-cultivated fields. In March and April, I understand, the whole plain is one vast garden aflame with flowers of every name and tint, except the rose. The "Rose of Sharon" is a brilliant flower, resembling the poppy. From the olive groves the people of this section derive their principal income, and from these trees, which are numbered and taxed throughout Palestine, the Turkish government gets quite a revenue.

The first place of any biblical importance passed was a small modern village on the right, not far from the Jewish Agricultural College. It is on the traditional place where Samson caught three hundred foxes, and, tying firebrands to their tails, "let them go into the standing corn of the Philistines."

The first station at which our train stopped was Lydda—ancient Lod, mentioned in Ezra. It was while visiting "the saints which dwelt at Lydda" that Peter healed Eneas of the palsy, and, in response to the appeal from Joppa, went down and raised Dorcas from the dead. I very much regretted that the olive trees, however beautiful, hid the historic shrine from view. A few miles further on was Ramleh, supposed to be the site of Arimathea, the home of a rich man "named Joseph," whose love triumphed in the hour of trial, and, begging of Pilate the broken body of his Lord, laid it tenderly to rest "in his own new tomb."

On the right of the road, and on a high hill, were the ruins of ancient Beth-shemesh. And about a mile distant, across a deep, narrow valley, on the opposite height, was Zorah, the birthplace of Samson. I probably looked upon the very spot where the angel of the Lord appeared to Manoah and his wife, and promised that remarkable son who was to judge Israel for twenty years and fill the world with the glory of his mighty deeds. A few miles further was a high and hollow rock, claimed by some to be "the rock Etam," where Samson took refuge, and from which he descended and slew a thousand Philistines, as our dragoman prudishly put it, "with the jawbone of a donkey."

From Zorah we ascended the hills of Judea, by a very steep grade in some places; and along the valley of the roadbed was the very way the ark of the covenant was carried. The mountain-sides were terraced, and planted in grapes, the vines being trained on the rocky ground. It would seem hardly possible to gather enough grapes from all those granite hills to make wine for one royal cellar, but I am told they produce very large crops. On our left, a mile or so from "the city of the great King," attention was called to a handsome stone house. It is the country residence of the Greek Patriarch of Jerusalem, and is built on the supposed site of the house of the "just and devout" Simeon, who had the assurance "that he should not see death before he had seen the Lord's Christ."

From the hilltop we caught a first view of the sacred city. And though the clouds were heavy, and a bitter north wind was fiercely blowing, her gray walls were transfigured with beauty, while my heart leaped up and said, There, indeed, is Jerusalem the golden. It was a supreme moment of intense joy—gazing at the city which had heard the voice and witnessed the death and resurrection of the world's Redeemer.

We reached the station at 4:30 o'clock, and drove at once to the Jerusalem Hotel, outside the walls. But, despite the inclement weather, Messrs. Hislop, Patterson and myself drove back to the Joppa Gate, and spent an hour walking the narrow streets and reverently noting the places pointed out by our intelligent dragoman. Near the Zion Gate we had a good view of the Mount of Olives, and, with that picture lingering in the mind, softly turned and silently walked to our hotel.

Jerusalem, Jan. 9, 1895.

Stings.

Little stings! How they hurt! Not the sting of an insect or the bite of a serpent, but the stings which arm the points of sarcastic remarks, thoughtless words, and careless acts. The sharpness and poison of these will fester and rankle in the wound long after the heedless author has forgotten. Could he see the flushed cheek and hot tears when the victim has escaped to seclusion, he would have chosen his words with more care. There is innocent, joyful mirth which "doeth good like a medicine;" but the sarcastic or rude jest has a penetrating sharpness which hurts while it amuses. Let us earnestly seek to have such an abiding love for our fellow-men that we shall instinctively say and do those things which will cause a merry spirit devoid of a pang.—Selected.

Over half the State of Texas has voted in favor of local option, and it is likely the entire State will vote out the liquor traffic. The curse of Texas has been Rum and Romanism. The lower part of the State especially has been under the priesthood and they are making desperate efforts to hold it. The old Mexican population and the European immigrants are for the most part under the priesthood, and they have of late started schools among the negroes. Our American population are getting their eyes open. A most timely publication has recently been issued from the prolific pen of Rev. R. C. Armstrong, D. D. It is a masterly argument and a startling exhibition of the enormities of the Romish Church. —H. A. Bourland, in St. Louis Christian Advocate.

The accompanying item is from the New York Christian Advocate on "Unprecedented Missionary Information:" It is reported to the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions that for the first time in history a pagan nation has authorized the employment of native Christians as army chaplains. Ten missionaries and sixteen Japanese workers have been designated to work among soldiers at Hiroshima, and a commission has also been appointed to send a number of Japanese evangelists to the front as Christian workers for the army.

Communications.

In the Living Present.

Bishop Merrill, of the M. E. Church, is reported recently to have said that the question of candidates for membership in the Annual Conference, relating to abstinence from tobacco, was one which, perhaps, had better be unasked. The wise prelate seems to think that the position of our church on that subject is the best.

Rev. Dr. Dale, a pious Congregationalist in Birmingham, England, died recently while composing a sermon on "Unworldliness." He was penning this sentence: "The allurements of this world will fail to beguile if we are inspired and actuated by the hope that after this life's fitful fever we will have a home in—" Here he stopped and death ensued. "Heaven" was the word he did not write. His translation to heaven rendered the writing of the word unnecessary.

Harper's Weekly laments that our young people are sadly ignorant of the Bible. Our learning would be incomplete if not familiar with the historical and doctrinal contents of the Word of God. It was, perhaps, a matter of regret that the Bible is ignored at our public schools. The Sunday-school does well; but its opportunities are insufficient. Of yore the Bible was regularly read at home and contents discussed among parents and children; but that practice is sadly declining. Are sowing wind.

Dr. Lyman Abbott, in the Century, for April, insists that in our public schools reverence for things sacred, religion and morality is being systematically undermined. Conglomerate denominationalism rendered, perhaps, religious instruction in said schools impossible; but this impossibility emphasized the necessity of appointing men and women as teachers of unquestionable moral character.

Maggie Tiller, in Chicago, has been found guilty of murder and has been sentenced to die on the gallows. Since then she is the recipient of many flowers and other courtesies. Sentimentalism has set many pens to work giving silly reasons for not executing the sentence. But why not hang because she is a woman? Why not here insist on woman's rights? Though a woman, she committed dastardly, bloody murder.

Figaro, in Paris, reports the construction of a new, vastly improved type-setting machine. The inventor is the Dominican monk, Calendoli. The new machine enables the compositor to set up fifty thousand letters in one hour.

We deplore the fact that quite a number of preachers are trying to imitate Dr. Parkhurst, visiting the haunts of vice night and giving the result of their observation on the following Sunday. Giving the people a stone in place of bread. Scandal-mongers may be pleased by such a course, but certainly not those hungering for the Word of God. Sensationalism may fill the church, but it also, and at the same time, empties the hearers of spirituality.

North Mississippi Conference Notes.

Macon has a flourishing Epworth League.

The Starkville circuit parsonage, which was burned, has been replaced by a newly purchased one.

Children's Day programs are going off rapidly. Will the few brethren who have not sent us their orders yet do so at once? It is hoped that this service will be more generally observed this year than ever before. No charge for the "programs" in our Conference.

Sunday-schools that suspended during the Winter are reopening, and new ones are being organized. Now, let all go to work to make these schools successful and perennial, that there be no more hibernating until the enemy of God's truth and souls hibernates. To this end every officer and teacher should have the Sunday-school Magazine, price fifty cents a year, and Dr. Cunnyngham's new book on Sunday-school history and work, price fifty cents per copy.

This scribe had the pleasure of spending Easter Sunday, by special request, at Tibbee with Bro. Broyles and his clever people. The Sunday-school was addressed, two sermons were preached, and one man joined the church. There is mutual favor between pastor and people; consequently, effective work is being done.

En route to Tibbee I breakfasted at the district parsonage in Starkville, Friday morning, after which I accompanied Presiding Elder Wier to his quarterly meeting at Crawford, where I spent Saturday, preaching once and disposing of good literature, which services, it is hoped, will be of lasting benefit.

District Conferences and Preachers' Meetings will soon begin to be held. The colporter will attend all of them possible, to serve and to be served. Brethren desiring any special books at those meetings will please let him know in due time. It is expected that a District Sunday-school Conference be held in connection with each District Conference as per request of the Sunday-school Board, and that the presiding elders arrange for the same. (See Discipline, 1894, ¶ 243, page 105.)

We are anticipating a great occasion of the Epworth League Convention at Grenada. We hope that every preacher in the two Conferences that can will be present with a good representation of the laity. I will have on hand there a full line of Living Songs and other appropriate books. Any person desiring any particular book, or books, will please notify me in due time, that I may be sure to have them on hand.

The Critic.

We have never yet known a professional critic who was not himself acutely sensitive to criticism. Whoever will explain to us this undoubted fact shall have our liberal thanks. Humiliating as is the necessity, we are compelled to confess that we do not understand it. Let those who are fond of psychological problems turn their attention to this one. They will find it worthy of their careful consideration. We have been acquainted with several ministers of the gospel, for example, who seemed to have no scruples about censuring the conduct and impeaching the motives of their fellow-ministers, but who made indignant protests when any question was raised as to their own perfect rectitude. This is a grave inconsistency. When a man makes a business of throwing stones, let him have the manliness not to complain if now and then he should feel a sudden concussion upon his own pate. By what process of reasoning the critic brings himself to believe that he is personally entitled to a larger latitude of speech than he is willing for the rest of men to exercise is, as we have said above, a perplexing puzzle. In the sphere of ethics there are no favors and no exemptions. The critic must stand and take his turn with the rest.—Nashville Advocate.

True as the gospel, Bro. Hoss; but you are simply "pitching straws against the wind" when you make an effort to correct this evil. There is no task so utterly hopeless as that of correcting the faults of a man who is "struck on himself." Never until death paralyzes his tongue does such a man cease to hurl rash and unkind criticisms right and left at everybody who does not agree with him in every particular, and to howl like an incarcerated cur whenever anyone dares to intimate that he is not entirely perfect.

(Concluded.)

In studying and interpreting the Bible, the fact is too often ignored that the secular meaning of a word is not always the one given to it by the inspired writers. Secular thought and religious thought are two separate fields. When a man passes from one to the other he finds new ideas requiring expression, and he has either to coin new words or give additional meanings to words already in use. Both these things were done by the New Testament writers. In speaking of the word ecclesia, Armitage says: "We must interpret it by its primitive sense. Its contemporary use in common secular life answered exactly to its sacred use."

On the other hand, Dr. William Smith, in his Bible Dictionary, says: "In accordance with its derivation, it originally meant an assembly called out by the magistrate, or by legitimate authority. This is the ordinary classical sense of the word. But it throws no light on the nature of the institution so designated in the New Testament, for to the writers of the New Testament the word had now lost its primary signification."

Who is correct? "To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them."

The church is spoken of in the Bible as a kingdom. "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed." (Dan. ii, 44.) The time referred to was that of the advent of Christ. Now hear John the Baptist, "Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." (Matt. iii, 2.) Hear Christ, as he began his public ministry, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." (Matt. iv, 17.) The word is kingdom, not kingdoms. The phrase, "kingdom of heaven," or "kingdom of God," is used in, at least, one other sense in the New Testament, but in these places it doubtless means the church in its broad generic sense. Now read Matt. xvi, 18: "And I say also unto thee that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." In Daniel it is said the kingdom "shall never be destroyed." Of the church Christ says, "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it." The language used by both strongly indicates reference to one and the same institution. Was this church to be a local organization? If so, the promise that the gates of hell should not prevail against it had a local application. This promise has been a comfort to the saints of all ages, and in all countries; but, according to Baptist notions, it was limited to a particular congregation. Others have no part nor lot in it. This is a necessary conclusion. Is not such an interpretation "handling the Word of God deceitfully"? Away with all such narrow, sectarian trifling.

The Apostle Paul frequently uses the term church in its broad signification. He says, "I persecuted the church of God." (1. Cor. xv, 9.) He alludes to this in other places, and it is always "the church;" not a church, nor churches. In persecuting the members of local congregations he was persecuting the church of God in its wide generic sense. Examine the following passages, and it will be seen that to make the word "church" mean a local congregation is to reduce the apostle's language to nonsense. "And gave him"—Christ—"to be head over all things to the church." (Eph. i, 22.) "To the intent that now unto the principalities and powers in heavenly places might be known by the church the manifold wisdom of God." (Eph. iii, 10.) "For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church." (Eph. v, 23.) "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church and gave himself for it." (Eph. v, 25.) "That he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing." (Eph. v, 27.) "So ought men to love their wives as their own bodies. . . . For no man ever yet hated his own flesh, but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the church." (Eph. v, 28, 29.) "This is a great mystery: but I speak concerning Christ and the church." (Eph. v, 32.) "And he is the head of the body, the church." (Col. i, 18.) "For his body's sake, which is the church." (Col. i, 24.) See also Heb. xii, 22, 23.

In these places, and elsewhere, the word "church" is used in its generic sense, embracing all local organizations and all Christian people who do not belong to any visible organization. It means the church universal, or church catholic. It comprehends not only the various bigoted organizations that claim to monopolize all church life and authority, but also those that are less pretentious and presumptuous, but more scriptural. All who belong to Christ are members of the church universal. When Bro. H. sneeringly asks, "Is there a whole brood of them?" referring to my language about the church in its broad generic sense, he shows how incapable he is of grasping the Bible idea of this great institution. No; there is not "a whole brood of them." But there is a whole brood of denominations and local organizations. There can be but one universal church.

If Bro. H., or anyone else, will search the Scriptures, it will be found that the word "church" is not only used in the New Testament in its narrow and broad significations, but also that for this last signification there are many synonymous words. The followers of Christ, from among the Gentiles and the Jews, are called the "household of God," "an holy temple in the Lord," "the whole family in heaven and earth." The church is called "the bride, the Lamb's wife." There are many churches—meaning by the term local organizations—but there is only one bride. If Baptists would put their theory into practice, they would not only use the word "church" in the plural, but where the New Testament speaks of a "household," a "family," and a "bride," they would substitute households, families, and brides.

If the rejection of our important and prominent revelation of truth is to "reject the authority of Jesus Christ," then Bro. H., and those who think like him, are chargeable with the very sin they lay at the door of other people. Of course, all this is persecution, and the old time will be raised to a higher key.

Worldliness in the Church—How to Get It Out.

Esau is the Bible type of worldliness. He is called in Scripture a profane—that is, worldly—person. It is lamentable, yet true, that to-day there are Esaus in the church of God—those who were doubtless born into the kingdom, but have since yielded themselves to the secular influences of the world, and have become servants of unrighteousness. There are others in the church who have never been converted. As to why those who are wholly unconverted are in the church, we think it certain some are there for policy's sake. We knew a man who moved into a community to sell goods. In that place there were two denominations — Methodist and Presbyterian. The man was a Methodist, but connected himself with the Presbyterians because they were the more numerous in that community. Some again come into the church because of the popularity of Christianity. In the early ages of the church to be a Christian was to subject one's self to persecution in a thousand forms. To be one now is to possess a passport into the most refined and cultured circles of society, and to be the recipient of kindly favors upon every hand. The devil knows that every unconverted person in the church is but a clog in the wheels of Zion; hence he is wonderfully active in exerting all his subtle power to fill the church with the unconverted.

The worldliness in the church has called forth an expression from our chief pastors—the Bishops. They say: "Our piety, our self-sacrifice, our Christian enterprise have not been equal to our growth, much less to our standards and to our time-honored ecclesiastical landmarks. Fundamentally correct in our views of scriptural truth, and, in the main, commendably consistent in our conduct, we have departed, in some instances, from the simplicity of the gospel as we first received it. An inordinate love of the world, in the forms of wealth, of fashion, and of amusement, has largely diffused itself amongst our people and corrupted their spiritual integrity."

How can we get rid of worldliness in the church? In our humble judgment, to prevent more of it from coming into the church is one of the most important things to be done. Some of us (preachers), doubtless, are so eager to increase our members that we sometimes fail to inquire sufficiently into the spiritual state of those who present themselves for membership in the church. We ought to thoroughly sift every applicant for church membership, and satisfy ourselves fully that his conversion is genuine. We give this instance of this sifting process: A pastor, with whom we are personally acquainted, said that at one of his revivals twelve young men and young ladies presented themselves for membership. Instead of receiving them immediately, he appointed an hour to talk with them, when he would endeavor to impress upon them the responsibilities of church membership. He did this three days successively. One young lady wanted to know if she could postpone joining the church until after a certain social in the community. At each of these meetings the numbers decreased till the day appointed for receiving them into the church, when only one or two out of the twelve came forward for reception. To this whole method we say, "Amen."

Another excellent way to remove worldliness from the church is, preach it out. Let us who are preachers pray to be baptized with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven, and then preach the gospel in its purity till the worldly feel that their lives are not conformed to its teachings. Let us raise the standard so very high that the worldly-minded will either back down and out, or else be stimulated to rise higher in the divine life.

Another method is, the exercise of discipline. This has fallen greatly into disuse. We do not believe that we should exercise discipline for every small offense. We should first do what we can to win the offender from his error; but, if he do not amend, let us be firm, though kind, in the exercise of discipline. Let us beware of the subtle influence and deadly power of worldliness when once it has possession of a church.

In Brazil there grows a plant which is called the matador, or "murderer." At first its slender stem creeps along the ground; but no sooner does it meet a vigorous tree than, with clinging grasp, it cleaves to it, and climbs it, and, as it climbs, sends out, at short intervals, arm-like tendrils that embrace the tree. As the "murderer" ascends, these ligatures grow larger and clasp tighter. Up it climbs a hundred feet—two hundred, if need be—until the last loftiest spire is gained and fettered. Then, as if in triumph, the parasite shoots a huge flowery head above the strangled summit, and thence, from the dead tree's crown, scatters its seed to do again the work of death. Even thus worldliness has strangled more churches than persecution ever broke. Worldliness is fatal to the church.

JOHN W. RAMSEY.

The United States Congress and the Sabbath.

The closing hours of the late unlamented Congress of the United States are suggestive of such questions as these: Are we a Christian people? Has this nation, as a nation, any sort of decent regard for good morals? How are we to appear in the sight of other nations? How can we expect the blessing of the God of nations to rest upon this country?

After mangling, fighting and swearing at each other on strictly partisan lines throughout the entire session, legislation became so urgent and important at the very last that both Houses sat in regular sessions on Sabbath, March 3. They were not too hard-pressed to observe Washington's birthday. Oh, no; the "Father of his Country's" memory was entitled to that much respect. What a mockery was this when considered in relation to the fact that the holy day "that saw the Lord arise"—the day set apart by the all-wise Law-giver to be a day of sacred rest—was utterly disregarded, and put to profane uses by the highest legislative council of this nation! It seems to me the drift of this country, as a country, is away from good morals, to say nothing of Christianity. Has not the time come for our people to say, in no uncertain way, that an indispensable qualification for a seat in our legislative halls, both State and National, is a good moral character and a decent respect for the institutions of Christianity? Had we not better "take a collection" and send a missionary to Congress to teach its members good manners?

The action of that body on last Sunday was an outrage upon the religious order and sentiment of this land, and an insulting affront to Almighty God. What is to become of our boast that we are a "peculiar people," a chosen nation? I ask again, what are other nations, even the uncivilized, to think of us? What shall we do? Is it not time to call a halt? Where is the remedy? Let those wiser than I answer.

Seeing the Gospel.

"I've heard the gospel for fifty years," exclaimed a good brother, whose works of charity and mercy were known throughout the community where he lived. "What I want now is to see a little more of it before I die!"

That was a significant utterance. It touches the great need of modern Christianity—more doing, less doctrine. We have all heard the gospel till we know it by rote and by rhythm. But have we seen enough of the gospel to make embodied Bible doctrines familiar? Most of us know the beatitudes by heart. How many of us know them by observation? "It is more blessed to give than to receive." How often we hear that! Do we see it—do we exemplify it—very often?

Concrete gospel is what we want nowadays—gospel which is visible to the naked eye; gospel which doesn't require a microscope to discover its own good work; gospel in the street, gospel in the shop, gospel in the home. We want to see men acting like brothers, as well as preaching brotherhood and sitting under the everlasting indoctrination of brotherhood. We want to see common honesty in business and in politics more than we need to hear uncommon saintliness enjoined from the pulpit. The world is full of the echoes of the gospel, but there are precious few substantial gospel examples walking around where we can see them.

Never in the history of Christ's church was there more need of actual, genuine, practical, embodied piety; never was there less need of the multiplication of creeds, theories, and exordiums. The Christian employer who shakes his employee's hand with an honest, manly, hearty grip, treats him as a man and brother, and scorns to jew him out of honest wage is doing more good in the world—the present hard-conditioned, prosaic, militarian, dollar-grasping world—than any group of theologians who might be named.

Less gospel enunciation, more gospel realization—that is what we want, brethren. Are we chiefly helping people to hear the gospel, or are we helping them to see it? Both are good, but for these days, and this great world crisis, surely doing is better than any kind or amount of exegesis.—Zion's Herald.

Small Things.

Living to Christ in small things, and living for Christ every day, is the secret of large fruitfulness. A peach tree or an orange does not leap into a bounty of fruit by one spasmodic effort; an orchard does not ripen under a single day's sunshine. Every raindrop, every sunbeam, every inch of subsoil does its part. A fruitful Christian is a growth. To finish up a godly character by a mere religion of Sundays and sermons and sacraments and revivals and special seasons is impossible. A man can be converted in an instant, but he must grow by the year. The tough fiber of the slender branch which can hold up a half bushel of oranges is very different from a little willow switch. It is the steady compacting process that makes the little limb like a steel wire. Such is a healthy and holy believer's life. Every honest prayer breathed, every cross carried, every trial well endured, every good work for our fellow-men lovingly done, every little act conscientiously performed for Christ's glory, helps to make the Christian character beautiful, and to load its broad boughs with "apples of gold" for God's "baskets of silver."—The Examiner.

It is well to keep in mind that no day leaves us just where and as it found us. We are with each departing day older in time and nearer to the grave. Some addition for good or ill is made to the record of life. We are made better or worse. Habit becomes a little stronger. Our opportunities in life lessen. The need of despatch in the work of life increases. We have less time to waste. The danger of delay augments.—Selected.

Once upon a time a hog drank from a trough into which a barrel of beer had been emptied. He became very much intoxicated. When he came to himself, he was very much ashamed of his conduct. He was truly penitent, and said to his friends: "I have always been a beast until this unlucky slip, and I promise you I'll never make a man of myself again."

God respects not the arithmetic of our prayers—how many they are; nor the rhetoric of our prayers — how elegant they are; nor the music of our prayers—how melodious they are; nor the logic of our prayers—how methodical they are; but the sincerity of our prayers—how heart-sprung they are.—Lutheran Observer.

There is an old saint who lives near you and is in need, not for something to eat, but for something to read. How the weekly visits of the church paper would light up the evening of life! You may have thought of this often, but this does not help the old saint. It is time to act.

A religion that shouts and sings and says loud amens, but never makes any special effort to pay honest debts, is not the kind that is held forth in the New Testament. It may sing and shout here, but how about the future?

A Christianity intent only upon saving its own soul in the repose of luxurious churches, whilst the river of human sin and misery sweeps unregarded by the door, will not impress the present age.—James Stalker.

How mankind defers from day to day the best it can do and the most beautiful things it can enjoy, without thinking that every day may be the last one, and that lost time is lost eternity.—Max Muller.

You help a man in proportion as you strengthen his faith. You injure him in proportion as you weaken it.—J. D. Kilburn.

Training for Home Mission Work.

The following selection from The Evangel, the little monthly published by our Scarritt Bible and Training-school, is only a simple account of an afternoon's work by one of the girls. There are one or two other articles in the April number I would like to copy if there was room in our column. As I read this little paper, month after month, and see the thorough, practical training for home, as well as foreign mission work, the pupils in this grand institution are receiving, I am seized with a longing for the time to come when all our Conference P. and H. M. Societies shall have scholarships in our Bible and Training-school, to fit consecrated young women for efficient service as home missionaries. The field is so wide and skilled laborers are so few, and the demand for them is so great, that the supply surely ought to be increased.

One Afternoon's Work.

Tuesday afternoon came, and I found myself, as usual, hurrying down Colorado avenue toward my "district," as we each call our regular visiting fields. My attention was suddenly arrested by a boy all in tatters, who was gazing longingly in the window of the little corner drug store. I had just had my mind intent on the oddest of all the odd homes I've seen in my visiting, and the one that always attracts my attention when I walk down this way. The sidewalk here runs for quite a distance on the edge of a deep gully on the left, and in this gully the queer home is situated. I've never looked down on it yet without wondering who its occupants are (for they must be very, very poor to be content to live in such a place), nor without wanting to go down and make the acquaintance of the poor inmates. But it is not always safe or prudent to go alone into such quarters, so I've contented myself heretofore with inquiring about the inmates.

But to return to the boy. He gazed so intently at the red and blue tops displayed so temptingly in the window that he was unconscious of my presence until he heard my voice. "My boy, do you attend Sunday-school anywhere?" He looked at me in a surprised way, and replied, "No'm; you know I ain't got no clothes fit to wear," and then, showing where his thoughts and desires were still intent, he added, "I'm just a-looking at them tops." All his boyish nature showed plainly in the accent he gave that one word "tops." After a moment's conversation I found to my delight that he lived in the queer little home that had interested me so much, and that his mother was a widow who did washing and scrubbing for a living. I turned to go, telling him I'd stop on my way home to see his mother. How glad I was to find I could at last go down there for a visit; but I was so sorry to think I had left my purse at home, for here was an opportunity to bring to one boy's heart a great deal of joy with an outlay of only a few pennies. He must have read my thoughts, for as I turned away he said, "I wish I had one of them tops!" Around the corner I met another Training-school girl and tried to borrow a dime, but she had left her purse at home, too.

As I expected, I found, on entering the house a few hours afterward, that its occupants were very poor indeed; but, oh! so many children who ought to be in Sunday-school. There were two families, and the same old story of poverty and no work, and the children not supplied with suitable clothes for home wear even. I talked to the girls about our Industrial School, and they became so much interested they promised to come on Saturday afternoon and be enrolled as pupils. I told them if they came with clean dresses, they didn't need to bother about their clothes being poor. The interested looks and broad smiles of the little girls assured me more than any words of the mother that they would be on hand Saturday afternoon.

"Freddy" was at home, and, to my disappointment, had "traded" and gotten a top; but he told me it was an old one, and then entered into a glowing description of the wonderful tops "they're goin' to have" at the little store. And now I'm impatient for an opportunity to run down to the little store, for Freddie must have a top—a bran new one! And what is more, the "poor closet" must be ransacked for a suit for him, for he is anxious to go to Sunday-school.

The remainder of my afternoon was taken up in waiting on a poor sick woman, cleaning the house which she had not been able to touch all day, telephoning the doctor, and looking up her three-year-old baby girl who had run off to play. I found her a block away sitting in (as her little brother expressed it) "the muddiest place in the world." There was no help for it; she wouldn't come to me, so I went to her. There she sat with two great tears on her cheek—a most forlorn little figure. I came home with a happy heart, for it takes such a little outlay of time, thought and attention to bring out a great deal of gratitude from these poor people. The visits of the girls bring a great deal of happiness into their homes, even when we are unable to help them in any other way.—M. W., in The Evangel.

Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Sardis District.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Sardis district convened in Como Thursday, April 11. The meeting was opened at 9 o'clock A. M. with a preparation service led by Mrs. W. L. Lipscomb, of Columbus. Her talk was helpful and practical, and no mother whose heart yearns over the salvation of her children, and her heathen sisters and their children, could fail to be stirred. A large number of the delegates testified in earnest words to their love for the Savior and their desire to help advance his kingdom.

After this service, Sister Hargrove took the chair and called the meeting to order. Mrs. W. H. Wall, of Sardis, was elected secretary. Como extended a graceful greeting to the visitors and delegates through Miss Myrta Tigrett, which was brightly responded to by Mrs. M. P. Short, of Melrose. The report of the district secretary showed such growth as could result only from much patient toil and many earnest prayers. Six adult and four juvenile auxiliaries had been organized during the past year, making a total of thirty-six. The president, Mrs. Hargrove, spoke of the remarkable zeal of her new district secretary, and applied to her work the quotation from Proverbs, "Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou hast excelled them all." The roll of auxiliaries being called, eight adult and eight juvenile were represented. These reports show decided progress in some places; in others, a strong foothold, steadily holding its own. Everywhere encouragement.

The first part of the afternoon was devoted to the juvenile work, and the little children were welcomed in a few simple words and with sweet childish grace by little Louise Williamson, and this welcome was responded to by Miss Bennie Belle Short, in a very appropriate speech. Eight bright girls and boys made encouraging, earnest reports of the work. What an earnest army of workers these little people represent for the future! We, who are older, should constantly encourage and help them. After the juvenile reports were finished, papers were read by Mrs. Hunter, of Sardis, and Mrs. Clifford, of Courtland, on the best methods of making the monthly meetings interesting, and enlisting new members. These papers were followed by some discussion, during which many helpful hints were given, and we trust that every worker carried home with her some suggestions which shall develop much interest in the auxiliaries and bring a rich harvest of new members.

The service at night was of especial interest, as our returned missionary, Mrs. Lula Waters, was present, and gave an interesting and instructive talk on "Woman's Work for Woman in the Sunrise Kingdom." We pray God her presence in the home-land may stir our workers to more enthusiastic devotion, and a more intelligent interest in our work and workers abroad.

The evening was also pleasant because of the beautiful music rendered by the Como choir, and very appropriate and stirring recitations by Annie Taylor, of Como, and Miss Lucy Raiford, of Senatobia. The little song published last week in the World for Christ, "Hear the Pennies Falling," was sweetly sung by little Grace Brown, of Como, and was immediately followed by the never-failing collection.

After the meeting was dismissed many lingered in the church, saying good-byes as though loath to break the sweet fellowships that had been so enjoyed during the day. We are sure each one goes down to her home stronger in heart and wiser in purpose for future work. These meetings make us realize the depth of meaning in the stanza:

"And if our fellowship below
In Jesus be so sweet,
What height of rapture shall we know
When round his throne we meet!"

Como has heartily enjoyed the coming of these enthusiastic, zealous women, and, should they ever come again, they may rest assured of a hearty, loving welcome. The benediction of their presence lingers with us.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. Jas. E. Riddle: "We are having fine prayer meetings every week. Twenty have been added to the church, mostly on profession of faith."

Rev. J. A. Bowen, Macon, Miss., April 11: "We are in the second week of our meeting. The church is revived, backsliders reclaimed, and some sinners converted. We are rejoiced at the deep impression made upon the town. Revs. T. B. Malone and L. M. Broyles, of our Conference, are doing the preaching. Our people love these brethren for the glorious work they have done for us. We have just completed the organization of one of the best Epworth Leagues in the Conference. Bro. C. B. Ames is president; Bro. Frank W. Foot, secretary. Other officers will be elected this week. All the indications point to a successful year."

Rev. G. A. Gnice: "This is our second year on the Hermanville charge, and the time has been very pleasant to us. We have many good and kind people here, and some who are neither. Our finances are somewhat behind; but we don't expect them to be that way when the end comes. We are buying a parsonage here, and it is one of the best in the district. The first two payments have been made, and the third one nearly all paid; and it would have been all paid, but we have some of that class here who always cry, 'We can't!' If we could just induce them to employ the breath and energy they use in crying, 'We can't,' to help do the work, we would have no trouble to make the other payments. But the faithful ones are at work in earnest, and they keep things moving on. The good ladies are very careful to see that the preacher's home is supplied with necessary comforts. Just a few days ago a lady sent in a beautiful quilt which she had made herself. Besides, she has raised about thirteen dollars in cash for the parsonage; and she is not the only one that has done well. But things are not all smooth. We have some hard places."

Rev. E. P. Craddock, Starkville, Miss., April 9: "The Bishop read us out for Starkville circuit at the last Conference. Our predecessor told us the parsonage had no furniture. We came and found that a few good ladies had gotten some furniture. We went to work to get all the furniture needed, and did so, and were just feeling at home, with a month's provisions ahead, when one morning we found the parsonage on fire, caught from a defective flue. The alarm was given, and the people came from every quarter, and did good work in helping us save our effects. The parsonage burned to the ground. We had just insured the house for four hundred dollars. In a few hours the people had rented us a good house for one month and given my wife a little purse. By invitation, we stopped with Capt. Scales for three or four days. They were exceedingly kind to us. I find a real friend in Bro. Dorman. The Starkville people have been so kind to us. We are now in the new parsonage, worth eight hundred dollars—a real nice little home, painted, papered and furnished, with fruit trees, grape vines, strawberry bed, front yard, back yard, horse and cow lot and a real nice garden. Ever and anon donations come to the parsonage in the shape of provisions, such as hams, corn, etc. One man, not a Methodist, gave us 15 bushels corn, 100 bin fodder, 1 bin hay, 1 shote, three Wyandotte chickens, and several loads of wood, cut, ready for use. Not long ago at preaching hour the Holy Ghost came upon the congregation, and we had an old-fashioned time, and closed with an experience meeting. Our congregations are increasing. Pray for us."

Rev. W. L. Anderson, P. C., Ellzey, Miss., April 9: "This is our first year in this work—in fact, in the 'regular harness.' We received no pounding, but our people have dealt kindly with us. And we are encouraged to believe we have made the happy move of our life, and that Bishop Keener must have known all the 'facts'—naturally or supernaturally—in making this appointment. We have received but little money on quarterage; but, like our excellent pastor at Black Hawk, misery loves comfort in the fact that we need but little money in these 'inland districts.' Provisions are brought to our door, and 'that's enough for me. True, there are many inconveniences, but 'faith worketh patience,' and even if we are called to remain here the limited term, we have decided 'therewith to be content.' Our predecessor did efficient work here, and 'his works do follow him.' May he be as useful and well beloved at Starkville circuit as here. The second Quarterly Conference is now history, and we have begun our third quarter much encouraged. Bro. Burroughs, our presiding elder, left his impress on all who heard him preach those two inspiring sermons. Sunday-schools are taking on new life with the cessation of atmospheric hostilities, and we are laying the foundation just now for a successful 'Children's Day.' We feel confident of full collections this Fall; but please 'don't bother us now.' Our parsonage is incomplete, and we are trying to raise the means to finish it. Have raised only about $20 yet, cash and subscription. The flock over here is poor in the improved facilities of modern civilization and in money, but 'rich in faith,' frugal, industrious, and intelligent. Pray for us, that we may be a faithful under-shepherd to lead them to conquest and victory through Christ."

Rev. W. H. Sanders, P. C., Duncan and Comanche charge, North Mississippi Conference: 'On Wednesday night, March 27, I commenced a meeting at Duncan, preaching twice a day, and getting the choir organized and trained. Saturday, Bro. H. P. Crowe, of Cleveland, came to my assistance. The meeting grew in interest from day to day, and soon the people began to be convicted and converted, and by Sunday night, April 7, nearly everybody in the little town was converted and a member of the church. For a town of its size Duncan can not be surpassed anywhere for intelligence, and the work done will last. On Sunday, the last day of the meeting, at 11 A. M., we took a collection, by subscription, to build a church, and raised $619—one-third to be paid at once, one-third to be paid when the lumber is put on the ground, and one-third when the house is completed. We also had a lot given, 100x100 feet, to put the house on, by one of the liberal-hearted women of the town. One man gave $200 on the condition that the house should cost $1,000 when finished, and all of the people gave liberally of their means; and we will soon have a church in Duncan and a good live, active membership. There were 20 accessions to the church, and more to join at my next appointment there. We appointed a Building Committee, and will push the house to completion as early as possible, and will appoint the trustees at the next Quarterly Conference. We also organized a Ladies' Aid Society, and they will help raise funds for the church. On Sunday night, at the last service, several of the best men of the town and country joined, and Sam Lee, a Chinaman, was baptized and received into the church. Sam had an intelligent idea of God as the creator and preserver of all things, of Christ as the Son of God and the Savior of man, of faith, repentance and forgiveness. He said he had been a sinner, but that he felt that God had forgiven his sins, and that he was determined to live a Christian. Miss Beulah Pender, of Denison, Texas, rendered us much help at the organ, and the music was splendid. The pastor and people will long remember and feel under many obligations to her for her kind assistance. Bro. Crowe was in good health, in fine spirits and full of preaching, and from the start people were convicted and converted. The pastor and people will give Bro. Crowe a hearty welcome whenever he can come again. For nearly three years I have been a gospel tramp, with only one house to preach in which belongs to the Lord, but now hope springs up from one end of the line to the other, and by Conference we hope to have three new houses completed and on the way to completion. God is blessing this delta this year, and preachers and presiding elder are expecting to carry up the best reports this Fall in the history of the country. We all are pushing things to the front. Our district is well manned with Rev. J. A. Randolph, a young, active, vigorous man at the helm as presiding elder, and a set of young, active pastors. This district is coming to the front."

WHITE CASTLE, LA.,

We are in the midst of a good revival here. About ten days ago, upon invitation of the White Castle brethren and myself, Rev. D. C. Rawls arrived with his tent, and Bro. George Wheeler, of New Orleans, as his singer. They have held the "fort," and made some conquests. This is a hard place, and revivals are rare here. But the prospect is good now. Several are candidates for church membership, and I think more will follow. We are having people attend the tent services who never were inside a Protestant Church before.

Bro. Rawls preaches a clear gospel, uncompromising, appealing to the hearer's love of truth and common honesty. He burns and blisters, but they come again, pleased with his style. We go on till next Sunday. Our Methodist flock are being quickened, and I hope to build here in this thriving inmber town a church this year. Pray for us. H. S. JOHNS.

REV. J. R. ROY.

In the ADVOCATE, of March 21, 1895, Bro. Roy criticised my statement made in the ADVOCATE, of March 7. The brother totally misapprehended the intention of the clause to which he refers. I want it thoroughly understood, my only reason for making a reply to such a trivial thing is to vindicate my moral character, which the brother involved by accusing me of having made false statements.

He does not quote his own statement correctly. Please compare the ADVOCATE, of Jan. 17, with March 21. The word "very" is left out. He says in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, of Jan. 17: "We are now in the parsonage, very comfortably situated." Any sane man would infer from the above statement that the parsonage in Columbia was in pretty fair condition. In his next sentence he says: "It is in great need of repairs." The English language is quite flexible, but that is twisting it a little too much. The latter statement contradicts the first. He did it, and not I. He says in the ADVOCATE, of March 21, that he had reference to no particular person or place. When I first read his article I believed that he had reference to the Columbia parsonage, and I believe so still. Again he says: "It seems to me if his statement be true, that he got the shot intended for the other." My impression about the above statement is that he intended to hit some one, and that one was his predecessor. He continues his erroneous assertions by saying: "I would say just here I did not mean anyone." He says it was intended for one, and then states that it was not. He did it, and not I. The four quotations I have made are sufficient to prove that he was undoubtedly writing something, and yet he was not. My advice to the brother is to study his dictionary in order to find out the meaning of words; also the English grammar, to learn the relation that one word bears to another.

The brother shall have credit for all he did here last year. He secured a deed to the parsonage on Nov. 27, 1894. I walked to White Hall, this morning, and procured a deed for a lot of land on which to build Marine Church. I am happy over having accomplished that much for the Master's cause. The improvements that he refers to probably was the small rock that he had piled up in the front room.

Bro. Roy also accused me of not exhibiting the spirit of Christ in my "glass-house" statement. I wonder what kind of a spirit he thinks he exhibited? Surely, it was not that of our blessed Lord.

I hope that when Bro. Roy reads his pieces over, and considers them carefully and prayerfully, he will see that he made some heavy charges against me. W. T. WOODWARD.

Blood Poisoning

Mrs. Mary E. O'Fallon, a very intelligent nurse of Piqua, Ohio, was poisoned while assisting physicians at an autopsy 5 years ago, and soon terrible ulcers broke out on her head, arms, tongue and throat. Her hair all came out. She weighed but 78 lbs., and saw no prospect of help. At last she began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and at once improved; could soon get out of bed and walk. She says, "I was cured by

This may seem surprising, but we mean what we say. The machine which we handle is "The Favorite High Arm Singer," the manufacturer's catalogue price of which is $40. Read the following description taken from the manufacturer's catalogue, and then read our offer.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer Sewing Machine, as you will perceive, is very attractive in appearance, the cut being an exact representation. It is strongly constructed from the best grades of material produced, and its adjustment perfect; also combines simplicity, durability and workmanship of the highest order; and in point of finish, light-running and sewing qualities, is unsurpassed. In addition to the above-mentioned qualities, our Favorite Improved High Arm Singer has the latest, most useful and practical improvements, such as a perfect Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, positive Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self-Setting Needle, Tension Liberator and Loose Pulley, and is without any exception the best machine ever produced for the money.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer is the only Singer style machine using a Cylinder Shuttle. The bed of machine being sunk flush with table and nicely hinged so it can be turned backed to admit of oiling and cleaning under works without the least inconvenience.

"Automatic Bobbin Winder, used on the Favorite Improved High Arm Singer, is positive in its operation, and works to perfection, winding the thread on bobbin as evenly as thread is wound on a spool.

"Flat Tension Spring. Every lady who has used machines with coil tension spring, knows the value of having a machine with flat tension, 'same as used on the Favorite Improved High Arm Singer,' for the reason that when tension is once set it always remains the same and does not alter while machine is in operation, requiring operator to stop every little while and re-adjust same.

Lowly Service.

Men are naturally inclined to be hero worshipers; and so absorbed do they often become in contemplating the achievements of genius, that the part played in life's drama by obscure toilers is scarcely given a thought. The world could not get along without men of talent and genius. It must have them to lead its armies, to invent its machines, to direct its government, to write its books, to inspire with their oratory. Neither can it do without the humble toilers, who though they die "unhonored and unsung," yet fulfill a mission no less important. The complex organism we call civilization is but the combined product of manifold human forces.

In truth, the major part of the work done in the world is performed by the lowly and the unknown. Napoleon planned great campaigns and won famous victories; but his successes were made possible only by the unwavering fidelity and courage of the private soldiers who composed the vast armies with which he maneuvred. Capitalists may project long lines of railroad and plan great manufacturing enterprises, but for the execution of these plans they must depend upon the faithful labor of countless thousands of obscure workmen.

Upon the faithful performance of small duties what weighty issues often hang! The driving of a spike may seem a matter of little moment; but if it should be carelessly driven, a terrible railroad wreck may result, and many precious human lives may be sacrified. Passengers crossing the briny deep seldom think of the stokers, who, far down below deck, amid the heat and grime, replenish the furnace fires, so that the mighty vessel may keep on her course through storm and through calm. Those who fill obscure places are often tempted to slight their work because it seems unimportant and unappreciated. The desire of approbation in what we do is natural; and when there is none to observe or approve, it is hard to labor as carefully as at other times. But it is by doing our work well at all times and under all circumstances that we show ourselves to be true men, "workmen that need not to be ashamed." None should feel that his work is useless, for each can contribute something to the world's advancement. The teaching of our blessed Christianity is that God has a place for each of us to fill. If the propagation of the gospel depended entirely upon the efforts of the wise and the gifts of the rich, how the work would languish!

What encouragement to the Christian there is in the thought that God observes all we do, and is pleased with the lowliest service, if performed from a pure motive. "He who gives only a cup of cold water in the name of a disciple shall not lose his reward." The gift of the poor widow who cast her all into the treasury will be had in everlasting remembrance. The poet sings:

"If done to obey thy laws,
E'en servile labors shine;
Hallowed is toil, if this the cause,
The meanest work divine."

A kind word costs nothing, but for want of it some unfortunate may become the victim of despair. "A word fitly spoken," as Solomon says, "is like apples of gold in pictures of silver." A little help rendered at a critical moment in a man's business career may save him from bankruptcy. A friendly warning to an erring brother may prove the turning point of his life, and save a soul from death. True, we seldom know when these crises come; but for this very reason we should be the more careful to let no opportunity of doing good pass unimproved—"Cast thy bread upon the waters: for thou shalt find it after many days." If each Christian could only realize the importance of doing what he can for Christ, what rapid strides Christianity would make in the world! Paul says to the church: "Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular." "The eye can not say unto the hand, I have no need of thee: nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of you. Nay, much more, those members of the body which seem to be more feeble are necessary."

The Christian who agonizes in secret for God's blessing to rest upon his pastor in the preaching of the Word assists as greatly in the service as does the gifted vocalist, the music of whose voice thrills the hearts of the great congregation. The mother who in the obscurity of the home instructs her sons and daughters in the things of God, and prepares them for useful and honored careers, does as grand a work as another who lectures from time to time to vast audiences. Biography abounds with examples of distinguished men who owed their greatness to a mother's training or to a father's faithfulness. We never know where an influence we set in motion will end. Acts seemingly insignificant are often of the greatest moment. Dr. Chas. Taylor, the first missionary from our Southern Methodist Church to China, when in his teens clerked for a New York merchant, who, while a Methodist revival was in progress in a certain part of the city, encouraged young Taylor to attend it, the result being that he was happily converted. Had it not been for the kindly interest shown him by this merchant, who knows but that his noble service might have been lost to the cause of Christ?

It is worthy of remark that in nearly every instance the leaders in great moral and religious reforms have been men who had no thought of achieving greatness, or of heading such movements. Though obscure and uninfluential, they dared to speak out against existing evils, and did what they could to stem the mighty tide of iniquity. Luther had no idea when he protested against the corruption of the Romish Church that Europe would be shaken from centre to circumference. John Wesley, when he first began preaching, had no thought of founding a new denomination. Those who deliberately plan to start great movements usually fail ignominiously.

What the church needs more than anything else is men and women so fully consecrated that they will work anywhere and everywhere. "Suppose," says Mr. Spurgeon, "the mole should cry, 'How I could have honored the Creator if I had been allowed to fly!' or the fish say, 'How I would display the wisdom of God if I could mount a tree like a bird!' How foolish! We admire the mole in its tunnels and castles, and the fish cutting the waves with agile fin; but out of these spheres they would be ridiculous. Providence appoints our surroundings so that our position is best for us." Unfortunately, however, "the human class," as Dr. Holmes wisely remarks, "is divided into two classes, those who go ahead and do something, and those who sit still and inquire, 'Why wasn't it done the other way?'"

Let Wesley's words, "All at work, and always at work," be the rallying cry of the church all along the line.

Two Visitors.

Dr. S. A. Steele, editor of the Epworth Era, and Miss Tucker, the celebrated Nashville mission worker, spent last Sabbath in New Orleans on their return from the Texas Epworth League Convention. Dr. Steele filled the pulpit of Carondelet at eleven A. M. greatly to the delight and edification of the congregation.

Last Sunday happened to be the time for the forty-eighth annual meeting of the Methodist Sunday-school Union of New Orleans. The meeting was held at Carondelet in the afternoon. The prepared programme was so changed as to make room for Dr. Steele. His address was necessarily quite brief, but was exceedingly appropriate, and was much enjoyed. New Orleans Methodism will give the Doctor a royal welcome whenever he can come again.

At night Miss Tucker addressed a large audience at Rayne Memorial. Her address was thoroughly practical and intensely interesting, and we are sure will result in much good. Just such work as she and her sister are doing in Nashville is needed in every city in the land, and any city church that is not entirely dead would be vastly benefited by bearing her account of the glorious work that is going on in Nashville under the auspices of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society. We know something about the origination of that society. We voted most heartily for the law creating it, believing that it would utilize a vast amount of unused talent and would achieve spiritual results of vast magnitude and importance. Our expectations have not been disappointed. Indeed, the results have been larger than we expected at so early a day. We record it as our deliberate judgment that this society is destined to be in the near future a tower of strength to our Zion.

The Epworth League Convention.

On this page will be found a brief note concerning the Texas Epworth League Convention, recently held in Houston. That note was based upon information gleaned from the secular press. Since that note was in the hands of the printer we have seen Dr. Steele, just from the convention. From him we learn that the dispatches in the secular papers fall far below the reality as to the magnitude of the convention and the enthusiasm it created. There were eleven hundred delegates and ten thousand visitors from abroad. Shearn Church was entirely to small two accommodate the crowd, and so the Opera House was secured. Even this, with its seating capacity of three thousand, was utterly inadequate, so that it was necessary part of the time to hold overflow meetings at Shearn Church. The occasion was signalized by a baptism of power from on high. The testimony meetings were seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. Everybody seemed anxious to speak. The tide of religious feeling rose high. From all parts of the vast auditorium shouts and hallelujahs were heard. Such singing has rarely been heard outside of an old-time Methodist camp meeting. The singing was not confined to the church and opera house. The street cars were moving masses of melody. Vast processions marched along the streets making the welkin ring with the jubilant notes of holy song. The clerk left his yardstick, the bookkeeper his pen, and the editor his type writer, and rushed to the front to see what was the matter. Had we the space we would say more concerning the enthusiasm, the achievements and the plans of this gathering of the forces of young Methodism in our sister State.

What we want to do, however, in this brief note is to make an appeal to every pastor in Mississippi to resolve that he will leave no stone unturned to make the Grenada convention as decided a success as that at Houston. There is, perhaps, not a single pastor in Mississippi Methodism who does not want an increase of spiritual power in his flock. Now, brother, if that is your desire, see to it that your charge is represented at Grenada. If you have no League, organize one. If we were in the pastorate at this time, we would let everything else go until we got a League organized, and we would see to it that that League was represented at Grenada by somebody who has a capacity for imbibing and imparting enthusiasm.

Brethren of the pastorate, allow us to be importunate. Don't be a back number, which you will be, if you don't fall into this Epworth League procession. As a watchman upon the walls, with facilities for widely extended observation, we tell you plainly that this Epworth League movement is going to be in the near future the movement of Southern Methodism.

The Oriental War.

The China-Japan war has ended, having lasted a little more than nine months. Although China entered the conflict with an army and navy almost incredibly greater than that of her foe, the war has been from start to finish an unbroken series of brilliant victories for Japan both on sea and land. The net results to Japan are the independence of Corea (the object originally aimed at), the possession of a large number of islands, including Formosa, the possession of a large part of the Liao Tong Peninsula, a war indemnity of one hundred and fifty millions of dollars, and the throwing open of China to Japanese commerce. The prestige which Japan has acquired during this brief war has hardly a parallel in the annals of the nations. We believe that the war will ultimately inure to the benefit of Christianity.

Our Indian Mission.

We invite attention to the communication of Rev. A. D. Miller on our fifth page. The worthiness of the cause he represents is unquestioned. That we are under less obligation to give the gospel to the aborigines of America, whom we have deprived of the priceless heritage bequeathed them by their fathers, than to the heathen on distant shores will not be claimed by any lover of the Lord Jesus. We began well in this work a few years ago. Have we grown "weary in well-doing"? Are we ready to relinquish the advantages we have already gained, and let Christians of another communion come in and take our crown? Does anyone seriously think of abandoning that important mission field? If not, then there should be at once a generous response to Bro. Miller's appeal. The facts which he states speak for themselves.

A New Book.

STUDIES IN ORIENTAL SOCIAL LIFE; AND GLEANS FROM THE EAST ON THE SACRED PAGE. By H. Clay Trumbull. Richly bound in cloth. 400 pages. 8¾x6 inches. Price $2.50. John D. Wattles & Co., Philadelphia.

This splendid volume from the pen of Dr. Trumbull, the editor of The Sunday-school Times, had its origin in a series of lectures delivered before the Archæological Association of the Pennsylvania University. The author describes in a charming and life-like way many of the customs and peculiarities of Eastern nations, especially of the inhabitants, both ancient and modern, of Egypt, Palestine, and Arabia. The facts and incidents given in connection with the discussion of weddings, hospitality, funerals and mourning, the Oriental idea of "father," the calls for healing in the East, and many other subjects of equal interest, serve to throw a flood of light upon the biblical narrative. This book, as the author says, is not a mere record of travel, nor a miscellaneous collection of illustrative facts; but is a systematic treatment of certain phases of Eastern life, illuminated by personal experiences. Bible students will find this volume very helpful. It will interest readers of all classes. The volume is adorned by a number of fine illustrations.

The latest victim of the "woman's edition" fad is the Alabama Advocate. It came out last week greatly increased in size and improved in appearance, owing to the use of a better quality of paper and the insertion of several woodcuts. The edition was a creditable one. We congratulate Dr. Armstrong upon his success.

A number of laymen of the Protestant Episcopal Church in St. Louis have formed an organization called the Protestant Episcopal Church Association, the object of which is to oppose ritualism. The originators of the movement are said to be men of great prominence in business and professional life. Whether the organization is to be merely local in its operations, or whether it is to become general, we are not informed.

Carondelet Street Church has taken a new departure by inaugurating a movement in the interest of sociability. A meeting is to be held once a month at some residence tendered for the purpose. The first meeting was held last week at the residence of Mrs. W. W. Carre, and was a decided success. It was largely attended and was much enjoyed. We congratulate Bro. Pierce and his flock upon this auspicious beginning. Sociability is frequently too little regarded in the ecclesiastical life of large cities.

The new Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has added his testimony to the value of missions as judged from the standpoint of high Indian officials. "I make bold to say that if missions did not exist, it would be our duty to invent them." This is what he said by the famous men who built up the administration of the Punjab, and who, when it was annexed in 1849, wrote home to the Church Missionary Society for a supply of missionaries as a part of the necessary equipment of the province.—Missionary Review of the World.

The Texas State Convention of the Epworth League, held in Houston last week, had an attendance of one thousand delegates, besides several hundred visitors. The number of Leagues in the State is three hundred and seventy, having an aggregate membership of more than fifteen thousand. The number of Leagues reporting work done in the department of "Charities and Help" is twenty-four. The convention pledged itself to uncompromising warfare against the liquor traffic. It also resolved to put three new missionaries in the foreign field and sustain them there two years.

The stated meeting of the Board of Managers of the American Bible Society was held at the Bible House on Thursday, April 4, 1895. Mr. Loomis reported from Yokohama that up to the nineteenth of February 70 211 separate gospels and 1 449 New Testaments had been distributed among the soldiers of the Japanese army. The circulation of Scriptures in China during 1894 by the American Bible Society amounted to 304 715 volumes, a greater number than ever before. The total issues from the Bible House during the year ending March 31, not including those issued in foreign lands, were 947[illegible] volumes.

The forty-eighth annual meeting of the New Orleans Methodist Sunday-school Union was held at Carondelet Street Church last Sabbath afternoon. As usual, there was an immense audience. The programme was varied and very interesting. The service of song was spirited and delightful. The recitations by the juveniles selected to represent the different schools were thoroughly enjoyable. The reports from the schools made a most gratifying showing as to the character of the work done during the year. The banner for the best general average was given to Felicity Street Sunday-school. Col. David Zable, superintendent.

The Protestant Episcopal clergymen and laity of New York and Brooklyn do not intend to have it understood that Drs. Rainsford and Rylands are representatives of the church in holding their peculiar views. They met last week, passed ringing resolutions opposing the Sunday opening of saloons and voted to request Bishop Potter to go to Albany and represent them at legislative hearings. To Dr. Rainsford's plea that the poor man must have his club—the saloon—to resort to on Sunday, if the rich man is to be allowed to have his club, Rev. Dr. W. R. Huntington replies pertinently that "there is little proof that the rich man's club has such an elevating influence that any churchman should consider it a hardship that it should be closed on Sunday too."—Index.

The Tohoupitoulas Mission, carried on under the auspices of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society of the New Orleans district, is doing a noble work. The Sunday-school, which has been in operation for about three years, has done much good and has laid a broad foundation for other gospel work. The revival services of the last two weeks have resulted in many conversions. It has been decided by the powers that be to proceed at an early day to the organization of a church at that point. At the meeting on last Wednesday night Dr. Sawyer stated this fact and called for the names of applicants. Eleven presented themselves that night. Other applications have been made since, so that the number of applicants now ready to be received is about fifteen. It should be stated in this connection that our churches in the vicinity have been receiving members occasionally as a result of the work of this mission for some time past. Our sisters of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society have cause to rejoice as they behold the fruits of their labors. The work of the Lord has prospered in their hands.

Our Bible Offer.

Don't fail to read our Bible offer. Remember that it has all the helps of the Oxford Bible and the additional feature of giving the correct pronunciation of every proper name just where it occurs in the book. Moreover, we are selling it to our subscribers at a lower rate than any paper or anybody else has ever done. The regular retail price of the work is $3 15. Some papers have had a run on it at $1 95. Our subscribers can get on conditions named in our offer for $1.85. This offer may not last long; therefore, don't delay.

Indian Mission.

I have made two or three as strong appeals through the ADVOCATE for the Indian Mission in Mississippi as I was capable of making, and as strong as it ought to be necessary to make. But for some reason, I know not what, I have failed up to the present to get more than two or three responses. Where are the friends of the Indian Mission? And what is the matter with them that they do not respond as in former years? Surely they have not forgotten us. Surely it is only negligence. So I am still waiting, hoping and praying that the people will at an early day "come up to the help of the Lord" and us in this very important work. Surely no one is discouraged. Just think of the good accomplished. We began with everything against us. The Indians were prejudiced against us and did not want us. Then we did not understand their language. We had not a foot of land and no place to lay our head or preach to them. And yet in three short years, with two missionaries, Bro. Cammack and Sister Cammack, we have bought some land, built one nice small church, established two appointments and two Sunday-schools, with a good-sized number of old folks and children studying the Word of God and learning to sing the beautiful songs of Zion. We have also two literary schools taught by Bro. Cammack four months each per year. And last, but not least, about fifty have joined the church, and we hope have been converted, and are good and faithful man licensed to preach—Bro. Jim Johnston. Now, when I think of all these things I am ready to ask, "What hath God wrought?"

All with everything against us, we have done that much, what may we not do in the next three years with the advantages we now have, if the friends of the mission will only help with their means? But we must have the money to carry the work forward to success. We owe considerably over one hundred dollars on the land we first bought and the brother has been waiting now nearly three years for his money. Shall we compel him to wait longer? Will the eighty-odd thousand Methodists in Mississippi allow him to wait longer? Three hundred and fifty dollars to raise (amount due at the first), eighty thousand to pay it; only about one-half paid after three years. And then what is the object of this purchase of land? It is for a starting-point, or foundation, for a mission, for the salvation of a long-neglected people right here in the heart of Mississippi Methodism.

Now, brethren, what shall we do? Shall we compel the vendor to take back his land or to wait indefinitely for money long since due? Several have subscribed on the land, but have not paid. Who will now help us? We also need money very much to pay the salary of our missionary. We have not paid him a cent this year.

May God help us to do our whole duty to this long-neglected people.

Brethren, please send amounts to be sent at once. Send money order on Vicksburg or Phœnix, Miss.; draft or check on Vicksburg or Jackson, Miss. Send to me at Oak Ridge, Warren County, Miss. May I expect something soon?

Your brother in hope of the salvation of the Indians,

A. D. MILLER, Agent.

Oak Ridge, Miss.,

George Bancroft, the eminent historian, at the age of 87, standing near the spot where the Lookout Inn now stands, April 21, 1887, said: "This is the grandest view I ever saw. In all my travels I have never seen any scene to excel it in sublime grandeur."

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. Jones was experimenting, he accidentally made a Preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures nightsweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1039 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

To Pastors.

It is greatly desirable that pastoral reports should be published without delay. This can be done if the brethren will give due attention to brevity. If they will write their reports on a postal card, or of a length which could go on a postal card, we will promise that there shall be very little delay. Hereafter we shall give preference to postal card reports.

Notice.

To the Members of the North Mississippi Conference—

BRETHREN: At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Sunday-school Board, held at Winona, Miss., March 26, 1895, I was appointed to write a word of exhortation to you in regard to Children's Day. In Discipline (page 107, ¶ 348) the third Sunday in May, or as near thereto as practicable, shall be observed as Children's Day throughout our church with appropriate services, and on that day a collection shall be taken for the aid of needy Sunday-schools in our Conference, and for education of the poor.

I have been told that some of our preachers do not observe this day. We desire that every pastor in our Conference comply with the law in this matter. Get ready for it. Get the programs gotten up for this purpose. You can get them of Rev. G. W. Bachman, our Sunday-school agent at Kosciusko, Miss., free by writing to him for them. Get all the people to come that you can. Then resolve that you all be children on that day—at least, when the collection is being taken. I learn from our agent that there are many calls being made now for Sunday-school papers by poor people—those who want Sunday-school papers, but not able to buy them; and a part of this money goes to buy Sunday-school papers for those in heathen lands.

Parents, encourage your children in this great work by giving them some little jobs of work, and pay them for it that they may feel that they have made the money for this cause. Then go with them on that day; take part in the services; put in your mite with theirs, and let them see that you are interested in their part of church work.

Brethren, let no one fail to observe Children's Day in our Conference this year. Let us, preachers and people, make a grand move along the line of Sunday-school work this year. The Sunday-school Board has planned for a Sunday-school District Conference at all the District Conferences, and we expect one of the Board to be present in these meetings in the interest of Sunday-schools in our Conference. We want you everyone to help us. We hope to see an interest in Sunday-school work such as we have never had. A great forward movement, is our motto.

May I not call upon all church members to become enlisted in this work? Don't stay at home, and say, Go; but fall in line, and say, Come, follow us as we follow Christ. So mote it be.

Mass Meeting and Rally.

God willing, there is to be at 7:30 P. M., Tuesday, May 7, at Carondelet Street Church, a grand mass meeting and rally of our city Methodists. It is proposed to organize, under the provisions of the Discipline as enacted by the last General Conference, for aggressive and persistent city mission work. It would be difficult to find in the bounds of Southern Methodism a field whiter "unto the harvest" than is New Orleans to-day. That fact invites and demands that we bestir ourselves and go out after the unsaved and unchurched multitudes. The membership of our city churches is 2 355.

Fellow-Methodists, let us with one accord be at Carondelet on the night of May 7, determined, by God's help, to do our duty in this matter. Then, for the asking God will endue us with power for this special work, and great and glorious will be the results of our labors, in his name and his strength, in behalf of the spiritually neglected masses of our population. Remember—Tuesday night, May 7, 1895, is the set time for Methodists to mass and rally at Carondelet Church.

Work in Japan.

At the semi-annual meeting of the Japan Mission of the M. E. Church, South, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we respectfully request the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions to open missionary work in Japan, as soon as such a course seems to them proper or possible.

Kobe, Japan, January, 1895.

Wesson, Miss.

Drs. Carradine and Rushart came April 10, and remained till April 20. During the time of their labors there were 50 conversions and reclamations and 120 entire sanctifications. The whole town was stirred as never before. Not only Methodists, but also Presbyterians, Baptists and Protestant Episcopalians entered into the blessed experience, and now rejoice in heart purity and call this new experience "entire sanctification." Last Thursday we organized the "Central Mississippi Holiness Association," with T. L. Mellen, president; D. C. Langford, vice-president; W. T. Griffin, secretary.

T. L. MELLEN, P. C.

Gunnison, Miss.

Rev. J. S. Oakley lectured under the auspices of the Gunnison Epworth League, on April 10, to a large audience. It was heartily enjoyed by everybody. The League is a great success here. The members throw themselves into the hands of the pastor, and many of them are need of the Lord daily. The result is, the church is prospering as never before.

R. H. B. GLADNEY.

Jeanerette, La.

The work is building up at this point. Revival fire is burning. Congregations good—even large. Conversions and accessions. Bro. Armstrong assisting. We begin on the twenty-eighth, and protract a meeting some ten days. Let the readers of the ADVOCATE pray the Lord to give us converting and sanctifying power. We so much need a sweeping revival at this place.

R. M. BLOCKER.

The first step in the cultivation of the spirit of missionary work in the churches is the dissemination of missionary news, facts and all forms of missionary intelligence, that the missionary spirit may be aroused, vivified, fostered, nourished and built up by what it feeds upon. Give all the news of all the peoples of all the lands; give it in trumpet tones; send it everywhere on all winds, and let the breezes be laden with it; and as the ears shall hear, the minds shall understand, the hearts shall sympathize, and the hands shall do the rest.—Gospel in All Lands.

A recent issue of the Nashville Advocate has this to say concerning Holman's Self-Pronouncing Bible, which we are offering to our subscribers at a marvelously low rate:

It has been commended in the most unqualified terms by Bishops, college presidents, pastors, teachers, and Sunday-school workers. As far as we can see the "helps" which it offers are quite as trustworthy and as full as those which are found in the Oxford and the International Bibles. One excellence it possesses by itself. The pronunciation of every proper name is indicated in the text, so as to do away entirely with the necessity of a reference to an appendix. This feature will be especially appreciated by that large class of intelligent people who have not studied the original languages of the Bible, and hence often find themselves at a loss in pronouncing a proper name.

BY REV. HENRY H. AKENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE HISTORY OF EVIL.
(Job vi, 1-4; vii, 1-11.)

Sin and suffering are twins. Rarely that human suffering is a punishment for sin; more frequently it is simply the consequence of same. Sin the seed; suffering the harvest. The seed not always of our own sowing. Our first parents had to weep over the murder of one of their sons. None ever escaped the ills of life. In enumerating his various ills, the consequence of the moral disorder among the human race—i. e., sin—the patriarch speaks (Job vii, 6) of the manifest vanity of life as a weaver's shuttle. An expressive portraiture.

1. Life's warp is of divine appointment.

(1) Our physical, intellectual and moral make-up and predisposition are heritage. No merit or demerit of our own.

(2) The same is true of our family relation. If ancestry and relatives are of high or low, good or bad standing in society. Not a matter of our choice.

(3) Our early environments, too, are not subject to our volition. Our training, schooling, etc., determined by others.

2. Though life's warp is of God, the woof of same is matter of our individual responsibility. Life is, after all, what we make it.

(1) We may enjoy the best opportunities of school or shop; profiolency will depend on our diligence. The sluggard will fail, notwithstanding greatest advantages.

(2) We may inherit a pecuniary competency. If we are not industrious and frugal, the probability is that we will die in the poor-house.

(3) Parents may be pious, may have sent us to Sunday-school and church. If we do not individually repent of our sins and seek conversion, unbelief and eternal darkness are our own woof.

(4) Life's warp may be discouraging. Parents wicked, worldly, of low social standing, of ill repute, poor. Individual piety, skill, diligence, integrity will furnish a woof which will vastly increase the value of the fabric—will outgrow our antecedents in every respect.

3. Life is brief. Rapidly, rapidly the shuttle hurries through the open threads of the warp. Our days are but few.

(1) Time and tide wait for no man.

"There is a tide in the affairs of men
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune."

(2) Time, like a river, speeds on. A river, fructifying the valley, or spreading pestilential miasma.

"Oh! cease the present time.
You never will,
With water once passed by,
Impel a mill."

(3) The rapidity of life teaches speedy termination. What in life we have sown, that we shall reap.

THREE OLD SAWS.

BY LUCY LARCOM.

If the world seems cold to you,
Kindle fires to warm it!
Let their comfort hide from view
Winters that deform it!
Hearts as frozen as your own
To that radiance gather,
You will soon forget to moan,
"Ah, the cheerless weather!"

If the world's a wilderness,
Go build houses in it;
Will it help your loneliness
On the winds to din it?
Raise a hut, however slight,
Weeds and brambles smother,
And to rool and meal invite
Some forlorner brother.

If the world's a vale of tears,
Smile till rainbows span it;
Breathe the love that life endears,
Clear of clouds to fan it.
Of your gladness lend a gleam
Unto souls that shiver:
Show them how dark Sorrow's stream
Blends with Hope's bright river.

Swallowed His Jacket.

Mr. Editor: Seeing in one of Bishop Galloway's interesting and instructive letters from the East a mention of the music-loving lizards of tropical Ceylon, I was reminded of a feat performed by one of the lizard tribes, of which my wife and I were witnesses, at Jackson, La., about two years ago.

There was a family of chameleons which seemed to find a happy home on the wood-pile, and among the branches of a large evergreen passion-vine which clustered over the back door of our room. In Winter I think they crawled within the walls of the house (where we could hear them), getting as near to the fire as they could; in warm weather they disported themselves catching flies and other small insects—lying very still, and then leaping suddenly upon an unsuspecting victim. They were beautiful, velvetly-smooth, slender and graceful creatures, active enough on occasions, leaping some distance from limb to limb, and were quite unlike the rough-backed, stiff-necked, prehensile-tailed pictures of the chameleon presented in some of the cyclopedias.

We did not exactly pet these little animals, but we often watched their cunningly skillful procedures. One day, in the latter part of March, when the southern sun was sending down those beams that seem to add weight to all sorts of clothing, we noticed one of the crimson handkerchief-wavers making some strange motions. He began by wriggling and twisting his hinder parts in a most singular way. He soon released his tail and hind legs from a thin covering of skin, which he caught hold of with his fore-claws, and gradually drew it over his head. This cuticle was of a beautiful silver-gray color, and looked as if it might have suited for a lady's veil had it been large enough. We looked with wonder on the performance. He still continued to contort his body in most indescribable ways, drawing the skin gradually over his head with his fore-feet. He had, in a short time, peeled his entire body, and then, to our amazement, seized the hind end of his jacket with his mouth and began swallowing it by degrees, stuffing it in with his paws, continuing the process with evident gusto until, in a few minutes, he had swallowed all, drawing in the last from the tip of his nose. He then smacked his mouth and winked its eyes with as evident pleasure as if he had just enveloped a full meal of the choicest insects.

After this tale, I wonder if Bishop Galloway doesn't think American lizards are as smart as those of Ceylon?

A young man idle, an old man needy.—Selected.

"Too Poor to Marry."

There are many stout, healthy, matured young men who are not married that ought to be. It is possible, it is true, where there is a disposition to be exceedingly choice about whom they shall marry, that they are celibatists unavoidably, since this is a free country, and a woman has a right to say "Yes" or "No." Sane-like, true men admit this to be the trouble, while more than the majority pompously plead, "Too poor to marry." If the latter is all that is in the way, we are prepared to say that there is nothing at all in the way, and that "Too poor to marry" has been taught to be in the way from false conceptions of marriage. Not a few believe and preach that marriage, on the part of the man especially, means getting some one to care for or to support. It is true, any man who will not care most tenderly for a wife, and support her in every respect the best he can, is not worthy of the name of a man; but this is not the true idea of marriage. The true idea of marriage appears in God's Word concerning Adam, when he said: "And the Lord God said, It is not good that the man should be alone. I will make him an helpmeet for him." (Gen. ii, 18) "Kai eipe Kurios ho Theos on Kalon einai ton anthropon monon. Paiesomen auto Boethon Kat' auton." Literally translated: "And the Lord God said, Not profitable for man to be alone. We should make him a helper for him." So the Bible idea of marriage is that of a helper. No idea concerning this matter is of divine authority except that of the Bible. No parent does justice to his children, or those of his neighbor, when he impresses on them that marriage means getting some one to care for simply. Many a young lady of natural endowments for a good wife has been sadly disappointed, and has lived an unhappy life after marriage, because it was not as she had been taught, a life of idleness and ease.

Now, as respects the plea, "Too poor to marry," Solomon says: "Two are better than one, because they have a good reward for their labor. For if they fall, the one will lift up his fellow; but woe to him that is alone when he falleth, for he hath not another to help him up. Again, if two lie together, then they have heat; but how can one be warm alone? And if one prevail against him two shall withstand him; and a threefold cord is not quickly broken." (Eccl. iv, 9, 10, 11, 12)

Now, young men, if you are poor, get you a good, affectionate wife, and go to work in earnest, and God will bless the work of you and your wife, and your financial condition shall be made better; also your spiritual condition shall be incalculably enhanced. There are no Pauls among you—at least, you do not come forth as such—and, therefore, in order to your financial betterment, and especially your spiritual enhancement, and also that of others, get an affectionate wife, who will share with you in the toils, poverty, afflictions, adversities, disappointments, joys and sorrows of this life. Do what God has ordained you should, and do it quickly, for the night of death is drawing near, and soon you must go the way of all the earth. If you thwart the grand purposes of your creation, you will not only be as a blank in the true history of our race, but you will lose your soul forever. Forget not that no grade or condition of life that is for our good is made impossible to us, and if an impossibility appears, it is due to indolence on our part, or a false conception of things. "Marriage is honorable in all." (Heb. xiii, 4).

The Art of Conversation.

A CHAT BY LUCY ELLIOT KEELER.

The first essentials of good conversation are having something to say and being in earnest. Why did not you talk to Mr. Arnold to-night as you just have to me? He is so famous and so wise that you were afraid of him? Besides, you are diffident by nature? Then conquer nature.

One learns to talk only by talking. Practice is the best of professional educators. Chesterfield, when a boy, resolved not to utter one word, even in common conversation, which should not be the most expressive and the most elegant with which the language could supply him for the purpose; and Dr. Johnson's rule was always to talk as well as you can, no matter what the company. By so doing, that which was an effort at first will become easy. No art, unless it be the art of thought, can be so constantly practised as conversation; its very facility may be in its way, for, excepting again right thinking, good conversation is perhaps the rarest of accomplishments.

The Time to Be Pleasant.

"Mother's cross," said Maggie, coming out into the kitchen, with a pout on her lips.

Her aunt was busy ironing, and she looked up and answered Maggie:

"Then it is the very time for you to be pleasant and helpful. Mother was awake a good deal of the night with the poor baby."

Maggie made no reply. She put on her hat and walked off into the garden. But a new idea went with her—"The very time to be pleasant is when other people are cross."

"True enough," thought she, "that would do the most good. I remember when I was ill last year, I was so nervous that if anyone spoke to me I could hardly help being cross; and mother never got cross or out of patience, but was quite pleasant with me. I ought to pay it back now, and I will."

And she jumped up from the grass on which she had thrown herself, and turned a face full of cheerful resolution toward the room where her mother sat soothing and tending a fretful teething baby.

"Couldn't I take him out to ride in his carriage, mother? It's such a sunny morning," she asked.

"I should be so glad if you would," said her mother.

The hat and coat were brought, and the baby was soon ready for his ride.

"I'll keep him as long as he's good," said Maggie, "and you must lie on the sofa and take a nap while I'm gone. You are looking dreadful tired."

The kind words and the kiss that accompanied them were almost too much for the mother, and her voice trembled as she answered:

"Thank you, dear; it will do me a world of good. My head aches badly this morning."

What a happy heart Maggie's was as she turned the carriage up and down the walk! She resolved to remember and act on her aunt's good words:

"The very time to be helpful and pleasant is when everybody is tired and cross."—The Young Reaper.

Only Once.

We have only once to live; therefore, let us live to some purpose. The day that dawned this morning will never dawn again. The opportunities which it brought with it will never come again, and if we fail to fill it with the service it requires of us, there will be no possibility of returning into it to repair the mischief. The wheels of Time's chariot have ratchets in them, and they move only forward.—William H. Taylor.

Words of Kindliness Only.

What a beautiful tribute was the following paid to Oliver Wendell Holmes by one of his friends: "He dipped his keen-pointed pen often in the honey dew, but never in gall or wormwood. He set the world to laughing and to loving; to laughing at legitimate objects of laughter, and to loving the true, the beautiful, and the good."

Far higher is the office of the teacher who makes admirable men than that of the sculptor or painter who makes admirable imitations of men.

Sunshine and Digestion.

Very intimate relations there are between sunshine and digestion.

Mr. P., one of our merchants, came to see me about his stomach. Dyspepsia was written all over his face, seen in his movements, heard in his voice.

"Doctor, I am played out. I can't digest, I can't work; I must give up."

"Tell me about your diet?"

"That is all right. I have studied the subject, and I know my food is all right."

"How about your exercise?"

"I have a little gymnasium in my store, and exercise an hour every day."

"How about your sleep?"

"Why, doctor, I go to bed every night with the chickens; at any rate, I am always in bed before nine o'clock; I rise by six in the morning, take a bath, a plain breakfast, and go to my counting-room. Once in the forenoon and once in the afternoon I exercise in my gymnasium half an hour, but I am getting worse and worse all the time. Isn't it curious? My wife thinks I must have a cancer in the stomach. Nothing seems to help me; I live the most physiological life, but my digestion grows worse and worse."

"About your counting room; is that light? is it sunny?"

"The store is light enough, but the counting-room is so dark that we have to use gas."

"That's it, Mr. P.; that explains your cancer."

"Of course, you don't mean that; but I suppose it would be better if the counting-room were sunny."

"Mr. P., no vegetable thing, even, can digest in the dark. Try it. Plant a potato in a dark cellar. Surround it with the best soil and give it water. How slender and pale it is. Now open a window in another part of the cellar, and notice how the poor hungry thing will stretch that way.

"Mr. P., have you noticed where grain is growing in an orchard, that the part under the trees is smaller than that outside and away from the trees? And yet the soil under the trees is actually the richer. What is the trouble? The part under the trees does not receive as much sunshine as that away from them.

"Haven't you noticed that the only grapes which become ripe and sweet; that the only peaches that take are those beautiful red cheeks are those on the ontside, exposed to the sun?

"The law is the same in the animal world. It is just as true that the only girls with red cheeks and sweet breath, the only girls who become fully ripe and sweet or those who baptise themselves freely in sunshine.

"You have seen those pale girls in the stores; girls with a bloodless, half-baked sort of face, whose walk, whose voice, whose whole expression are so void of spirit and force? Those girls are in the green state. Look at them. It gives you pain and distress. You feel they can never be what nature intended. So with you, my dear man. Get into the sunshine. It is one of the most powerful stimulants of all the functions of the body we have; a stimulant that leaves no trace of evil behind it like alcohol and many drugs."

My friend promised to try it, and I feel no hesitation in saying he will come back a changed man.—Journal of Hygiene.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

Baked Stuffed Ham.—Wash the ham well, put in a pot of hot water and let it boil three hours. When nearly cold take off the skin, make a rich dressing of one loaf of baker's bread, three large onions chopped fine, one large tablespoonful of butter, one teaspoonful of celery seed, one of ground sage, one of thyme, a plentiful supply of pepper, and salt to taste. Make deep incisions in the ham and fill them with the dressing in such a way that when cut each slice may have some of the dressing in it. Beat two eggs well, mix with cracker crumbs, and spread over the top, then sprinkle over that a little brown sugar. Bake slowly for two and a half or three hours, basting frequently with the juice that runs from the ham.—Good Housekeeping.

When you want a fresh blessing, get on your knees and thank God for the last one.

DAVIS—Died near Cotton Valley, Webster Parish, La., March 16, 1895, Mrs FRANCES A. DAVIS, in the sixty-seventh year of her age. She was born in Lafayette county, Ga., June 7, 1828. Her maiden name was Stinson, and she was married to Jonathan G. Davis, of Troupe county, Ga., July 21 1844, and moved to her late homestead in this State in 1859, where her husband died in 1867. To this union 9 children were born, four of whom survive her, to wit: Mrs. Chas. J. Gray, Mrs. John H. Gilliman, Jno. F. and Chas. B. Davis.

Mrs Davis joined the M. E. Church, South, in her youth, and during her long and useful life she was ever ready to give a reason for the hope she cherished as she "walked by faith" in the crucified One. "The gospel hope, its golden anchor, lodged deep in the veil fixed o'er eternity," and ever seemed to rest trustingly in the sovereign, eternal, unchangeable love of her Savior. The mantle of sadness was thrown o'er the entire community when this noble specimen of Christian womanhood passed away, for the amiableness of her disposition, the friendliness of her demeanor, and her Christian courtesy and kindness, attracted and held the confidence and affection of all who knew her; and no wife, mother or friend were ever more affectionate, self sacrificing, or considerate; and when we call to mind her walk of life, where shone the Christian woman's mind unrivaled, we feel that we touch a chord that vibrates through the souls of friends surviving.

She died suddenly, so peacefully, "like one who lies down to pleasant dreams," that a loving, watchful daughter at her bedside scarcely knew when she breathed her last. Her family, church and community will miss her; but ours is the sweet consolation that, like a fully ripened sheaf, she has been gathered to that heavenly garner prepared for her by Him whom 'twas her delight to serve; and when the books are opened on that day when Christ shall come to gather his jewels, may we, like her, find our names written there!

Mineleo, La.

ROBERTS—Mrs. ROSA E. ROBERTS (nee Ritchie) was born Dec. 7, 1874, and died at Carpenter, Miss., March 19, 1895.

Sister Roberts joined the M. E. Church, South, in August, 1890. She was the oldest child of a large family, and when she was about sixteen years old her mother died, leaving as part of the family a little babe about two months old. She at once took charge of the household and the full care of the infant, and was indeed faithful to the charge; and, although the entire care of the younger children and all the household duties were upon her shoulders, yet she was never heard to murmur or complain. This life was indeed short, but it was full of heroism and self-sacrifice.

On the twenty-fifth day of July, 1894, she was married to Mr. G. E. Roberts, to whom she was a devoted and loving wife. She leaves him broken-hearted and disconsolate, and the prayer of the writer is, that this heavy blow, that has come so soon into his life, may bring him very near to the side of Him who alone can give comfort at such a time; and when the summons may come to him, that he may be prepared to go and meet her where there will be no more parting and no more tears!

G. A. G.

HAMMETT—Bro. O. D. HAMMETT was born in Bowling Green, Ky., Oct. 27, 1805, and died March 17, 1895

He was raised on a farm, but when he reached his majority, and having heard so much of the West and of the frontier life, the farm lost its attraction, and he went West, where he engaged in the mercantile business on the bank of the Illinois river, in the little village, but now the thriving city, of Chillicothe; but having married Miss Mary Borland, a Southern girl, who pined for her native land, he sold out and moved South, and settled near Fayette, Miss., where he raised a large family of seven boys and three girls. His wife having died some twelve years ago, he was left to the kind care of his children who all loved and reverenced him.

Bro Hammett was converted and joined the Methodist Church in early life, and lived a consistent member until he was transferred from the church militant to the church triumphant.

He was a good neighbor, a devoted husband, an affectionate father. He left no words of parting, for he was struck with paralysis, and was unable to speak; but, having lived the life of the righteous, we know where to find him. W. W. SIMMONS.

WATKINS—On Aug. 11, 1894 near Newellton, La., THOMAS HENRY WATKINS ceased to live on earth. He was the son of the late Wm. H. Watkins, D. D., and was born in Woodville, Miss., July 9, 1818. His early life was spent in Natchez and Jefferson county. In 1868 he was happily married to Julia Brown. God sealed this union of hearts with five sons and three daughters, who now console a devoted mother, and with her cherish fond and precious memories of a tenderly devoted father and husband.

He joined the church at an early age. He had an intelligent conception of the doctrines of his church, and heartily embraced the faith his father so eloquently preached.

Though unostentatious, yet at times he manifested a burning zeal and fervent enthusiasm in the cause he humbly and sincerely espoused. He was noted for his sterling integrity of character, generous heart, courageous spirit, loyalty to friendships, tender nature, and faithfulness to every trust.

One whose heart throbs with poignant grief writes: "When I spoke to him of how sick he was, and how anxious I felt, he replied as calmly and quietly as if it was a journey he was going to take. I feel satisfied that he had the 'blessed assurance.'"

May the God of all grace comfort the aching hearts! B. F. JONES.

MORSE—ELIZA B. ADCOCK was born Oct. 22, 1817; married to Rev. Joshua H. Morse, April 11, 1833; was converted and joined the Methodist Church the Summer of 1851, and fell on sleep April 11, 1895, in Kemper county, Miss. On joining the church she gave her heart to God, and ever afterwards lived a life of true devotion.

She reared thirteen children to be grown, two of whom (Revs. J. M. and W. W. Morse) are members of the Mississippi Conference. The rest are living for Christ as taught by "mother."

The writer had the privilege of meeting her about three months before her death, and is able to say that he never, in life, met a sweeter-spirited, more devoted Christian woman than she. On interrogating her about the future, she smiled and said, "There are no clouds of doubt; the way is clear." Thank God we can all render such testimony in the end if we will follow the Savior, in whom she put her whole trust

Sorrowing family and friends, let me commend you to the One who wept at the grave of Lazarus, for "mother" is not dead, but sleepeth, and will be awakened at the final day by His voice saying, "Come forth."

Her pastor. E. E. LANGFORD.

ROBERTSON—Sister SARAH C. ROBERTSON was born in Alabama, December, 1824, and died at her home in DeSoto parish, La., March 3, 1895. She moved with her husband to Louisiana in 1848, and settled near Mansfield, where she lived until her death. She was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in early life, and lived a consistent member until her death.

Sister Robertson loved God and his church. A holy life showed that she was on God's altar. She was always ready to give her time, her money, to support the gospel and help seed it to those who are in darkness.

But she is gone from among us. She went quickly. She had been suffering from heart disease for two years, but she seemed to be as well as usual the night before she died. She sat up, read her Bible and Advocate until about ten o'clock, then retired, feeling very well. But the messenger was waiting. Some time between midnight and day the summons came, and in the morning she was found in bed cold in death.

She leaves seven children and many relatives and friends to mourn her loss; but we mourn not as those who have no hope. All of her children are members of the church, and we would say to the bereaved ones, Be faithful a little while longer, and you will meet mother in the better land. S. S. H.

I was unable to sleep, had night-sweats, and soon became too weak to work. I had several doctors and tried many remedies, but with no improvement. An old friend hearing of my condition recommended Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. It had cured him of a serious lung trouble, and he had great confidence in Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar. Before three bottles had been taken I was up and about, a well man. It saved my life. The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.

Minion, 8vo. Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.

☞ This Engraving represents the exact size.

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING HELPS TO THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Calendar; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. J. M. FROST, D. D., Editor, "Baptist Teacher," Nashville, Tenn.; Secretary, Southern Baptist Sunday-school Board: "You do not need to turn to a dictionary, but right in the text, as you read, the word is pronounced for you. In paper and type and manufacture we do not see how any improvement could be possible."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

REV. PETER STRYKER, D. D., Pastor, Thirty-fourth Street Reformed (Dutch) Church, New York, in the "Illustrated Christian Weekly:" "This is the most complete Bible we have ever seen. In our eye it is perfect. We are proud of it as an American work of art.

"Earthly Footsteps of the Man of Galilee."

A new work of Bishop Vincent, and Dr. J. W. Lee (of St. Louis). A great publishing company is just bringing to light the fruit of much toil and outlay of money. They sent an artist photographer, under the guidance of Dr. Lee, to the Holy Land, there to secure the most exact and perfect pictures of the salient scenes of the earthly life of Christ and the Apostles. We have examined a portion of the work and unhesitatingly pronounce it by far the best thing of its kind ever seen by us. The method of photographic reproduction employed is faultless.

The forthcoming book will contain some four or five hundred of these splendid pictures, 8x10 inches in size. The work will be issued in twenty-four parts, pages 11¼x13¼ inches, with chronological charts and colored maps. Each part will contain sixteen pictures, besides the enchanting pen pictures of these renowned writers. The series will run through twenty-four weeks, one a week, at a regular price of 25 cents each. But the ADVOCATE has made a special arrangement by which it will furnish all its subscribers, new and old, for 10 cents a number. Less than half, but very little more than a third of what you will have to pay if your name is not on our subscription roll. The entire series in this way will cost only $2.40; otherwise it will cost $6. This rule of the publishers of this book is the strictest that only to our subscribers can we make this special offer. For $2 40 you may get what another must pay $6 for if you are a subscriber to the ADVOCATE. Send $2.40, and each of the series will be mailed you as fast as issued. Or ten cents (stamps takes) for one issue—any way you prefer.

The lower floor is largely given up to an out-door patient department, into which will be gathered from the city such material as will furnish ample opportunity for practical instruction in all the departments, both special and general. Without attempting a full description of the building, it may be of interest to add that a large waiting-room has been provided for students, convenient to the offices of the dean and secretary, while on another floor there will be a spacious library, supplied with reference books and journals for the use of students. In this room will also be held the weekly meetings of the Young Men's Christian Association. The special catalogue of this Department will be ready by June 1, and copies may be had by addressing Wm. Williams, Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn.

The faculty will be composed of the following professors: Prof. W. L. Dudley, who for many years has been professor of chemistry in the Academic Department, occupies the chair of chemistry, and is dean of the medical faculty. Profs. Thos. O. Menees, Richard Douglass, and G. C. Savage, who have long been connected with the combined Medical Departments of the University of Nashville and Vanderbilt, have been elected to fill the chairs, respectively, of obstetrics, gynecology, and abdominal surgery, and diseases of the eye, ear, throat, and nose. Profs. Duncan Eve, J. A. Witherspoon, and Ross Dunn, have been elected, respectively, to the chairs of surgery, medicine, materia medica and therapeutics, professorships which they formerly held in the Medical Department of the University of Tennessee. The remaining two professors—Geo. H. Price, physiology, and Owen H. Wilson, anatomy—have received their training as assistants and lecturers in the combined Medical Departments of the University of Nashville and Vanderbilt. Quite a number of lecturers, instructors and assistants have been, and will be, appointed to give special instruction in such subjects as histology, microscopy, bacteriology, hygiene, nervous diseases, medical uses of electricity, dermatology, etc. It is a matter of special interest to note that Dr. W. H. Paine, son of the late Bishop Robert Paine, comes from Aberdeen, Miss., to give special instruction in connection with the chair of obstetrics. The university owns a convenient lot adjoining the Medical Building, on which it hopes, at some future day, to erect a hospital, to be under the exclusive control of her medical faculty. Possibly some friend may show himself who will see the great opportunity that is open to him in this way to serve his own and future generations.

With the establishment of the Medical Department on this new basis, the organization of Vanderbilt University is complete. All our departments are now in our own hands, and we shall try to serve the South better than ever before. In the accomplishment of the great mission of the university, our means are sorely tried. An enlargement of our resources is imperative, and for this we are working, praying, watching, like those that watch for the morning.

ART AND HEART.

BY ELLA WHEELER.

Though critics may bow to art,
And I am its own true lover,
It is not art, but heart,
Which wins the wide world over.

Though smooth be the heartless prayer,
No ear in heaven will mind it,
And the finest phrase falls dead
If there is no feeling behind it.

Though perfect the player's touch,
Little, if any, he sways us,
Unless we feel his heart throb
Through the music he plays us.

Though the poet may spend his life
In skillfully rounding a measure,
Unless he writes from a full, warm heart,
He gives us little pleasure.

So 'tis not the speech which tells,
But the impulse which goes with the saying;
And it is not the words of the prayer,
But the yearning back of the praying.

It is not the artist's skill
Which into our soul comes stealing
With a joy that is almost pain,
But it is the player's feeling.

And it is not the poet's song,
Though sweeter than sweet bells chiming,
Which thrills us through and through,
But the heart which beats under the rhyming.

And, therefore, I say again,
Though I am art's own true lover,
That it is not art, but heart,
Which wins the wide world over.

My First Day in Jerusalem.

BY BISHOP CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

After a comfortable night in our hotel, situated outside the walls on the hill Gosth, of which Jeremiah speaks, we were quite ready on Saturday morning to enter in good earnest upon our Palestine observations, "beginning at Jerusalem." The day was as bright and balmy as an October morning in Mississippi. A day of visions and revelations was before us, and all nature seemed to invest every hour with enchantment. But, in very truth, it must be said that one's enraptured visions in this Holy Land are not the scenes swept by the eye—the narrow, dirty, crowded streets of the city, or the hills of barren rocks that form the ordinary landscape. They are from within—the blessed and thrilling associations and memories awakened by the objects on which we look. Thus every leaf and stone on rocky Olivet is rife me with glory, and in the dry, pebbly valley of Kedron we hear the rippling music of celestial waters.

We left our carriage at the Joppa Gate, for the very good reason that no wheeled vehicle can travel the narrow, precipitous streets of Jerusalem. Only the camel and donkey can transport freight and heavy burdens through the city, and even the ponderous camel is unable to get through certain needle's eyes, inaptly called streets. Immediately inside the Joppa Gate is the Tower of David, still a citadel and the barracks for Turkish soldiers. This stronghold of Zion, with its two massive, square towers, bears evidence of ancient origin. The stones at the base are undoubtedly the very ones that were placed in position under the eye of King David, the part just above having been built during the Justinian period, while that on top is Saracenic. So the citadel of oft-destroyed Jerusalem still stands upon foundations laid by the great son of Jesse, whom God himself called to the kingship of his chosen people. On the opposite side of the narrow street is a large, new building, erected on the actual site of the Tower of Hananeel. When the excavations were being made for a foundation, the old walls of that famous tower were discovered, and on its massive stones the present structure solidly stands.

We walked down David street from Mt. Zion and across what was once the Tyropean Valley, which separates Mt. Zion from Mt. Moriah, and up to the convent of the Sisters of Zion, built on the site of Pilate's Judgment Hall. Near the door of the building outside is a small section of the old "Ecce Homo Arch," and another section is seen within, just over the high altar of the beautiful little chapel. In the opposite end of the chapel is a large stone, supposed to be one of the pedestals on which Pilate sat in proclaiming laws and pronouncing judgments. To it reference is thus made by St. John: "When Pilate, therefore, heard that saying, he brought Jesus forth, and sat down in the judgment-seat in a place that is called the Pavement." It seemed appropriate (if such things are ever desirable) that on the stone so profaned by the vacillating Pilate there should be a life-size figure of the Blessed Virgin holding in her arms the pierced and bleeding body of our crucified Lord. Down in the basement, from seven to ten feet below the street, we saw the stone pavement on which, no doubt, our suffering Savior walked, bearing the cross. Whatever doubts may attach to other alleged places, this is unquestionably a part of the original Via Dolorosa. While reverently standing with uncovered head in that sacred presence, my soul was stirred with an unutterable emotion never experienced before. I could not resist the impulse to kneel down and lay my hands upon the stones on which those holy feet had walked, bearing the sins of the world. There came to me first such a sense of the sinfulness of sin, and then such a vision of saving and sanctifying love, as made the soul wish, like Peter on the Mount of Transfiguration, to build an altar and forever abide.

From the top of that tall building we had a splendid view of the city, and easily located every point of interest—the four hills on which it is built, the numerous gates in the massive walls, the valleys of Gihon, Hinnom, Jehoshaphat, and Kedron; the mountains which entirely girdle the ancient capital, and the various buildings that stand on historic sites. Outside the walls a new city has grown up within the past few years. In 1869 there were only seven houses beyond the walls; now the population exceeds that within the gates, and the buildings are larger and more modern. We then descended, and beginning at the place of condemnation, walked reverently the whole length of the Via Dolorosa to the door of the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, stopping at the fourteen stations, where special events are supposed to have occurred during our Lord's painful march to his cruel death. These have been marked by stone tablets on the adjoining buildings.

The third station, at a corner of the narrow street, is where our Lord fainted under his heavy cross. At the fourth station he is supposed to have met his mother.

The ninth station is where Simon met our Lord. On one side is a Coptic monastery, while on the other is another built by the Abyssinians, and on the ruins of a church erected by St. Helena. In the court of that monastery is an old olive tree, called Abraham's tree, and claimed by the over-credulous to be the very one in which the ram was caught and sacrificed instead of Isaac. But about many of these "traditional sites" it is well to preserve a "wholesome skepticism."

Every Friday afternoon a Catholic priest walks the entire length of the Via Dolorosa, stopping at each of the fourteen stations to offer prayers to the crucified, but triumphant, Savior, whose precious blood, from his thorn-pierced brow, must have stained the stones from Pilate's Hall to the "place of a skull."

The Church of the Holy Sepulcher is an immense building—or, rather, group of buildings—with many chapels, and not less than thirty-seven stations where altars have been erected and services conducted. Here is one roof beneath which all Christian churches find a home—Greeks, Roman Catholics, Armenians, Syrians, Copts, and the English Church by the grace of the Greek Patriarch. But it is a sad commentary that both here and in the Church of the Nativity in Bethlehem, Moslem soldiers, with guns in hand, are constantly on guard to keep peace among the "warring sects." Under authority of the Turkish government a Mohammedan has the keys to the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, with the understanding that all can worship at their own altars, and the building be open to all visitors. In front of the church are several exquisitely beautiful columns, said to have been brought from Solomon's Temple.

Beginning at Calvary, where is shown the very spot where the cross is supposed to have stood, in the rent rock, seen through an opening in the marble floor, and near which is a magnificent picture of the Virgin adorned with diamonds and precious stones, we made a circuit of the numerous stations, not omitting the so-called tombs of Melchisedek and Adam. Below Calvary is "the stone of unction," on which, it is claimed, the precious body was laid when taken from the cross, and where Nicodemus embalmed it "as the manner of the Jews is to bury," with "a mixture of myrrh and aloes, about a hundred-pound weight." Around that sacred shrine knelt a number of priests and other worshipers, each with a lighted taper in hand, and chanting the praises of Him who died and rose again. Near that stone is another spot, inclosed with an iron grating, about which gathers the tenderest interest—the place where the Virgin mother stood watching, with a broken heart, to see what would be done with the blessed body of both her child and Savior. Though the traditional site may be mythical, no one can stand at that iron railing and try to recall the tragic scene on which those sorrowful eyes painfully looked without feeling like offering a tribute of tears to the mother of the "Man of sorrows," and who herself became "acquainted with grief." In the center of the large rotunda is the Holy Sepulcher. Just outside, in what is called the "Chapel of the Angel," we saw what is claimed as a piece of the stone which the angel of the Lord rolled back from the door, "and sat upon it." Thousands of pilgrims annually come to kiss it, honestly believing it to be the original "great stone" which closed the door of the sepulcher, and on which the angel sat "whose countenance was like lightning and his raiment white as snow." Into the sepulcher we crept, where forty-two gold and silver lamps are kept burning night and day, and where the sacred altar is constantly covered with fresh flowers, the offerings of the faithful. During the time of our visit scores of Armenian pilgrims who had come from their distant homes—the land of recent and horrible persecution—to celebrate their Christmas in Bethlehem, made a circuit of these shrines, bearing burning candles and chanting their Te Deums. It was really pathetic to see those poor creatures, some of whom had walked 200 miles, and more, kissing altars and singing for dear life. The one desire of years was at last realized—their eyes had seen the city of the great King. As the echoes of their singing rang through the building and died away in the different naves and chapels, the effect was most impressive. Turkish atrocities had not shaken their crude faith nor crucified their love for the Christ whose nativity they had come to celebrate.

The afternoon was spent on Mt. Zion. Re-entering Zion street, we followed it to the Armenian monastery, one of the largest buildings in the city, and capable of accommodating from eight to ten thousand pilgrims. Within is the Church of St. James, which is said to have been erected on the site where King Herod "killed James, the brother of John, with a sword." There is a small altar at one side of the church, which indicates the exact location where the execution is supposed to have taken place. This also contains the tomb and chair of another James, the first Armenian patriarch of Jerusalem. The chair is never occupied, the Patriarch, on great occasions, sitting on another throne. The beautiful Mosaic floor within the chancel dates back to the time of the Crusades. Adjoining this large and handsome cathedral is a small chapel, called the "Chapel of the Three Holy Stones." Here are three stones carefully encased, with the ends uncovered so as to be easily kissed by adoring and superstitious pilgrims. And they have been worn smooth by the lips of worshipful thousands. One stone is said to have come from Mt. Sinai, where Moses received the law; one from the Jordan, where the Israelites crossed, and one from Mt. Tabor, which many supposed was the scene of the transfiguration. There is also a church on the supposed site of the house of Annas, in which is a small marble altar to mark the exact spot where our Lord stood to be questioned. Another altar is over the place where he was smitten by the soldiers. While you constantly raise doubts in your mind about the strained exactness of these locations—there is a strange thrill of intense interest in the history they so vividly recall.

From there we went to the house of Caiphas outside the walls—or to the place where stood the home of that ill-starred high priest. We went out Zion Gate—the one through which the gallant Crusaders first entered the holy city. Here our Lord was falsely accused before scribes and elders, and here "did they spit in his face and buffeted him; and others smote him with the palms of their hands." There also was shown the place where "Simon Peter stood and warmed himself" by a fire "in the midst of the hall," and where he so basely denied his Master. I was not a little amused at a picture carved in stone over that spot, with the figure of a man extending his hands over a fire, a woman sitting near, and a rooster perched just above them in the act of crowing. These Greek and Latin Christians are realistic or nothing.

Quite near the Palace of Caiphas is a group of buildings, the largest of which, surmounted by a black dome, is called the Tomb of David. Here David, Solomon, and other kings of Israel are supposed to have been buried. The building is in the hands of Mussulmans, who will on no account allow any human eye to look upon the large sarcophagus. Only a model of it, placed in an upper room, is ever on exhibition. This place is interesting also from the fact that here in "a large upper room" our Lord is supposed to have eaten the Passover with his disciples, and is claimed further as the scene of Pentecost, where a sound from heaven as of "rushing mighty wind filled the house," and where "cloven tongues like as of fire" sat upon every devout worshiper. And here also it is said the Virgin Mary spent the last years of her life. As we retired from the dingy building, about which gathers such inspiring associations, and where each was praying for a perpetual Pentecost in his heart and the church, there were fierce contentions and wild screams among the beggarly porters and hangers-on, as to who should get the "backsheesh." No apprehension had they of the deep spiritual significance of that place. They were only concerned for the tips the shrine might yield. And thus history repeats itself. Adjoining this "Mosque of the Tomb of David" are several cemeteries owned by the different churches—the Protestants now having a place on Mt. Zion to lay their dead to rest. It must be remembered that about one-half of the hill of Zion is outside the city wall.

The most forbidding and distressing sight we had were the lepers outside the gates. With a peculiar agony of tone, and with uplifting palms from which fingers had partly fallen, and extended feet, which had become mere clubs from loss of toes, they plead for charity. It was most pathetic to see one poor old woman trying to pick up a coin with the stumps of her fingers on both hands. At last, after unavailing efforts to take from the ground the charity given, one of our party had to put it into her upturned, fingerless hand. The lesson of our Lord's sympathy for the leper will ever hereafter have a new meaning.

One thing amused us at every turn when we saw and heard two or more natives in conversation—their loud and aggressive tones of speech, accompanied by violent gesticulations. Such energy of voice and wild waving of hands in America would call out a whole neighborhood expecting to witness a fight. But in all this vehemence there is no passion—only a desire and intention to be heard.

Where the Wages Go.

In one of the towns of Illinois, a banker put his private mark on the money he paid out on Saturday night to the wage-workers of the town who patronized his bank; and on Monday night, of the $700 paid out, and marked privately, over $300 had come back to him from the saloons of that town! There is nothing that cramps, belittles, and dwarfs the possibilities of the labor movement in America like the saloons; and some guilds of working men show that they know it by boycotting the saloons and all liquor-dealers, not allowing them to be seated with reputable men, whose work brings back a good return.—Frances E. Willard.

More than thirty thousand of the British soldiers in India are now teetotalers—a rapid increase in the last few years. The good results are seen in many ways. The records of the hospitals show that the liability of the teetotalers to sickness is only half as great as that of moderate drinkers. And the proportion of the temperance men who are arrested for offense a against discipline is one in ten.

There are six American colleges in the Turkish Empire with 1,200 students. Seventy students are in training for the ministry.

LONGING

O Thou of purer eyes than to behold
Uncleanliness! lift my soul, removing all
Strange thoughts, imaginings fantastical,
Iniquitous allurements manifold!
Make it a spiritual ark, abode
Severely sacred, perfumed, sanctified,
Wherein the Prince of Purities may abide—
The holy and eternal Spirit of God!

Dr. Featherstun's Demand for Bible Proof.

The following excerpt from Dr. Featherstun's article, in your issue of March 28, is my apology for writing again on this subject: "Our second-blessing brethren have been urging their theory now for several years among us. Weeks ago I called for proof—for Bible proof—of the main point of their theory, viz.: that there is a work of cleansing subsequent to regeneration where there has been no lapse from regeneration. The columns of the ADVOCATE are open to them; but no one responds. . . . I say again: Either prove the theory, or stop the contention. Common justice, the cause of peace and sheer consistency, demand this. Prove it, or quit contending for it."

In reply to this mandatory and unkind fling at "our second-blessing brethren," allow me to suggest:

First. That "our second-blessing brethren" did not start this controversy. They went into the ADVOCATE reluctantly and in self-defense. It has gotten quite common in some quarters to slap "our second-blessing brethren" in the face, and then, if they say aught in self defense, to accuse them of contending for a mere theory, "when nothing is to be gained by such stressing, and much discord and disunion results." This is not fair.

Second. The burden of proof is not on "our second-blessing brethren." To use the language of Dr. Tigert: "Methodism has a doctrine of perfect love, or Christian perfection, as clearly defined and as continuously and consistently held as her doctrines of justification and regeneration. In the dogmatic, polemic and apologetic treatises—notably in Fletcher's Checks—in commentaries, the journals and the biographies of the leaders of Methodism, from its origin to this day, a specific doctrine and experience can be clearly traced, rolling through the life of the church in a volume so great that a goodly octavo would hardly suffice for the catena of quotations which could be furnished to establish the foregoing." If, therefore, anyone, in or out of the Methodist Church, assails this Methodist doctrine, let him furnish the proof for the position he assumes.

Third. "Bible proof" of this doctrine has not been wanting. It is given in Watson's Institutes, Wesley's Sermons, Clarke's Commentaries, Rawlston's Elements of Divinity, etc., together with much of the current literature of the church. Read Meyer's exposition of Col. iii, 1-16, given in the Methodist Review of November-December, 1894. Here is a bit of "Bible proof" furnished by one of the greatest commentators of the age, who has no Methodistic bias.

But, as Dr. Featherstun seems to want a new statement of Bible proof of this doctrine, I submit the following as a few of the many that can be adduced:

Luke viii, 14: "And that which fell among thorns are they which, when they have heard, go forth, and are choked with cares and riches and pleasures of this life, and bring no fruit to perfection." This is a true picture of much that we see in the church to-day. They bring forth no fruit to perfection. The feeble stalk and small nubbin would give place to a vigorous growth and a perfect fruitage under the influence of the purifying and vitalizing power of the Holy Ghost coming upon them and abiding in them.

John xv, 2: "Every branch in me that beareth fruit he purgeth (R. V., cleanseth) it, that it may bring forth more fruit." Here the branch is in the vine, alive, and bearing fruit; yet it is cleansed, that it may bring forth more fruit—a clear case of cleansing subsequent to regeneration without having lapsed from regeneration. And the branch did not grow into a state of cleanness—it was cleansed.

Acts xv, 8, 9: "And God, which knoweth the hearts, bare them witness, giving them the Holy Ghost, even as he did unto us; and put no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith." (R. V., cleansing their hearts by faith.) Let this passage be read in connection with Acts x, 1, 2, Acts x, 44-48, and Acts xi, 15, 16. A fair interpretation of these passages will establish two points, viz.: First, there is a cleansing provided for us subsequent to regeneration; and, secondly, this cleansing is effected by the baptism of the Holy Ghost.

II. Cor. vii, 1: "Having, therefore, these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." "These promises" are mentioned in chapter vi, verse 16: "As God hath said, I will dwell in them," etc. God wants a clean temple. These Corinthians were sanctified (see I. Cor. i, 2), but not wholly sanctified (see I. Cor. iii, 1-3). What they needed was entire sanctification, as per I. Thess. v, 23, that they might "perfect their holiness in the fear of God."

Heb. x, 19: "Having, therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus," etc. In this chapter we have a statement of the will of God, the work of Christ, and the testimony of the Spirit, bearing on the holiness of the church. This gives us "holiness to enter into the holiest." But in the tabernacle "the holiest," or most holy, place was beyond the holy place. The priest had to pass through the first in order to enter the second. So must we be first regenerated, which is sanctification begun, and then sanctified wholly by the baptism of the Holy Ghost, which falls only in this baptism on those who are in a state of grace.

I. John iii, 3: "And every man that hath this hope in him (the hope of seeing Christ as he is, and of being like him) purifieth himself, even as he is pure." We are said to cleanse ourselves, or purify ourselves, when we comply with the conditions upon which God promises to cleanse or purify us.

Of course, Dr. Featherstun will give a different interpretation to these passages, and so the "Bible proof" will come to nothing, so far as he is concerned.

But to quote Dr. Tigert again: "On the four pillars of Scripture, psychology, Methodism and experience the doctrine has always reposed securely. The onslaughts of those who claim that the whole work of entire sanctification is accomplished in regeneration, and of those who claim the necessary ineradicability of our sinful natures, while we abide in the flesh, though each of these positions is the annihilation of the other, have not yet overturned the doctrine of Methodism. Opponents oscillate in polar vibrations from the extreme of perfect love in regeneration to that of the indestructibility of fleshliness, or the carnal mind; but do not disturb the serenity of those who abide under the burning equatorial sun, whose tropical fervor melts all into the harmonious truth and gentle tenderness of perfect love."

W. B. LEWIS.

The Macedonian Cry, and Its Answer.

When a boy, down in Southern Louisiana, I have watched the negroes load the cane carrier. To enliven their toil these dusky sons of Africa sang melodies that were quaint mixtures of fun and philosophy. One refrain ran thus: "Sometimes I think I can make it, then again I dunno." Many times, in after life, this curious bit of plantation humor and pathos has come to me as an illustration of struggles and hopes, defeat and victories in the Master's field—the kingdom of God on earth. Sometimes—yes, many times—as we look upon this broad field, with here and there a sower, and hither and yonder a reaper, some toiling in joy, some in tears, so full grows the heart, weary the brain, and strained the vision, that one sighs for a lodge in a wilderness, or a corner on a housetop—anywhere, just to rest a little while. Then cometh the evil one with his cui bono argument. After a night of discouragement you may expect the "devil before day." But a mightier One than he says to the tempted one, "In toil there is refuge and rest." But pardon this "homiletic;". It is only introductory. The man of Macedonia has changed his geographical base. From the fine forests of Winn, Grant and Catahoula, the rich alluvial lands of Southern Rapides and Concordia, the wooded slopes and broad prairies of Avoyelles and St. Landry, they are crying, crying like children in the night. They ask for bread, and the church gives them a promise.

"Hello, Nashville." "Give me headquarters of the Missionary Board, M. E. Church South." "Listen. I want six men, with money to put them in the field and keep them there for five years. Good, true, brave, loyal men, who love God and their fellow-men." "What about results?" "Why, immortal souls saved, lost and straying converts reclaimed, churches built, communities enlightened, blessed and cheered—in fact, all the attendant blessings of the gospel."

Home missions! You are worse than an infidel if you do not believe in them. Our poor little Annual Conference Board did the best it could. No disrespect, but it is so small, about the size of a clap-board or shingle, and can not cover much. Our little dole up this way was $275 for the entire Alexandria district. We need $5,000 simply to support the missionaries that should be in this fruitful field.

Bro. Jas. A. Parker calls for facts. My dear brother, there are many of them. They stun and overwhelm one who will study them. Bro. Banks, over in Catahoula, has twelve appointments—a small district in itself. He needs an assistant. Bro. Patterson, Kent and Grace are on missionary ground. Vast stretches of peopled territory in the hills, the river and bayou lands and the prairies without a gospel of any kind. Bro. Parker and myself wrote about this condition of affairs last year. Preachers responded, but how to support these men was the question. That is what makes me say, "Sometimes I think," etc.

S. J. DAVIES.

Prayer, and the Answer.

The Savior said, "Ask, and it shall be given," and human blindness has sometimes added, "Only what we ask for we receive." But these "do err, not knowing the Scriptures, nor the power of God;" "and if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch." God has ever delighted to bestow more than is asked. When he said to Solomon, "Ask what I shall give thee," and the reply was, "Give, therefore, thy servant an understanding heart to judge thy people, that I may discern between good and bad," he did not say, "Solomon, you have stopped too soon; ask again," but quickly came the response, "Because thou hast asked for thyself understanding to discern judgment, behold, I have done according to thy words: and I have also given thee that which thou hast not asked, both riches and honor." (I. Kings iii, 5-13) So, again: "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit." (I. Cor. ii, 9, 10) How can man pray for blessings of which he can form no conception? This revelation by the Spirit is clearly voluntary. Again: "Now, unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, . . . be glory." (Eph. iii, 20 21) What comfort or joy will this ability give if the poor limitations of our thought establish the number and magnitude of our gifts from God? Ah, no! The human parent says, "Ask, child," and then he adds, by multitudes, thought, care and effort for the little one's welfare and joy, to the insufficient and childish things requested. Then shall our heavenly Father say to ignorance and want, "Fix thou the measure of thy needs, for I will give thee nothing save thou ask it." And if his child shall pray, "Thy kingdom come," longing for its beginning in his heart, shall he refuse the answer just because the fullness of the length and breadth and glory of the kingdom is not known? Thank God! the Spirit, the gospel and Christ are sent—most precious gifts—to those who have not asked for them or known their poor heart's needs. The letter and the spirit of a prayer are seldom one. A poor prayer is that that can fathom its depths and measure its altitude in any language known to man; and when the heart of prayer is right, God doth delight to magnify himself in giving. H. M. ELLIS.

Clipped Strength.

The Christian's strength is often clipped by enemies within and without, which might be overcome and driven away if he would. Rev. Dr. William M. Taylor says: "Oh, how we vitiate our best words by letting the consideration of human applause come into our reckoning while we do them! And how frequently we are frightened into doing nothing by the fear that if we do anything like what we want to do, our neighbors will treat us with ridicule or scorn!" These are the plagues of many Christian hearts. Some have an inordinate desire for human applause and think more of that than they do of serving God. Thus their strength is badly clipped. Others allow themselves to be held back from enthusiastic devotion to duty for fear of being called deranged enthusiasts. Hence, also, their strength is clipped. What a pity! — Zion's Herald.

A Heaven of Surprises.

There will probably be more surprises to us in heaven than we ever imagined here. People that we now expect to see there, we will not see; and some whom we now do not expect to behold there, we shall see. Then too, some things which we now believe to be veritable truths, we shall doubtless be surprised to learn, when we reach heaven, are not truths, but errors and falsehoods. Some things which we here regard as being errors and falsehoods, we shall be surprised to know are God's truths. And some church practices which we now believe are decidedly wrong and against which we stoutly contend, we will probably be surprised to find, in heaven, were right and approved by God. Quite possibly, also, we shall be surprised to see how much more good we have done in this world than we now believe we do.—Zion's Herald.

Show me the man who would go to heaven alone if he could, and I will show you one who will never be admitted there.—Pelham.

Gen. Booth on "Darkest America."

Gen. William Booth has given his impressions of "Darkest America" in a long letter to the New York World. He says:

"I have been disappointed in the American people. I expected to find them extremely wise, politically. I don't think I ever saw so much humbug. There is so much clap-trap, so much appealing to prejudice, so little of sound reasoning and calm decision in matters affecting public safety.

"They don't believe in grace. They don't want grace. Grace is no good for hacking. They want the backing of the Republican party, of the Democratic party, or Mr. Cleveland, or somebody else. It is your ballot-box, of which you are so proud, that is to be your undoing, unless you wake up to what the situation is.

"The millionaire is on top now, and the great crowd is struggling beneath in misery. They are the sans culottes—the breechless fellows. They see the millionaires having every comfort, while it is as much as they can do to make a living, and the poor-house at the end when all is done. The next revolution will not be by force. It will be by your ballot-box, which the breechless multitude has just begun to learn how to use.

"One day they are going to turn things upside down. They are the many. The millionaires are the few. The millionaires will then be underneath, the breechless multitude on top.

"It will be well if they stick to voting only. It would have been well in the French revolution if they had let the breechless multitude vote at the start."

The Secret of Usefulness.

The secret of usefulness with the helpful Christians is that they are so unselfish. In this foremost grace of Bible religion they copy Jesus Christ. He pleased not himself; he came not to be ministered unto, but to wait on others. He was among his disciples as "one that serveth." Helper is not a name so often given to our compassionate Lord Jesus, but he deserves it as truly as that more frequent and adorable name of "Savior." The unselfishness of the modest, helpful people makes them willing to do the hard work and the obscure work, and often the disagreeable work, for the solid satisfaction of doing good. If they invite an impenitent friend to a prayer meeting, or talk with him about the interest of his soul, they are listened to with respect for their sincerity. When they say a few words in a social meeting, their words weigh a pound apiece, for behind their lips there stands a noble, consistent life. They are the mainstay of their church in times of revival; they are too solid to volatilize into mere excitement. It is not brain power that gives them weight—it is heart power. They love Jesus and they love their fellow-men, and this gives them a prodigious momentum. They move others by it. They constitute the most effective force in all churches.—Dr. Cuyler, in New York Evangelist.

The Drink and Tobacco Expenditure.

In the United States Senate, Senator Hoar, of Massachusetts, replying to a speech of Senator Peffer, of Kansas, against the undue accumulation of wealth in the hands of the few, said: "Mr. President, there is more than $1,000,000,000 a year expended in this country for the single articles of beer and whisky alone. Adding to that imported liquors, adding to that several hundred million dollars expended for tobacco, and you have probably an expenditure of fifteen hundred or two thousand million dollars annually in this country for those things which, if not vices, are at least self-indulgences. I think before you distribute the property of the rich man, man for man, among the people, you want to know some way by which you can distinguish between the man who has earned the money and has laid it up, as these men have in their savings-banks, and the other man, who has earned his money and might have it if he chose to lay it up, but has preferred to spend it in whisky and tobacco."—National Temperance Advocate.

The Bible says: "As we have therefore opportunity let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith." A good Methodist deacon is quoted as saying that he knows the people who act as if this passage read: "As we have therefore opportunity, let us get all we can out of all men, especially out of them who are of the household of faith, because we have the best chance at them."—Mid-Continent.

Some people speak as if hypocrites were confined to religion; but they are everywhere — people pretending to wealth when they have not a sixpence, assuming knowledge of which they are ignorant, shamming a culture they are far removed from, adopting opinions they do not hold.—Rev. Albert Goodrich.

Disagreeable Duties.

We naturally incline to shirk them. We elect to perform nothing but the agreeable ones. But God will not humor our inclination. He will not encourage our weakness. He knows that the performance of nothing but agreeable duties would leave excellent elements of our character uncultivated, unendowed, undeveloped. Hence he calls us to perform disagreeable duties, even very repulsive ones. And how many times we have thanked him for the results! Even in the very act of doing them we have come upon choice revelations. We have discovered in ourselves possibilities and powers of which we had not dreamed. We have gathered lessons of inestimable value. We have taken on richer strength, added treasures to our wisdom, and gained an experience which will continue to serve us through life.—Zion's Herald.

"Ye are the salt of the earth." This, then, is a corrupt world, and Christianity is the antiseptic that is to be rubbed into it in order to arrest the process of its decay.

Bees work because they enjoy it, and sting only in self-defense. Some men work in self-defense and sting because they enjoy it.

Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, Meridian District.

"Who dares stand idle in the harvest plain,
When all around her waves the golden grain?"

On Friday, March 29, 1895, the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Meridian district convened at Vossburg, Miss., to hold its third annual meeting, and without the least exaggeration we can say truly that it was a delightful and a profitable occasion. Many things conspired to this end, among which was the exceeding kindness and hospitality of the people of Vossburg. Be it sufficient to say, that they deserve much credit for the interest they took in our comfort as well as that of the great cause which we represented. Miss Sallie Smylie, our district secretary, presided, and that, too, with her usual ease, wisdom and dignity.

The introductory service of Friday evening was characterized by a spirit of earnestness and consecration expressive of a strong desire on the part of all present to do the whole will of the Master. This service was opened with the regular devotional exercises. After this followed a Bible reading on Faith and Assurance, a most cordial welcome to the delegates and visitors to the hearts and homes of the people of Vossburg by Mrs. Hines, and a timely response by one of the delegates in behalf of the rest of the delegates and herself, and also that of the visitors. Towards the close of this preliminary meeting a short time was allotted for social enjoyment, and an opportunity given for the workers from different parts of the district to mingle with each other and to strengthen the ties of friendship already existing.

Saturday morning we assembled for our first business session. Miss Jennie Moore, of Meridian, was elected secretary of the meeting. Although the attendance at our meeting was not as full as we desired and hoped for, yet we are thankful to say that those who were present manifested much interest in the business of our sessions, and also in missionary work generally. Seven auxiliary societies were represented by delegates, and nine reports were read. These reports were full of interest, giving cheering results of past labors, and also expressed an ardent desire on the part of the members of the different societies for increased knowledge and efficient service. Mrs. M. F. Carr, a returned missionary from Brazil, was with us, and gave an account of our church work in that country. No one could very well listen to her without being inspired with thankfulness to our Lord for what has been done and without pleading to him a greater devotion to the cause of missions.

Revs. J. V. Penn and T. B. Holloman and Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt were with us, rendering such help as was needed.

A letter from Mrs. Anderson, of Laredo Seminary, soliciting help for the purpose of clothing needy children, and also that of building a new church in Mexico, was read by Miss Mable Cully, of Meridian. The importance of building nice houses of worship in foreign fields was emphasized, especially among Romanists who are accustomed to worshiping in grand cathedrals. A very interesting letter from Miss Haygood was read also. The topics, "Why should woman be interested in missions"? and, "Why should not every woman who goes to foreign fields be a missionary"? were ably discussed.

In the afternoon Miss Ellis, of the East Mississippi Female College, conducted the devotional exercises. The thoughts called forth by reading a sketch of the Dowager Empress of China, and the presentation of the New Testament to the Empress of China, would likely interest nearly everybody. The chief of those thoughts is the influence the introduction of the Word of God in the imperial palace may have towards bringing the heathen of China from the error of their way to our blessed Master.

The inclemency of the weather forbade any services on Saturday night.

Sunday proved to be a day of rest and spiritual refreshment indeed. Despite the clouded sky, quite a large audience was present at the eleven o'clock service. Rev. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, D. D., preached the annual sermon for this hour from the subject of "Paul's conversion and call to the apostleship." His sermon was an able effort, full of thought, and quite edifying.

Interesting exercises, consisting of songs, recitations, etc., occupied part of the afternoon. At the close of these exercises a most impressive and profitable love-feast was held. Our hearts were warmed anew with the love of God, and our tongues made freer to speak his praise. The last session of our meeting was devoted to miscellaneous business, the most interesting part of which was the annual address of our beloved district secretary. She acquitted herself well, just as we, who know something of her gifts, expected.

Business being over, and the time for adjournment having come, we joined hands around the altar of the church in which our sessions were held, and sang the best we could that grand hymn, "God be with you till we meet again." Thus ended our district meeting; but who can tell of the vows we then made to live nearer our Savior and to be more devoted to one another and to our Master's work? May God help us to keep and perform our vows.

Be Prompt.

To the friends of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Societies of the Tchoupitoulas Mission, I would say a word. To you who have subscribed to this mission are these lines especially addressed. Friends, please do not fail to hand in your amount. Because it may be but little, do not think it does not matter whether you be prompt or not. Remember there is "multum in parvo." Were it not for the little drops of water and little grains of sand we should not be inhabiting this mighty planet to-day. The best of people are sometimes forgetful; so I would stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance. Make a memorandum of your obligation and put it somewhere in sight. If you can not do better, cut this out and pin it upon your looking-glass, and I will guarantee your district treasurer will not have to make a call upon you again.

The rent notes and gas bills come whether there is anything in the treasury or not, and they can not be met unless you meet them. Friends, help the machinery of this mission to move on smoothly and successfully. "Come out to the help of the Lord against the mighty." Many persons say they do not believe in foreign missions. Now, then, is their opportunity. Cast in your mite monthly, and go to the mission and see with your own eyes and hear with your own ears what is being done.

If you will not grasp this opportunity for home mission work, then know for a truth that your words are spurious and forever after hold your peace about the foreign work, for we know too well that often this is only a quietus upon the conscience.

You can send your amounts to our address, corner Nashville Ave., and Charles, or to make it more convenient as people will frequent Canal street, you will but drop in at Mr. Werlein's music store and hand the amount with your names to Miss Creevy, the cashier of the same, she will see that it finds into the hands of your district treasurer.

Friends, I would not make this call upon you, but it is impossible for me to wait upon each one personally.

Yours in the work,

MARY WERLEIN.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. R. W. Randle, Lake Charles, La., April 18: "We have just closed our first protracted meeting. Bro. A. J. Neil was with us and did good preaching, and God gave us the victory. Our little church at Jackson street is moving along nicely. Brethren, pray for us."

Rev. Ben. P. Jaco, Abbeville circuit: "The Holy Spirit came down with power. Convictions were abundant; conversions and reclamations followed. Six joined our church. Our young people are greatly strengthened. I never saw greater zeal or more thorough devotion. Thank God for these times of refreshing. We had our beloved brother and true yoke-fellow, Rev. C. W. Perkins, of Tyro, Miss., with us, whose labors were in demonstration of the Holy Ghost."

Rev. W. D. McCullough, P. C.: "Our second Quarterly Conference just over. Our efficient presiding elder was with us, and preached us three good sermons. We arrived in Pickens, Dec. 20, 1894. We are moving on nicely on all lines except finances, and we are ahead of the second quarter of last year. We are hoping, praying and working for a great revival in the charge. Long live the ADVOCATE to bless the people called Methodists. Pray for us."

Laura L. Chevalier, teacher in charge, Vidalia, April 16: "Easter morning dawned bright and beautiful. The Sunday-school children flocked in arrayed in Easter dress, looking like Spring flowers. The goddesses of flowers, lovely girls; immortal flowers, never dying, growing in grace and beauty. Though we have no regular superintendent, we fail not to meet. God moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform. Our hopes rest in the children. God grant they may take up the cross while young and follow Jesus."

Rev. D. P. Bradford, Shubuta, Miss., April 23: "Notwithstanding the general financial pressure we are moving along nicely. Sixty dollars has been forwarded a month ago for foreign missions, and twenty dollars Conference fund. I was surprised that the Enterprise district was represented by that twenty dollars. The second Sunday in this month was a delightful day with Shubuta congregation. A fine attendance at the morning service, and in the afternoon we baptized seven children. Among the number was a great-granddaughter of Bro. J. T. Heard. Our circuit is good for every dollar of the assessments. Congregations better than ever before since I came on the work; Sunday-school doing a fine work."

Rev. H. S. Johns, White Castle, La., April 22: "We closed our tent meeting last night. The largest congregation ever known in White Castle was present last night in the tent. Rev. D. C. Rawls did good, faithful, earnest, persuasive, scriptural preaching. There was no fanaticism, but real gospel truth. I cordially endorse him. He did our Methodism great good. We have received as a result twelve members: some by letter, some on profession of faith. Altogether the meetings resulted well. Some others will join as soon as they can get their church letters. I expect to keep on with the work. The people want to build a church and have a resident minister. White Castle is a booming lumber town. Pray for us."

Rev. E. S. Lewis, Rosedale, Miss.: "We have just closed one of the most gracious revivals of religion Rosedale has seen in many a day. This year has witnessed a phenomenal ingathering of souls throughout the Greenville district. At Clarksdale, Friar's Point, Shaw, Jonestown, Duncan, Greenville, and Rosedale there have been special services with marked success. This seems to be the set time to favor this part of Zion. We report eight additions to our church on profession, and five by letter. Some will join other churches. The impression produced by the meeting is deep, and we trust will abide. One old man, battle-scarred and hoary with the frosts of many Winters, joined the church. A little girl of ten Summers gave her young life to God, and all along from ten to sixty five they come. The Sunday-school and the Epworth League have been benefited. Bro. T. Y. Ramsey preached for us six days, including Easter Sunday at which time we had a most precious service. He did faithful service, for which we are profoundly grateful. Bro. Crowe took up the word when Bro. Ramsey left, and God used him powerfully to the conviction of sinners and to the building up of the church. May the Lord reward these brethren!"

Rev. J. W. Hall, Black Hawk, Miss.: "Permit me, through your most excellent paper, to say something about Ashton circuit, and the generous-hearted people of Black Hawk, where I and my children live. I did not receive my appointment from the Bishop and his cabinet, as most of the brethren did, but from our amiable presiding elder, J. H. Mitchell, of the Kosciusko district. Ashton circuit is a new work with four appointments—two in the swamp and two in the hills. The two appointments in the swamp heretofore belonged to the Belzoni circuit, and the two in the hills formerly to the Black Hawk work, where 'Gilderoy,' the well-known writer of the North Mississippi Conference, lives and preaches. Ashton circuit has two prayer meetings and four Sunday-schools. I am making preparations to observe Children's Day at every appointment on my work. We are expecting a pleasant and profitable time and good collection. Although the membership of my work is small, the liberal-hearted people of the swamp appointments have paid me over fifty dollars, and the hill appointments have sent us something to eat, such as corn, meat, molasses and other things; and in addition to this the big-hearted people of Black Hawk gave us a liberal pounding about two weeks ago, consisting of so many things that I have not space to mention. No wonder the Conference sends the Black Hawk circuit a good preacher; neither is it strange that the preachers love to go to Black Hawk work. Our blessed Lord often visited the house of Martha, Mary and Lazarus, where he was well received. Friends and brethren, I ask your sincere prayers that God may save the unsaved people of Ashton circuit."

A CORRECTION.

Before me is the ADVOCATE, of April 11, containing an account of the editor's trip to Clinton, La., where he lectured in the interest of the Methodist Church—"for the renovation of the church."

Now, Doctor, I want to say that you are mistaken when you say that the proposed renovation of the church is an enterprise which has been inaugurated during the present year under the pastorate of Rev. S. B. Beall. This work began in Clinton under the pastorate of Rev. J. G. Galloway in 1893. In December, 1893, he was moved to Flora, and I was sent to Clinton. Soon after my arrival I entered with all my heart into the work Bro. Galloway had made ready for me, and during the year was elected treasurer of the Building Committee, and paid for all the windows, doors, weights, cords and shingles—amounting to more than two hundred dollars.

If anyone in Clinton gave you the information upon which your statement is based, that one must have been asleep for two years at least; and if you just guessed at it, you are not a good guesser. These are the facts.

OBITUARIES.

TAYLOR—FANNIE OLA HILLEY, second daughter of Asbury and Puella (Wafor) Hilley, was born Jan. 17, 1871. Nov. 1, 1893, she married Charles M. Taylor. March 21, 1895, she died at her home in Homer, La.

This is a brief record, but these years were spent in the sincerest consecration to the Master.

In her seventh year she was most happily converted, and at once, little and tender as she was, she threw herself fully into the work of soul-saving. I was a witness to her conversion, heard her relate her experience, saw her earnest labors, and helped her gather in the harvest from her sowing. Her bereaved husband writes: "I can truthfully say, She led my feet into the right path." Her religion was not of a vacillating, spasmodic character, but as a principle fixed in the soul that burned with a glow of sacred earnestness to the end of her brief life. Her "good deeds" grew with her growth, and gathered strength with her strength. A lovelier, happier or more useful life I have never known. The brother and three sisters constituted the family. All have crossed "over the river and rest under the shade of the trees" save the younger. What a loved trio is "at the beautiful gates, watching and waiting" for her! "One by one" the heavenly host is swelling as our loved ones enter in. Their presence there beckons us on, and cheers us in this earthly conflict. Let us dry our tears. That rest which they enjoy is waiting for us. "Let us labor, therefore, to enter into that rest." J. A. PARKER

Morgan City, La.

BELK—To-day there is a new-made grave in the cemetery at Westville. This marks the final resting-place of one of God's true servants.

Bro. SIDNEY HYOATE BELK was born at Columbus, Ga., Sept. 22, 1829; was married to Sarah Smith, of Raleigh, Miss., July 16, 1856, and died at his home in Westville, Miss., April 13 1895

Bro. Belk was soundly converted to God and united with the Methodist Church in the Summer of 1880, from which time he remained true to God and the church until the change from labor to reward. As a Christian, he was earnest and consecrated. His deep piety was marked by all who knew him. Truth and right always found in him an ardent champion. As a Methodist, he was loyal and true, always ready to make any sacrifice for the prosperity of his church. He served acceptably in the stewardship for several years. As a husband and father, he was kind and gentle. He was truly a good man; a man of whom everybody speaks well. He leaves a wife and seven children to mourn his death. Farewell, dear brother, but not forever. "We will meet one another again."

PAUL D. HARDIN, Pastor.

HOLMES—Mrs. N. PAYNE HOLMES, daughter of Bro. and Sister Payne, of Mansfield, La., was born during 1855 at Mansfield, where she was brought up and educated. Her parents died in 1870, and she went to Natchitoches, La., to live with her older sister, Mrs. C. L. Walmsley, wife of Col. C. L. Walmsley. I first met her here in 1877, while on the Shreveport district, and was with her a great deal while on the district and pastor of Natchitoches charge, that is six years. I found her a very zealous, earnest and devoted Christian, ready for any work. She loved the Methodist Church, her laws, and her institutions; labored and lived for her building up and purity.

During 1887 she went to Florida on a visit, where she met and married Mr. George Holmes, which was a happy union. She was a devoted wife and mother, and a zealous and successful Christian, useful in life and triumphant in death. She died in Florida, at her home, Feb. 16, 1895.

May God ever comfort her husband and little boy and many friends!

A VERY REMARKABLE OFFER!

A $40 Sewing Machine for $20. and the N. O. Advocate Thrown In!

This may seem surprising, but we mean what we say. The machine which we handle is "The Favorite High Arm Singer," the manufacturer's catalogue price of which is $40. Read the following description taken from the manufacturer's catalogue, and then read our offer.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer Sewing Machine, as you will perceive, is very attractive in appearance, the cut being an exact representation. It is strongly constructed from the best grades of material produced, and its adjustment perfect; also combines simplicity, durability and workmanship of the highest order; and in point of finish, light-running and sewing qualities, is unsurpassed. In addition to the above-mentioned qualities, our Favorite Improved High Arm Singer has the latest, most useful and practical improvements, such as a perfect Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, positive Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self-Setting Needle, Tension Liberator and Loose Pulley, and is without any exception the best machine ever produced for the money.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer is the only Singer style machine using a Cylinder Shuttle. The bed of machine being sunk flush with table and nicely hinged so it can be turned backed to admit of oiling and cleaning under works without the least inconvenience.

"Automatic Bobbin Winder, used on the Favorite Improved High Arm Singer, is positive in its operation, and works to perfection, winding the thread on bobbin as evenly as thread is wound on a spool.

"Flat Tension Spring. Every lady who has used machines with coil tension spring, knows the value of having a machine with flat tension, 'same as used on the Favorite Improved High Arm Singer,' for the reason that when tension is once set it always remains the same and does not alter while machine is in operation, requiring operator to stop every little while and re-adjust same.

"The Cabinet Work is of the very latest design, made of the best quality of Oak or Walnut, as preferred. Unique and attractive in style, and elaborate in finish. The rich nickel-plated trimmings harmonize with the general handsome appearance of the machine.

"Furnished free with every machine are the following-named accessories: One Foot Hemmer, one Screw Driver, one Wrench, one Oil Can and Oil, one Gauge Screw, one extra Check Spring, one Package of Needles, five Bobbins and one Instruction Book.

"Extra Set of Attachments also free with each machine, consisting of the following: One Tucker, one Foot Ruffler, one Set of Plate Hemmers, four different widths, up to seven-eighths of an inch; one Binder and one Thread Cutter.

Seashore District Conference.

We had the pleasure of making a brief visit to the Seashore District Conference, held last week at Biloxi. Bishop Keener being unable to attend on account of the illness of his wife, Presiding Elder Powell presided. Though new in the presiding eldership, the harness fits him admirably. We attended three preaching services. At the first we heard a thoughtful, well-prepared discourse from Rev. Parmenas Howard. Next came an earnest, unctuous, spiritual sermon from Rev. J. W. Chambers. At the third service the editor of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE "made a few feeble remarks."

We will not attempt a full account of the proceedings of the Conference. Some pastoral reports were quite gratifying, showing increased spirituality and decided progress along several lines. It was decided to sell the district parsonage at Hattiesburg and make a purchase at some point on the coast—a wise step. The business of renewing the licenses of local preachers was attended to, and one young man was licensed to preach—M. R. Jones. If we mistake not, he is the first preacher in Southern Methodism licensed by a District Conference.

A District Board of Education was appointed as follows: Clerical—N. B. Harmon, W. G. Forsythe, J. M. Pugh. Lay—M. M. Evans, J. S. Turner, T. S. Ford, J. C. Egan.

Delegates to Annual Conference: J. A. McLeod, J. C. Clower, A. J. Clarke, L. N. Dantzler, Sr. Alternates: M. M. Evans, H. Ware.

The visiting brethren present during our stay were J. W. Chambers and T. B. Holloman, representing their respective institutions of learning.

We were delightfully entertained during our stay in the hospitable home of our old friends, Bro. and Sister W. A. White. We were fortunate in having as our fellow-guest Bro. A. J. Clarke, of Lumberton. We administered the ordinance of baptism to Master Henry Knox White, the juvenile member of the household. We also had the pleasure of enjoying the hospitalites of Bro. and Sister Selby in their cosy little parsonage, which has been built during Bro. Selby's pastorate.

Mrs. J. W. Fulton, for twenty years a member of Centenary Church, Paris, Texas, bequeathed her elegant home to said church as a place of refuge for the indigent old ladies of this church. She was a truly devout woman, and died in perfect peace.—Texas Advocate.

Rome's Charities.

It is a well-known fact that the Romish Church sustains a large number of benevolent institutions—hospitals, orphan homes, and the like; and the inference drawn by the general public is that Catholics give far more liberally of their means for benevolent purposes than do others. Before we accept such an inference as correct it is proper to institute an inquiry as to the sources from which and the means by which Rome derives her revenues for carrying on these benevolent institutions. To do this exhaustively would far transcend the space at our command.

We wish, however, to call attention to a few facts of recent occurrence which throw some light upon the subject. There is in this city an institution, carried on under the auspices of the Romish Church, called "The House of the Good Shepherd," whose mission is the reclamation of abandoned women. The object of the institution, of course, commends itself to all Christian people; and if it were sustained by legitimate methods, no words but those of commendation would ever be heard from the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. But how is it sustained? Let the columns of the daily papers give answer. At the Fair Grounds, on Sunday, April 21, a week ago, a mammoth festival was given for the benefit of this institution. One of the preliminaries was a grand street parade of military companies, base ball teams, and the like, a half mile long, with the inevitable accompaniment of numerous brass bands. The procession started from a brewery on Canal street, the apartments of the brewery being used for arranging costumes, etc. The crowd at the Fair Grounds is estimated at twenty thousand. This immense throng of Sunday sight-seers must, of course, be entertained? What were the means used for their entertainment?

Answer: The same means used by men of the world for the entertainment of pleasure-loving crowds. There was dancing and other revelry. There were games of base ball, athletic contests of various descriptions, bicycle races, horse races, and so on to the end of the chapter. At night there was a huge pyrotechnic display. But such a crowd could not exist all day on amusement alone. The inner man must be refreshed; and so there were refreshment stands adequate in number to the demands of the occasion. Think of the amount of work required on the holy Sabbath to furnish toothsome viands to a crowd of twenty thousand! But this is not all. A crowd of Sabbath breakers must have not only refreshment, but stimulation also. And so there were — shall we say, saloons? Call them what you will; there were places where the "dark beverage of hell" was dispensed by the fair hand of woman for the glory of God and the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom (?). One of the Monday morning dailies, speaking of one of these places, says that it "was under the management of Miss ——," and that "her corps of charming assistants drove a thriving trade in beer and lemonade." Of another it is said "it did a high-grade business and made money. High wines were emptied lavishly. It seemed that the friends of this village intended to do full duty, and they did it well." The same paper also states that the lady manager of one of these places desires to return thanks to a certain firm of liquor dealers "for wines and liquors contributed." The number of these places was sufficient to slake the thirst of that thirsty multitude. Our readers would be absolutely astounded if they could know the immense quantity of intoxicating liquors dispensed on the holy Sabbath to raise money for carrying on the work of the Lord. Nor does this end the chapter. There was a vast deal of raffling. The racing was, of course, accompanied by gambling, and there was the usual amount of boisterous excitement. The fact that this was a church festival held on the Lord's day and for his glory (?) did not abate one jot or tittle of the whooping and huzzaing that belongs to a typical unreligious horse race. What we have written is the barest outline of this mammoth festival of the Holy Roman Church.

A detailed account would require pages of our space. That the festival was a decided success, financially, does not need to be said. Now, we would like to know where Rome's vaunted charity comes in. In the first place, although Rome was there in force, she was not alone. It pains us deeply to say it, but it is nevertheless true that Protestantism was largely represented. By this we mean not simply that persons were there who are Protestants in creed, but that there were members of Protestant Churches — members in good standing too. (May the Lord have mercy upon them!) Then, too, the devil's crowd was there —saloon keepers, gamblers, etc. So the money raised did not all come from Catholic pockets. Moreover, did these twenty thousand Sabbath breakers give their money out of love for God and fallen humanity or for the carnal entertainment afforded them? If the entertainment, instead of being of the nature above outlined, had been purely a religious exercise, consisting of Bible reading, holy song, etc., how many of them would have been there? Go to West End or to some similar place next Sabbath and you will find many of this same crowd there with no pretence of being there "for sweet charity's sake."

A drinking, gambling, carousing crowd spending the Sabbath day in whooping and hurrahing over the results of base ball games, athletic contests, horse races, etc.; where is the religion or the charity in all this? What church can not raise money by the wholesale if it is willing to resort to such methods? And we are asked to believe that the church which thus gives its sanction to the three great evils of the day — Sabbath breaking, gambling and the vending of intoxicants—is the only true church of Christ on earth — the only church that holds out to fallen humanity the hope of heaven.

Oh, Religion, what sins are committed in thy name! How long will Protestantism continue to pour out her treasure for the maintenance of this great system of iniquity? How long will Methodism sit still and allow Rome to take her children from her bosom and train them up to be votaries of such a travesty upon Christianity? How long will it be before we shall have orphanages sufficiently numerous to care for our own fatherless ones and many more besides? Ye Methodists whom God has prospered in business! feel ye no compunctions of conscience as ye contemplate the situation? Know ye any better way of using the Lord's money than by founding an institution which shall care for the orphan and train him up to a pure form of religious faith? Oh, that Israel knew the day of her opportunity! Oh, that the children of light were as wise in their generation as the children of darkness!

P. S.—The above festival took place on Sunday, April 21. Last Sunday the same sort of programme was gone through with for the benefit of the Mount Carmel Orphan Asylum. The idea of attaching the name "Mt. Carmel" to an institution which has to be supported by such means! What would the hero of Carmel, the rugged Elijah, say if he could wheel his chariot of fire back to mundane shores? Oh, shame, where is thy blush?

The Veneering Process.

We need no philosopher to tell us that lack of thoroughness is a prevailing fault in our day. On every hand there is a clamor for show and dramatic effect, while solid reality and real solidity are coldly considered. In fact, the American people seem to have a special fondness for glittering shams, thoroughness being a word whose meaning is almost forgotten. Parents want their sons and daughters educated so as to shine in society. A smattering of music, a touch of elocution, a race through one or two classic authors, a little book-keeping, and, presto! the work is done. How little apparently do the majority care whether the sparkle be that of a genuine diamond or of a crystal imitation! But when the tests of true scholarship and business capacity are applied, many are "weighed in the balances and found wanting." The gullibility of the general public in regard to the matter of education is something amazing. If such be not the case, why is it that schools advertising to give a finished classical education in two or three years are so largely patronized?

In matters architectural there is the same love of display, the same lack of solidity. Stately mansions, grand-looking edifices are erected as if by magic, and people wonder that so much magnificence can be so quickly and cheaply created. In a few months, however, it is often found that the paint which ought to have held firm for years is peeling off. Here and there unsightly cracks appear where unsound timbers and defective brick were used. Far too frequently the world is shocked by the announcement that some large city building has suddenly collapsed, entombing in the debris scores of helpless human beings, the whole catastrophe being chargeable to some conscienceless contractor or some unprincipled capitalist.

In religion the same morbid tendency manifests itself. Like the lawyer in the Savior's day, people anxiously inquire which are the great commandments, so that they may keep them and leave the lesser unperformed. The dangerous notion prevails that if we but refrain from gross sin, if we but keep the weightier matters of the law, we shall not come into condemnation. Where is it written in God's Word that we may break with impunity any of the commandments? Where is it said that God looks with allowance upon "little sins"? When did Christ teach that God requires anything less than perfect obedience?

The practice is far too common of excusing certain sins by calling them "infirmities of the flesh," or "involuntary failings." Sin, as the Bible defines it, is not only "transgression of the law," but it is also a falling short of the perfect law of God. "To him that knoweth to do good and doeth it not, to him it is sin." The man who stands by and sees another drown without doing anything to save him is as guilty as if he had pushed him into the water. In the last great day many of those who shall depart into eternal woe will be given as the reason of their condemnation: "Inasmuch as ye did it not to the least of these, ye did it not to me." (Mat. xxv, 46.)

There are many church members who can't be charged with great sins, such as stealing, or swearing, or breaking the Sabbath; but who nevertheless fall far short of what Christians should be. One refuses to take the sacrament because of a grudge he cherishes against his fellow-churchman. Another, who is a regular attendant at church, frequently engages in "those diversions that can not be taken in the name of the Lord." Although Bro. A thinks it horrible for a man to swear, he breaks out into abusive language whenever things go wrong around him. Bro. B has no use for thieves. Nevertheless, he does not hesitate to use a railroad ticket a second time should the conductor accidentally pass him by. And what should be said of the piety of the man who is kind and courteous everywhere but at home? How about the faithfulness of the Christian, be he ever so respectable, who never talks religion to anybody save the preacher? Many a church members who prides himself upon his honesty in business has his spiritual life gangrened by stinginess.

Pure religion involves far more than refraining from recognized evil. It transforms the whole life, so that those who truly love the Lord aim to please him in everything they think and do and say. As life, however, is largely made up of little duties, trivial occurrences and seemingly insignificant acts, few can resist the tendency to slight the lesser duties. "Trifles," we are told, however, "go to make perfection, and perfection is no trifle." Many Christians sigh for great opportunities of service, but are unwilling to perform lowly duties. Speaking to strangers, teaching in a mission Sunday-school, distributing tracts, visiting the outcasts—these are things beneath their notice. In every church there are those who are ready enough to work in positions of honor, but in the private ranks they will do nothing. Well-to-do Christians delight to entertain persons of note like Sam Jones and Gen. Gordon; but do they always show as ready a hospitality to people of less importance?

Not every woman can be a Frances Willard; but because she can not be, should she neglect to render helpful service to those around her? Not every preacher can be a Spurgeon or a Parkhurst; but should he on that account cease trying to save sinners? Not every teacher can be a Mark Hopkins or a Dr. Garland. Yet, as some one has said, "he who rightly instructs one youthful mind does a greater work than he who founds an empire."

"He that is faithful in that which is least," declares the Savior, "is faithful also in much, and he that is unjust also in the least, is unjust also in much." The boy who can't be trusted to feed a horse regularly can't be trusted to watch a levee or deliver telegrams. The girl who, in cleaning a room, neglects to sweep under the bed, will scarcely make a good housekeeper. The man who fibs about the cost of a hat or a suit of clothes will do so in matters extraordinary. In great emergencies men nearly always act in accordance with the tenor of their previous lives; so that the manner of a man's life being known it can be predicted almost with absolute certainty how he will act under certain given circumstances. How important, then, that we look well to every footstep, that we guard every thought! In the Christian life who can tell how much depends upon careful attention to duties which the world regards as of slight importance, as, for example, private prayer, attendance upon divine service, self-denial, self-examination, testifying for Christ, and study of the Scriptures? How many souls have suffered shipwreck through neglect of these!

"In the elder days of Art,
Builders wrought with greatest care
Each minute and unseen part;
For the gods see everywhere.

"Let us do our work as well,
Both the unseen and the seen;
Make the house where God may dwell,
Beautiful, entire, and clean.

"Else our lives are incomplete,
Standing in these walls of Time,
Broken stairways, where the feet
Stumble as they seek to climb."

McKENDREE M. BLACK.

To New Orleans Methodists.

Let the Methodists of New Orleans one and all respond to the call of Dr. Sawyer for a mass meeting at Carondelet Street Church on Tuesday, May 7, at 7:30 P. M.

Take notice that the object of the meeting is "to organize under the provisions of the Discipline for aggressive and persistent city mission work." No more important meeting has been announced in this city for years. As Dr. Sawyer says, "it would be difficult to find in the bounds of Southern Methodism a field whiter 'unto the harvest' than is New Orleans to-day. That fact invites and demands that we bestir ourselves and go out after the unsaved and unchurched multitudes." Let everybody attend.

Tchoupitoulas Street Church.

Dr. Sawyer, on last Sunday night, organized the Mission folks on Tchoupitoulas street into a church, and put Rev. J. M. Henry in charge. He baptized five infants and one adult, and started the new organization with fourteen members, mostly of mature years. There were others who could not be present, who will be received shortly by the pastor. Dr. Sawyer preached a practical sermon from the old text, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." He preached a salvation in Christ from "all the guilt, power and pollution of sin," setting forth in no uncertain language the true scriptural doctrine of Christ as the all-sufficient Savior of the sinner and the "wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption," or "the all-in-all" of the believer. The new church starts off with every indication of rapid and successful growth and development, under the pastoral care and instruction of Bro. Henry.

Rev. S. S. Sweet, a supernumerary member of the South Georgia Conference, residing in Macon, died last week in a hotel in New York. He was a good preacher, a clear, vigorous writer and a man of admirable business qualifications. He was a man of unimpeachable integrity and of most lovable disposition. He has lived in Macon most of the time for a quarter of a century, and no man in the city was more universally esteemed. If he had a foe, we never heard of him. Though not technically so, he was really our assistant during our pastorate at Mulberry in 1893. He was a true friend and a safe, prudent, wise counsellor. Rarely have we formed so great an attachment for anyone on so short an acquaintance. We hope to meet him "by and by."

A Warning.

To the Pastors of the Mississippi Conference:

On page 107, paragraph 248, of the Discipline is the following law: "The third Sunday in May, or as near thereto as practicable, shall be observed as Children's Day throughout our church with appropriate services; and on that day a collection shall be taken up for the aid of needy Sunday-schools, the advancement of the Sunday-school work under the direction of the Annual Conference Board, and for Christian education." Notice, please, that it is, "shall be observed," and "a collection shall be taken up"—not may be.

Now turn to page 314, paragraph 389, and you will find this decision of the Bishops in regard to the Children's Day Fund: "Collections made on Children's Day are ordered by the General Conference for the aid of needy schools, and can not be diverted to any other object." This is the law on the subject, and we all know that every man who enters the Methodist itinerant ranks must practically obligate himself to "not mend our rules, but keep them." The appropriation of these funds to other objects, when considered in connection with this vow, is worse than lawless.

When the Children's Day collection is taken and reported properly, but the money need for something else and never turned over to the Sunday-school Board, there is a double wrong committed (not to mention the breaking of the ministerial vow)—the misappropriation of funds and the falsifying of the statistical report of the charge. To illustrate the latter, take an example: Bro. Smith collects $10 on Children's Day and uses it all to make up deficit in his sixty-dollar assessment for Conference claimants, and makes this report: "Ten dollars collected for Children's Day, $60 for Conference claimants—total collected, $70"—which is absolutely false, $10 being counted twice, having been put in to make up the $60. The statistics of our last Annual Conference reported $112 25 which the Sunday-school Board never saw, the greater part of which can ha accounted for in no other way than the above.

If the collection is taken and, being used for other purposes, is not reported in the statistics at the end of the year, there are some—not so few, either—who can see no reason for this failure but the use of the money for the personal accounts of the preacher, and in their estimation this preacher is thenceforth only a common, or uncommon thief. And not only has he hort himself and his influence, but he has multiplied the difficulties of this collection for the future there.

The local church has no right to direct the use of this fund. The law does that emphatically. This is a matter which is left to the discretion of neither the members nor the pastor. The choice of the latter is simply between being "a son in the gospel," or a rebel against church authority. If the law is a bad one, its strict observance will bring sure and speedy repeal, while neglect will only hide it and insure its continuance. If a brother is too weak to control and direct the church funds, then the best touch he could take would be a transfer from the pulpit to the plow.

Now let me add, in all kindness, that I shall endeavor to find out who are the violators of this law this year and arrest their characters at the next Annual Conference. This is not a threat, my brethren. It is but a timely warning. H. M. ELLIS.

In the Living Present.

Bishop Newman, of the M. E. Church, at the Conference at Kingston, expressed the opinion that the principle of prohibition is behind the times. What next?

Dr. Talmage is morbidly sensational. The weakness grows as years accumulate. Recently he thanked the good Lord that the Fifty-third Congress had adjourned, and that many of the members, who had brought disgrace on their office, had not been re-elected. As many others, the doctor makes use of prayer as a valve for emittance of spleen, as a coat of arms in administering castigation.

Pope Leo's recent encyclical to the English people is the embodiment of imperiluence. He admonishes them to come back to the Roman fold. He yearned for their return, etc. Archbishop Benson, of the Anglican Church, makes reply that corporate union with Rome was absolutely visionary and impossible. Some fear that Gladstone instigated the encyclical.

Several cities in Minnesota enacted a law compelling children and minors unaccompanied by parents or guardians to be at home after nine o'clock at night. Arrest and punishment are threatened to the youthful transgressor. The necessity of such a law is a sad commentary on the state of society. Many parents neglect their children.

President Cyrus Northrop, in his "Manly Man," holds that the true object of a college education is not the mere acquisition of knowledge, but rather, and chiefly, the instillation of the habit of research, of independent thought. He loathes the scholastic dude who, devoid of any originality, simply knows what others knew.

Sociology is the science of our day. Former foundations have given way. Are at sea. Distinction between rich and poor, high and low, good and bad, male and female, employer and employee, is fiercely combatted. Our labor troubles are the outcome of socialism. They are the hot-bed of political demagogism. Are drifting. Are nearing the vortex of anarchism.

"Poor France," lamented Napoleon Bonaparte, "poor France has no mothers." The garden portrays the gardener, the family the mother. Most men are what their mothers made them. Hannah made Samuel. No, piety is not inherited; but we will find that most godly men, like Timothy, had praying mothers. ICH DIEN.

Mississippi Behind!

That is what Dr. Black says of us in Epworth League matters. Now, let me tell you we can't afford to allow this to continue longer. What do all you Leaguers say about that? Now, we do not lack in either intelligence, moral courage, or faith for this work I am sure, and feel that but one thing is the cause. We have just neglected it. Now, let every pastor and Leaguer in the State bestir himself and let's put a full attendance at Grenada, and thereby send out over the whole State such enthusiasm for the work that soon Mississippi will be in the front. Let's stand by our church in this State in this work, and let's make our beloved leaders, Steele and Galloway, proud of us. All come to Grenada and hear what the Lord saith by his servants. Come, praying for a baptism of the Holy Ghost. BEN P. JACO.

Franklin, La.

The Methodist Christians of Franklin have had their hearts gladdened by a large acquisition to their church membership during the past two weeks. Twelve persons have been received into the church. Three adults by letter from other churches, the rest chiefly young people upon a profession of their faith. These twelve joined under the services of the Rev. Mr. Morphis, an evangelist of the Cumberland Presbyterian denomination. Mr. Blocker, of the Jeanerette M. E. Church, highly complimented the membership of the Franklin Church for their zeal as laborers in the cause of Christ and their devotion to their pastor, the Rev. Mr. Armstroug. Mr. Armstrong is a good man. We are sure that he is sowing seeds that will germinate and bear fruit in due season. To our mind Mr. Armstrong is a pastor who strictly illustrates the preacher sketched by Goldsmith, under whose earnest zeal some "who come to scoff will stop to pray." Let his people continue to hold up his hands.—St. Mary's Banner, April 11.

Dr. Carradine and the Bishops.

On Tuesday night Dr. Carradine, in substance, stated that the Bishops of his church, in their address last May at Memphis, favored the second-blessing theory of sanctification. The fact is that the college of Southern Bishops gave forth no uncertain sound in condemnation of Dr. Carradine's unscriptural and unmethodistic teaching of sanctification, or holiness. The following is the exact and full text of what the Bishops did say on Methodism and holiness:

"The privilege of believers to attain unto the state of entire sanctification, or perfect love, and in abide therein, is a well-known teaching of Methodism. Witnesses to this experience have never been wanting in our church, though few in comparison with the whole membership. Among them have been men and women of beautiful consistency and seraphic ardor, jewels of the church. Let the doctrine still be proclaimed and the experience still be testified. But there has sprung up among us a party with holiness as a watchword. They have holiness associations, holiness meetings, holiness preachers, holiness evangelists, and holiness property. Religious experience is represented as if it consists of only two steps: the first step out of condemnation into peace, and the next step into Christian perfection. The effect is to disparage the new birth, and all stages of spiritual growth from the blade to the full corn in the ear, if there be not professed perfect holiness. Such scriptural terms as 'saints,' 'sanctified,' 'pure in heart,' 'holy,' 'dead to sin,' 'filled with the Spirit,' and 'made meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light,' are restricted to the few who have reached the height of perfect purity and love, and improperly denied to the body of believers; and not only to those who are new or weak in the faith, but also to mature Christians who, by walking with God in blessed fellowship and by patient continuance in well-doing, ever increasing in the knowledge of God and being fruitful in every good work, adorn the doctrine of God our Savior in all things, and are pillars in the church. We do not question the sincerity and zeal of these brethren; we desire the church to profit by their earnest preaching and godly example; but we deplore their teaching and methods in so far as they claim a monopoly of the experience, practice and advocacy of holiness, and separate themselves from the body of ministers and disciples. To teach, practice and promote holiness of heart and life, after the standard of God's law and the example of Christ, is the work of the church. Those to whom is committed the care of souls should not suffer their flock to rest in a name to live without the life, in a form of godliness without the power, in outward morality and religious training without the renewing of the Holy Ghost. Not less earnestly should they be warned against mistaking exciting moods and loud professions for pure and undefiled religion. Sin in all its manifold forms and degrees must be rebuked, and the beauty and joy of holiness, and the rich provisions and promises of the gospel, must be set forth, that preachers and people 'may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that they might be filled with all the fullness of God.'"

The General Conference indorsed the deliverance of the Bishops, and so, for any man in the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to preach as the doctrine of that church the second-blessing theory of sanctification, is to go contrary to the teachings of his church, as set forth by her highest authorities.—Pastor, in Times-Democrat.

An Interrogation Point.

MR. EDITOR: It was recently reported through the ADVOCATE that the tent meeting held by Rev. D. C. Rawls in McCarthy Square, in this city, had resulted in about a hundred conversions. Although weeks have elapsed, there has not been one single accession to any one of our churches, or to any Protestant Church, which can possibly be traced to that meeting.

Now, Mr. Editor, the inquiry is constantly passing from lip to lip, "What has become of Bro. Rawls' converts?" Like the famous question, "Who struck Billy Patterson?" no one seems able to answer it.

THE DAYSMAN.

(Job ix, 30-35.)

With the Hebrews the "daysman" was the acknowledged arbitrator for the settlement of existing contention. In this world of complication arbitration is a necessity.

1. Our daysman, our arbitrator, is Christ.

(1) There is estrangement, contention, war between God and man. The carnal mind is enmity against God.

(2) No possibility of settling the difficulty by legal process—unless it results in the condemnation of man. God is Lord of all. Man has broken his law. Man impotent to remedy the evil. Repentance avails not in the face of justice; reformation annuls not the sinful past.

(3) Jesus is our Daysman. He is the Son of God. Incarnation, crucifixion, resurrection, ascension, intercession.

2. The meditation of Christ is not humiliating to man, but is reasonable and satisfactory.

(1) Arbitration is voluntary. Either of the contending parties can render it impossible.

(2) As to God, he is pledged to his gracious promises. "Him that cometh to me I will in nowise cast out."

(3) Man may, or may not, accept the terms of settlement. No coercion, no compulsion. Notwithstanding his fall, man has not been deprived of his sovereignty. He is allowed to determine his lot. Heaven or hell left to his choice.

3. Our Daysman's solicitous efforts to bring about a settlement.

(1) Has called the church into existence—the place where his honor dwelleth—as a rendezvous between God and sinful man.

(2) Appointed the holy ministry. Ministers ambassadors of Christ. His representatives, persuading men to be reconciled with God. To repent and be converted.

(3) Gave his gracious Word. Full of information and encouragement to give our heart to God.

(4) Sent the Holy Spirit to reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment. He stands at the heart's door and knocks.

Job discovered no daysman to unravel apparent mysteries, to explain seeming paradoxes. But in our case: "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world."

OBITUARIES.

YOUNG—John B. Young was born in Warren county, Miss., April 10, 1833, and died in Edwards Depot, Miss., March 22, 1895, aged sixty-one years eleven months and twelve days.

He was reared in Warren county, and was educated at old Oakland College, in Jefferson county, Miss.

He was married in early life to Miss Elizabeth D. Biddle, who, in disconsolate widowhood, survives him. God gave them four children, two of whom succumbed to that deadly disorder, diphtheria, during the late war. One—the eldest—died at Hiwassee College a few years ago. Johnnie only is left to cheer and comfort the mother in her declining years.

Much might be said eulogistically and truthfully of our lamented friend and kinsman. First, and above all, he was a pronounced Christian, exemplifying his profession by his daily life. He joined the M. E Church, South, early in life, and was as helpful as his retiring and shrinking nature would permit. In his home the itinerant found congenial companionship and a welcome, the cordiality of which was not exceeded by any. Usually his religious life was of the pacific order, but there were some notable exceptions to that rule. During the protracted meeting season, when the church would marshal her forces for the conversion of the unsaved, and God would honor their efforts by sending a tidal wave of salvation, it would sweep over his expectant soul and give him ecstatic rapture for days at a time.

The writer remembers with much pleasure one such meeting. It was at old Beechland, in Warren county, near the home of his life-long and well-beloved friend, the late Rev. F. M. Featherstun, D. D. The meeting was conducted by that indefatigable and eminently successful pastor-evangelist, the Rev. Ira B. Robertson, assisted by Rev. A. B. Stewart and a few fledgelings—Rev. T. B. Holloman, Rev. Lewis R. Featherstun, and the writer. At the close of that Pentecost Mr. Young received such a wonderful baptism of the Holy Ghost that he and Bro. A. B. Stewart, of precious memory, laughed and shouted nearly all night with scarcely a cessation. His soul was so entirely thrilled that it kept up its vibrations of joyful ebullition for many days

He was officially connected with the church for many years, meeting the demands of his place by intelligent and cheerfully rendered service.

John B. Young was a pure man. After an intimacy of more than a quarter of a century I do not now recall an obscene utterance or allusion from his well guarded lips. His modesty and chastity were proverbial. Truly a good and true man has fallen.

His body was committed to the earth in the cemetery in Edwards Depot, Miss., by the beloved pastor, the Rev. J. Perry Drake, to await the blessed resurrection day.

May the Comforter speak consciously to the drooping, chastened spirit of her whose every tie by blood, save the writer and one boy, has crossed over the river, and are at rest under the shade of the trees by the river of life! C. A. Powell.

COLMER—Henry Colmer, Sr., was born in Weissenburg, Bas Rheir, France, March 8, 1822; fell on sleep at Moss Point, Miss., March 23, 1895; buried in Zion Cemetery, March 24, 1895.

Bro. Colmer was happily married to Miss Sophie Ehlers in New Orleans, La., in 1848, which union was blessed with six children—four sons and two daughters.

He was happily converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, under the ministry of Rev. Wm H. Carter, at Zion Church, Moss Point, in 1861.

His beloved wife, one son and two daughters preceded him to the glory-land to welcome him to the blissful shore.

He was married the second time in 1880 to Mrs. E A. Beck, who, with three sons, survive him, all blessed with a lively hope of being reunited in that land where parting is no more.

It has been my privilege to know Bro. Colmer for four years, and I always found him zealous in the cause of Christ. Before his departure he was confined to his room most of the time for eighteen months, and at times a great sufferer, in all of which he manifested remarkable Christian submission. On one occasion I visited him in company with his son, Fritz, and, although very weak and greatly distressed in breathing, he talked incessantly of God's goodness, praising him in every breath, until I feared he would exhaust himself, and suggested we have prayer and leave. During the reading and prayer his ejaculations of praise went up continually. The consuming desire of his heart all through this trying ordeal seemed to be to accomplish his Master's will, be released, and join his loved ones in the Celestial City. And thus he lived, suffered, and passed away triumphant in the faith which he espoused in his prime. From his knees in prayer at a throne of grace he was called to a throne of praise, ever to bask in the sunshine of his Father's glory.

Weep not, beloved wife and sons, but cheer thy hearts with the blissful hope of some day joining him in the mansions of eternal day.

Wm T. Beall.

RICHARDSON—Sister Mary L. Richardson was born June 16, 1808, and died April 9, 1895, at ten P. M.

She was the daughter of James and Mary Monette. She professed religion in her sixteenth year, and joined the M. E. Church. When the division came she became a member of the M. E. Church, South, and remained a true and faithful member to the day of her death. She was twice married: first to Zechariah Jones, in 1833, and was left a widow in 1842. She married Freeman Richardson in 1847, and was again bereaved of her husband in 1852. She remained a widow forty-three years. She left four children, twenty-two grandchildren and fourteen great-grandchildren and a host of friends to mourn her loss.

Sister Richardson was a modest and self-sacrificing Christian, and was always a friend to the Methodist preacher. It was my privilege to be her pastor for three years, and I can truly say in every little Christian talk she ever expressed herself as in the enjoyment of religion, and as having the "witness of the Spirit."

A large number of friends attended her funeral. Bro. Bowen, her pastor, made a most beautiful talk. This scribe then preached a short sermon from the words of our Lord (St. John viii, 51). Then Bro. T. B. Malone sang a solo, "Death is only a dream." Oh, what a precious time we had! God was with us in power and comfort. Then we laid her body to rest in the Macon Cemetery to await the resurrection morn. May "the God of all grace" comfort the bereaved, and save us all in heaven! B. F. Phillips.

Shuqualak, Miss.

KIDD—Mrs. Sarah E Kidd died March 23, 1895. She was the daughter of Washington and Rebecca Harper. She was born in Shelly county, Ala., Jan. 8, 1828. Her father having died, her mother moved to this State in December, 1849, and settled near where the Alabama Church now is, in Claiborne parish.

She was married to Bro. John B. Harper, Nov. 7, 1852, who died in the Confederate Army in 1863. She was again married, March 3, 1891, to Dr. J. L Kidd, with whom she moved to Texas, and settled at Waxahatchie, where Dr. Kidd died July 4, 1893. She came back to Louisiana, June, 1894, and has since then been living with her cousin and niece, A. C. and J. P. Harper, where she died.

Sister Kidd was converted, joined the Methodist Church while young, and has lived a consistent Christian life. She was the last to die of a large family—ten brothers and sisters—all of whom lived holy lives, and some of them very useful. Her death was sudden, and she was paralyzed for several hours before death, and could give no outward expression; but a holy life needs no last words to give assurance of victory.

She was a devoted wife and a warm, kind friend. May God bless her kindred and friends, that they may be faithful and meet her!

GREENLEE—Bro. W. A. Greenlee was born Oct 15, 1821, and died Feb. 14, 1895.

He united with the Methodist Church at Pisgah, in Claiborne county, in 1845, and remained a faithful member to the time of his death. In May, 1843, he was married to Miss Mary J. Scott, who was his faithful companion through life. He was class leader for about fifteen years, and was always faithful to duty wherever called to labor. He was the preacher's friend and liberal supporter of the Master's cause, and when old age and feeble health had circumscribed his means it greatly grieved his heart that he could not contribute so liberally as in his better days. He was a loving husband, a devoted father, and always ready to lend a helping hand to those who were in distress.

It was the writer's privilege to be at his bedside just a few days before his death, and when parting with him for the last time he took me by the hand, and said: "Bro. Guice, I am ready to meet the Father. I am thankful that I gave my life to him long ago, and my only regret is that I have not done more for his cause." He leaves a wife, one son and one daughter to mourn his loss; and may the mantle of a worthy father fall upon the shoulders of a more worthy son!

G. A. Guice.

TIGNER—Whereas, An All-wise Providence has seen best to remove from our midst our loved sister and Sunday-school worker, Miss Carrie Tigner; And, whereas, A family has been bereft of a loving daughter and sister and aunt; And, whereas, Our community has sustained the incalculable loss of a model Christian character; And, whereas, The Methodist Sunday-school and church at Oak Ridge, La., has transferred from her earthly roll the name of a loyal and devout member to that heavenly roll in the Lamb's book of life; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we bow submissively to our Father's will, knowing he doeth all things well.

Resolved, That we tender our sincerest sympathy to the bereaved loved ones left with us.

Resolved, That we, in our daily life, strive to imitate the sweet fortitude, the strong faith and the earnest Christian character evinced by our loved fellow-worker.

Resolved, That we faithfully use all means provided us to live such lives here, that after death our names may be written beside hers in that heavenly roll book.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be filed upon the minutes of the Oak Ridge Sunday-school; a copy be furnished the Christian Advocate for publication, and a copy be presented to the family of the deceased. Leola B. White, Chair'n Committee for S. S.

DOHARTY—Sister Martha F. Doharty was born March 3, 1862; was married to Bro. Jno. M. Doharty, Feb. 21, 1883; joined the Methodist Church, September, 1873, and departed this life, Feb. 21, 1895.

From the time she connected herself with the church up to her death she lived a devoted Christian life. She was the mother of four children, two of which preceded her, and she has joined them above and the blood-washed band. The church has lost one of her best and truest members.

Sister Doharty was perfectly conscious up to her death, though not in the least alarmed. She did not dread death. She met it bravely, and was found ready. She called her husband to her bedside, and told him to be a good man and meet her in heaven. Then she called her two little children to her, and told them mama was going to leave them and go and live with the two in heaven.

She was a kind and affectionate wife and a kind mother. She was true to her family, to her neighbors, to her church, and to her God.

Hand—Albert P. Hand, son of J. M. and Carolina E. Hand, was born Oct. 29, 1847; was married to Miss Florence M. Flowers, December, 1873, and died Feb. 5, 1895.

He was a man in whose integrity there was implicit confidence by this entire community. The church found in him a warm supporter, and the pastor a safe counselor. For about twelve years he was the faithful superintendent of our Sunday-school. His love for this work could scarcely be excelled.

It is a mysterious providence that removed him from our midst in the very prime of life, and at a time when his counsel and leadership seemed almost indispensable. In our church and benevolent enterprises a void has been made which it will be exceedingly difficult to fill.

For his home and dear ones his love was almost unequaled. When business did not demand his presence elsewhere, he could always be found in the family circle. It was here that his happiness seemed complete. As a husband he was true and devoted. As a father he was indulgent, yet not to a fault. As the physical man grew weaker, the spiritual man grew stronger. He held family prayers as long as his strength would allow. He leaves a wife and six children, who are living as though they expected a reunion. D. P. Bradford,

D. W. Heidelburg.

YOUNG—Nancy Jane Young (nee Morrow) was born April 17, 1847, and died Feb. 27, 1895. She was married to S. F. Young, Oct. 9, 1868. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, when only a girl, and was a consistent member of the same up to her death. She left a record which can not be claimed by all. She was an affectionate wife, kind mother, and was true to her God and church. Her death was a shock to the community in which she lived. She was always ready to go and wait on the sick. She will be sadly missed in the family circle, in the church and surrouding neighborhood.

A large congregation of loved ones and friends attended the last rites at the grave, where we laid her body to rest till the resurrection morn. She was the mother of eleven children, five of which have preceded her. Miss Doney, a grown daughter, who was a consistent member of our church, preceded her just one week.

May God bless the bereaved family, and may they all so live in this life so as to meet their loved ones who have gone before! F. N. Sweeney.

MILLER—Eddie Velma, youngest child of Bro. and Sister B. F. Miller, of Meridian, Miss., was born Sept. 15, 1892, and departed this life Jan. 14, 1895.

Bro. and Sister Miller are sorely bereaved in the death of this precious child. Eddie Velma was full of promise—bright, beautiful, bringing much sunshine into the home. The fond parents are comforted with the thought that their little darling is safe with Christ, who loves little children and tenderly carries them in his bosom.

I. W. Cooper.

GEIRNER—Died, at his home near Camden, Miss., April 8, 1895, Calvin Geirner, son of Boss and Callie Geirner, aged seven years seven months and sixteen days.

Calvin was a good boy; kind at home, obedient at school, respectful everywhere. No boy had more friends.

After appropriate services at the church, witnessed by a large congregation, we laid little Calvin to rest in the Camden Cemetery, to await the resurrection. God bless and comfort the sorrowing loved ones and friends.

BOURDEAUX—MAGGIE DEVANE, the second daughter and child of Robert M. and Callie Bourdeaux, was born April 11, 1873, and died Feb. 1, 1895. Hers was a brief, but beautiful life. To those who never knew her my language may seem extravagant; but to those who knew her best my language will seem impotent and lame. The microscope reveals new beauties of the flower; so a study of this unique character makes it appear fairer and lovelier.

It was my pleasure to be her pastor for more than a year, and this relation enables me to bear testimony to her rare gifts of mind and heart. As a daughter she was not content to be dutiful and affectionate, but gave herself over to the care and comfort of her parents. To her mother she was a companion and counselor, kindly lifting the care of younger brothers and sisters from her mother's heart and placing them on her own. Her devotion to her father was beautiful, and he had learned to lean with confidence on her judgment and care. As a sister she was affectionate and sacrificing, showing the true affection of a sister in looking after the spiritual interest of her brothers and sisters. As a young lady she was the peer of any of my acquaintance. With a mind of the very first order, a retentive memory and diligent application, she had gained an intellectual store seldom equaled in one of her age. I hazard little in saying if she had turned her powers to her pen at the age of twenty-five, her productions would have graced any first-class literary journal. With those that knew her the name of Maggie Bourdeaux is a synonym for modesty and purity. Modest without timidity, and as pure in thought and motive as in words and acts. None "knew her but to love her—named her but to praise."

In the Autumn of 1890 she was converted and joined Central Methodist Church, Meridian, Miss. Her surrender and consecration was complete, and her service has been undivided. The following are some of her sentiments she left on record: "I love alike all who bear the image of my Savior." Of the Bible: "In it we hear His voice and feel the throb of His heart." "I pray to be so holy, so truly a Christian, that my life may speak and gently persuade all who see me to look for the hidden spring of my perpetual happiness and quietness." "The thought of living apart from God is more dreadful than any affliction I can think of." Very few pages of her Bible do not bear traces of her study and reflection—as she said, "My heart's history." Not a few of its pages were marked and noted while on her knees. Her seasons of devotion were indeed "sweet hours of prayer."

Over all movements of her life religion scattered its favors, but reserved its choicest blessing for the last hour. When she knew she was fast dying she expressed her last thanks and made her last requests. And as she entered "the valley of the shadow of death," conscious of her need of an escort, she said, "Jesus carries me home." As the shadow grew darker she realized that "underneath are the everlasting arms," and joyfully shouted, "Trusting, trusting, trusting Jesus, that is all." And when the mists began "to roll away" she heralded back the message in song, "There is a happy land," etc. Then, pillowing her head upon her Savior's breast, she "breathed her life out sweetly there." GEO. H. THOMPSON.

Whereas, Death has invaded our circle and taken from us our sister, Maggie Devane Bourdeaux; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we miss her familiar face from her accustomed place in this Sunday-school; that we tender our heartfelt sympathy to her bereaved family, and pray that Almighty God may sustain them in this hour of affliction.

Resolved, We pray that the influence of her life may abide with this Sunday-school and loved ones, and may her life ever be as a beacon light, guiding us through the darkness to the realms of light, the home of the soul.

Resolved, Her death has lost to the home a dutiful daughter, to the church a shining star, and to the community a true and faithful friend; yet we bow to Him who doeth all things well.

S. A. SCRUGGS,

BENNETT—Fond hearts are bleeding and torn since flashed across the wires the sad intelligence that Dr. R. L. BENNETT is no more. Leaving his home, near Ada, La., in January, he went to Memphis, Tenn., to attend the Memphis Hospital Medical College, hoping soon to return to the loved ones and to the practice of his chosen profession. The rigor of the climate, however, together with an attack of measles, succeeded by pneumonia, proved more than his constitution, already rather frail, could withstand. The skill of the medical faculty and the loving, tender care of a devoted cousin, fellow students and friends were all unavailing to bind his gentle spirit to earth. On the morning of March 1, 1895, he became an inhabitant of the "eternal city." While the outstretched pinions of the sable messenger seemed hovering near, and giving intimations of a speedy departure, Dr. Bennett, with characteristic calmness, expressed a loving resignation to divine will; yet, oh! how fondly did his heart cling to his devoted, absent wife and three charming little girls, to whom he sent tender messages. Three children had preceded him to the spirit-land. In addition to the dear wife and little ones, this stroke falls heavily indeed upon an aged mother, a fond brother, numerous relatives and friends.

Robert Lee Bennett was born near Alanta, La., on Feb 18, 1865. Being constantly environed by religious influences, he early chose to become a follower of the meek and lowly Nazarene, and united with the M. E. Church, South, in April, 1881, under the ministry of Rev. A. T. Galloway. On Dec. 20, 1883, Dr. Bennett was married to Miss Eugenia A. Hearn, who survives him and deeply deplores his loss. How desolate seems the home, whither he can nevermore return.

Although called hence, ere he had reached the meridian of life, still the aroma of his noble, Christian spirit and gentle dignity linger, like incense, upon the memory of many whose privilege it was to know and to love him. May heavenly grace sustain and soothe the hearts bereaved by this sad dispensation, until the splash of the boatmen's oar shall signal them to "cross over the river" to the bright, eternal shore! M. C. T.

SPARKS—Sister ALTAMIRE F. SPARKS, wife of J. N. Sparks, and daughter of Rev. R. H. and E. W. Kennedy, was born May 10, 1860, and departed this life near Houston, Miss., Feb. 26, 1895. She was married to her now lonely husband Nov. 1, 1882. She professed saving faith in Christ at the age of fifteen, and joined the M. E. Church, South, in which she lived a consistent member till God called her home. She was a dutiful daughter, an affectionate sister, a devoted wife, and an exemplary Christian. She was not ashamed of her religion. She would often lead the prayer in the family devotions in her home. During her last illness she suffered the most intense, excruciating pain for more than three weeks; yet in the intervals of those severe paroxysms she would speak of her faith in Christ, and say she was not afraid to die, and often exult in the love of God and the hope of a better world. She was ready to go. Her funeral was preached by the writer to a large concourse of friends and relatives in Wesley Chapel Church. She leaves a husband, an aged father and mother, and seven brothers and sisters—one brother an itinerant preacher in Texas—to mourn her death; but they mourn not as those who have no hope. May God bless and sustain the sorrowing ones, and bring them at last to meet their loved ones in the home of the blest, where parting will be no more! J. W. ANDERSON, P. C.

KLINE—The following resolutions were adopted by the Methodist Sunday-school of Enterprise, Miss.:

Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God to remove from our midst by death AUGUSTUS KLINE, who was a regular attendant at our Sunday-school until his health failed, and whose life was pure, gentle, and full of devotion to his relatives and friends; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we do deeply mourn his loss, and that we do deeply sympathize with the bereaved family in this time of sorrow.

Resolved, That we do beseech Him who doeth all things well to so influence our minds by this dispensation of His providence as to lead us all to richer experiences in God's grace and to higher places of Christian usefulness.

Resolved, That the Clarke County Times and the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE be requested to publish these resolutions.

MRS. C. C. HAND, for Com.

Many people neglect a cold, thinking it will go as it came. Frequently, with serious results the cold of to-day may be the pneumonia of to-morrow. Nothing will cure a cough or cold so rapidly as Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. Its reputation has been established for over fifty years as the best remedy for coughs, colds, bronchitis, asthma, all throat and lung troubles. For croup and whooping-cough it is invaluable. Mothers will be saved much anxiety and loss of children by having Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar always on hand. Consumption has been cured many times by its use. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

If God gives a rose, thank him for it; if a thorn, thank him for it just the same.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

This Bible, which we offer to our readers, is the very best Bible on the market. We will send this Bible for $1.85 to all subscribers who will pay their subscription for one year in advance, provided they have not had the benefit of other premium offers. In that case they must write us for special terms. Persons who are not subscribers can have it for $3.15

N. B.—When we say a year in advance we mean one year from this date, i. e., May, 96. A little later it will be June, '96.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The Whitecaps are reported as committing outrages in Sevier county, Tenn.

The Atlanta Exposition means to produce the Midway Plaisance of the Chicago World's Fair on an enlarged scale.

Ballington Booth, the head of the Salvation Army in this country, has taken out his first naturalization papers, and will become a citizen.

Belva A. Lockwood applied for permission to practice before the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia, and the court refused to grant it.

Capt. W. H. Beanham, in command of Battery B, Louisiana Field Artillery, and one of the Police Board, was buried last Sunday with civic and military honors.

Ten thousand pounds of nitro-glycerine exploded at the factory two miles from Lima, Ohio, the other day. The shock was felt at a distance of twenty miles.

New York's Constitutional Convention refused to indorse a proposition for woman's suffrage, but the Legislature has passed a bill to submit the matter to a vote of the people.

Some time ago the United States had 780 Indian soldiers, but it has been getting rid of them. Troop L, of the Eighth Calvary, was disbanded the other day, and there now remain but two Indian companies in the service.

The G. A. R of the whole country is after the scalp of Colonel Waring, New York's street commissioner, who called it a "lot of pension hummers." The mayor of New York is receiving resolutions from indignant posts all the time.

The United States Department of Agriculture has established at the Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Ala., a depot for a scientific investigation of the composition and consumption of food among the negroes in the Black belt of the South.

The attitude of the United States in the Eastern trouble has been made clear to the various parties interested. In brief, it is that the unvarying policy of this country is not to form alliances which may involve it in complications with the countries of Europe or Asia.

The police were given instructions Saturday night to enforce the Sunday law. The proprietors of barrooms and grog shops were notified of the fact, but on last Sunday it was noticed that while a great many saloons throughout the city had their doors closed, a greater number paid but little attention to the order and sold drinks over the counter with doors wide open.

The complaint against the Spanish government because of the firing upon the steamer Alliance by a Spanish gunboat, off the coast of Cuba, is now in a fair way of being amicably settled. The Madrid officials have notified the State Department at Washington that the commander of the warship which fired upon the Alliance would be tried by court martial and punished for his act.

Notwithstanding the repeated assurances from Washington to the effect that there was no actual probability of the occupation of the Nicaraguan port of Corinto by the British, it is now a fact that the British have landed from their ships and taken possession of the town, and that the British flag now floats over the government buildings of the little seaport. It was generally believed by the State Department officials at Washington that Nicaragua would pay the indemnity at the last moment, or give such sincere assurances of its prompt payment that the British admiral would delay the carrying out of the threat to occupy Corinto.

FOREIGN.

Prince Bismarck intends to make the Emperor William a visit in May.

A compromise proposition is now under consideration between Great Britain, Nicaragua and the United States, whereby Nicaragua will pay $75,000 indemnity to Great Britain, and the English will evacuate Corinto.

The Pall Mall Gazette, commenting on the trouble between Great Britain and Nicaragua, says that nothing could be more courteously correct than the attitude of the United States in the difficulty, adding: "It is a good omen for a close understanding upon the Chinese-Japanese question. Our action may be expected to teach the Spanish American States that none of them are too insignificant to behave decently to foreigners."

The joint demand made upon Japan by Russia Germany and France, that the Liao Tung peninsula be abandoned by Japan as a portion of the war indemnity, has unquestionably precipitated a very serious state of affairs in the far East.

In the event of Japan refusing to accede to the demands of Russia, France and Germany in regard to the retention of the Liao Tung peninsula, it is most probable that Russia will at once declare a blockade of the Japanese ports.

Delays are dangerous. A dollar spent for Hood's Sarsaparilla now may prevent illness which will be expensive and hard to bear. Now is the time to take Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Hood's Pills cure all liver ills, relieve constipation, and assist digestion. 25 cents.

The list of the casualties caused by the breaking of the great Bouzey dike in the Epinal district of the Vosges, in France, increases every hour. One hundred and fifteen deaths have already been reported, but only fifty bodies have been recovered. It is believed that the death list will be greatly in excess of the figures above given, when all the districts are heard from.

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound, or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result; and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

T. D. LIPSCOMB, for the Com.

No one should think that he is "walking with God," or living near to God, if he does not delight in devout meditation and prayer.

"Earthly Footsteps of the Man of Galilee."

A new work of Bishop Vincent, and Dr. J. W. Lee (of St. Louis). A great publishing company is just bringing to light the fruit of much toil and outlay of money. They sent an artist photographer, under the guidance of Dr. Lee, to the Holy Land, there to secure the most exact and perfect pictures of the salient scenes of the earthly life of Christ and the Apostles. We have examined a portion of the work and unhesitatingly pronounce it by far the best thing of its kind ever seen by us. The method of photographic reproduction employed is faultless.

The forthcoming book will contain some four or five hundred of these splendid pictures, 8x10 inches in size. The work will be issued in twenty-four parts, pages 11½x13¼ inches, with chronological charts and colored maps. Each part will contain sixteen pictures, besides the enchanting pen pictures of these renowned writers. The series will run through twenty-four weeks, one a week, at a regular price of 25 cents each. But the ADVOCATE has made a special arrangement by which it will furnish all its subscribers, new and old, for 10 cents a number. Less than half, but very little more than a third of what you will have to pay if your name is not on our subscription roll. The entire series in this way will cost only $2.40; otherwise it will cost $6. This rule of the publishers of this book is the strictest that only to our subscribers can we make this special offer. For $2.40 you may get what another must pay $6 for if you are a subscriber to the ADVOCATE. Send $2.40, and each of the series will be mailed you as fast as issued. Or ten cents (stamps taken) for one issue—any way you prefer.

BUFFALO Springs Nos. 1 & 2 LITHIA WATER

IN BRIGHT'S DISEASE OF THE KIDNEYS.

Extract from Report on "Therapeutics and Practice of Medicine." Read before the Medical Society of the State of North Carolina, May, 1894. By E. C. Laird, M. D., Haw River, N. C.

"During the last season (as Resident Physician at the Springs) your reporter used BUFFALO LITHIA WATER Nos. 1 and 2, in almost every form in Bright's disease of the Kidneys and Diabetes with most gratifying results. This action of these waters cannot be attributed to the effect of the large quantity of pure water passed through the system, as suggested by some writers, for in many instances the beneficial effects produced by one Spring would be greatly enhanced by change to the other, and vice versa, showing some special curative action of each water in the individual case. This I attribute to two well established effects of these waters, first their powerful solvent and eliminating action on uric acid, which is considered by Tyson and others the principal excitant of Bright's disease, and secondly to their nerve tonic properties, thus enhancing the wide range of adaptability to the cause of trouble, whether commencing with "mind strain" from overwork, worry or sorrow, as suggested by Drs. Thom, Howard and Flint in "Virginia Medical Monthly," May, 1891, or to one or more of the diatheses, either Gouty, Rheumatic, Oxalic, Lithæmic or Diabetic."

This Water is for sale by druggists generally, or in cases of one dozen half-gallon bottles $5.00 f. o. b. at the Springs. Descriptive pamphlets sent to any address.

Dollars or Kicks

for women, according to whether they do, or don't do, their washing in a sensible way. If they use Pearline, it means good, hard dollars saved. Pearline is economy. All that ruinous rubbing that makes you buy linens and flannels twice as often as you need to, is spared, to say nothing of your time and labor. See the troubles that women have to endure with other ways of washing. There's that hard, wearing-out rub, rub, rub, or the danger of ruining things with acids if you try to make it easy. Washing with Pearline is absolutely safe.

I WILL BE WORTHY OF IT.

BY ELLA WHEELER.

I may not reach the heights I seek,
My storied strength may fail me;
Or, half-way up the mountain peak,
Fierce tempests may assail me.
But, though that place I never gain,
Herein lies comfort for my pain—
I will be worthy of it.

I may not triumph in success,
Despite my earnest labor;
I may not grasp results that bless
The efforts of my neighbor.
But, though my goal I never see,
This thought shall always dwell with me—
I will be worthy of it.

The golden glory of love's light
May never fall on my way;
My path may always lead through night,
Like some deserted by-way.
But, though life's dearest joy I miss,
There lies a nameless strength in this—
I will be worthy of it.

Jerusalem, and "Out as Far as Bethany."

BY BISHOP CHAS B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

The first Sabbath of this new year was spent in the "City of the Great King." Our party attended service at Christ Church (Church of England) on Mt. Zion—a modest, tasteful structure, erected about ten years ago. Quite a good congregation was present, composed largely of tourists. The "Bishop of Jerusalem" occupied a seat near the chancel, but took no part in the service. We heard a very excellent and helpful sermon from the pastor, on a subject appropriate to the Week of Prayer, appointed by the Evangelical Alliance, which, with Christians throughout the world, he purposed to observe. After the sermon we had the holy communion. I counted it a gracious privilege to worship with the Lord's people and receive those sacred emblems, in Jerusalem, and not far from the very spot where his blessed body was broken and his blood shed for the world's redemption. There was a deeper significance in that sacrament, and a more sacred sweetness in the service, than I had ever experienced before.

In the early afternoon several ministers and myself concluded that we would walk over the Mount of Olives—"a Sabbath day's journey"—and spend an hour in Bethany. Entering the city through the Jaffa Gate, and walking down the Via Dolorosa, we saw tradesmen, large and small, and hucksters of every description, as busy as on other days of the week. Some closed doors, however, were silent, but eloquent, protests against the general desecration of the Lord's day. We passed out at "St. Stephen's Gate," so named because of its supposed nearness to the place of Stephen's martyrdom, and where "the witnesses laid down their clothes at a young man's feet, whose name was Saul." By an abrupt and rugged descent we reached the brook Kedron, which was crossed on a modern stone bridge. It was a dry, rocky bed, but after the heavy rains I suppose its full, swift current becomes a wild and boisterous torrent. The Kedron Valley is disappointingly narrow, when one recalls the opulent and voluminous history with which it is so intimately associated.

To the left we turned and walked a hundred yards or so to visit the supposed tomb of the Blessed Virgin. It is down in a grotto, reached by many marble steps, and is the property of the Greek Church. By the light of candles, furnished by the accommodating monk, we found our way to the modest niche beneath which the mother of our Lord is thought to rest, and also the tomb of Joseph near by, whose simple but good beautiful character and ready obedience of the angel's voice in a dream entitle his memory to not less honor than the Virgin Mother herself. Around this hallowed place and along the road the poor lepers do congregate and wail out their pitiful pleas for alms.

There are three roads that lead over the Mount of Olives, branching off from the bridge where we crossed the brook Kedron. The left is known as David's Road, because by it the king fled from wicked Absalom. The one on the right—wide and well macadamized—is called the "Hosanna Road," because along that way the Lord Christ rode with triumph into Jerusalem, while the people spread their garments and "branches off the trees" to carpet his path, and sang with exultant voices, "Hosanna in the highest!" The narrow, less-frequented path between the two was the way our Lord always walked in his frequent afternoon visits to Bethany. That one we selected because his holy feet had pressed those stones, and by it we could readily reach the little door that opens into the Garden of Gethsemane. Outside the garden wall we were shown the large rock where the Master bade Peter and the two sons of Zebedee to tarry and watch while "he went a little further and fell on his face," his soul being "exceeding sorrowful, even unto death." We sat for a moment where it is claimed the Lord, returning from the place of agony, found his disciples asleep, and to Peter administered this gentle rebuke, "What, could ye not watch with me one hour?" And near that spot it is probable the treacherous Judas kissed our Lord, and a great multitude, "with swords and staves," "took Jesus and bound him."

The Latin father in charge of the garden was quite agreeable, gave each a bunch of flowers and some leaves from the olive trees which shade the hallowed ground where it is supposed our Lord sweat, as it were, "great drops of blood," and where appeared "an angel unto him from heaven, strengthening him." Around the three sides of the garden they have placed small altars, with inscriptions, to mark the fourteen stations of the Via Dolorosa. Flowers are kept constantly blooming, and thus the scene of agony has become a garden of beauty.

The rocky and precipitous side of Olivet is a vast cemetery. For centuries the dead have been laid away in rock-hewn tombs, until scarcely a place is left for another sleeper. Upon the summit is a large Carmelite convent, located, it is claimed, upon the exact spot where our Savior stood when he wept over Jerusalem. Around the sides of a quadrangular court inside we saw the Lord's Prayer written in thirty-two languages, as upon that site, it is also supposed, our Lord taught his disciples that form of prayer. Off to the left, and upon a still higher point, is a large Russian church, with a lofty tower, built, it is said, upon the spot from which the ascension took place, while the men of Galilee stood gazing into heaven. From the summit of Olivet by far the best view of Jerusalem is obtained. Even apart from the sacred associations of thrilling centuries, it would be an enrapturing scene. Off to the right, northwest from Jerusalem, rose Mizpeh conspicuously in the distance, where Samuel introduced Saul as the King of Israel, where the ark of the covenant was kept, and many other important events occurred in the history of God's chosen people.

Just over the brow of Olivet, as we began our descent toward Bethany, most unexpectedly we caught a charming view of the distant Jordan Valley, of the Dead Sea shimmering under a cloudless afternoon sun, and the mountains of Moab beyond, with Mt. Pisgah as the crowning peak. Every foot of that road is historic. We passed the spot where the barren fig tree stood which our Lord cursed, and it withered away. There is Bethphage, "the house of unripe figs," and "the village over against you," from which the ass and colt were brought for our Lord's triumphal entry into the city. A few minutes' walk brought us to Bethany, the little group of houses, under the shade of the palms, so tenderly associated with the restful and social hours of our "Elder Brother."

Of course, the first place of interest to which our feet eagerly turned was the old ruined church on the supposed site of the house of Mary and Martha. What blessed memories lingered there! Probably just there Lazarus died, and a few paces away the Lord stood at his tomb and awoke the sleeper. In that place he had spent many a restful night after weary labors of the day in the city. Very near were the ruins of a large church, built by St. Helena, to mark the site of the house of "Simon the leper." In that house, at a feast, appeared "a woman having an alabaster box of very precious ointment," and, in offering a tribute of love to her Lord, anointed him for his burial—an act of faith which throughout the world shall "be told as a memorial of her." After gathering a few stones from the ruins and plucking some grasses from the old home of Mary and Martha, we went to the tomb of Lazarus—a deep vault reached by a narrow spiral stone stairway. It is probably the remains of an old subterranean chapel, but there are grave doubts as to its being the place where "Jesus wept," and woke the dead. We also had the privilege of looking into the house of one of the villagers, and of seeing how they lived. Gloomy enough are those caves in the side of the hill, with not a window to admit the sunlight, no covering for the floor of dirt or stone, and not a chair, bedstead, or table. In large stone jars the wheat was kept, of which the flour was ground by the women for daily bread as needed.

We returned to the city by the Hosanna Road, and under the soft starlight made our way back to the hotel. A sweet, meditative Sabbath afternoon that was! Its memory will forever abide.

One morning we devoted to Jerusalem outside the walls, beginning at the Damascus Gate, and making a circuit of the city. Near the Damascus Gate, itself historic—out of which Saul of Tarsus went on a mission of slaughter, and through which he returned as the eloquent Apostle Paul—we were shown a section of the old wall built after the captivity. Near by also is the cave called Jeremiah's Grotto, in which the great prophet is supposed to have written his Lamentations; and but a few paces distant is the green hill, known as "Gordon's Calvary." Gen. Gordon, after long and patient investigation, reached the conclusion that the spot indicated was the original hill, Calvary, and his opinion is sustained by many scholars. As we entered the Valley of Jehoshaphat the sun had just risen above the heights of Olivet, and was pouring the full tide of his glory upon the olives, that shone like trees of silver in the King's Dale. Up the steep hill, to our right, was the Golden Gate of the city, on the site of the "gate Beautiful" that opened into the great temple. We first came to Absalom's Pillar, a pyramidal-shaped tomb about forty-seven feet high, in a heap of rubbish on the left of the brook Kedron. There is a large hole on one side. Several Jews were standing near, ready, I suppose, "after the manner of the Jews," to throw stones at the tomb as expressive of their contempt for that son's disobedience and ingratitude. We each gathered seven smooth stones and shied them at the tomb ourselves, to show our condemnation of filial disloyalty. A few paces further down we came to the tomb of Zecharias, who was slain "between the temple and the altar." And adjoining this is the tomb, or grotto, of St. James, which consists of several small underground chambers cut out of the solid rock. I crawled through the narrow passage into the neglected chamber, where tradition says the great apostle was concealed from the crucifixion to the resurrection of his Lord, without eating food, and where at length he was buried to await the glad morning of his final reunion with his risen Redeemer.

Continuing down the Valley of Jehoshaphat, we came to the pools of Siloam. There are two—the upper and lower—and one is used as a sewer for the city. Nothing we have seen was so disappointing. "By cool Siloam's shady rill" is poetic license. But when in vision the poor man blind from his birth rose before me, feeling his way along that path and down those steps into that water, at the command of our Lord, and came up seeing and praising the Great Physician, all the disappointment of physical surroundings were forgotten. Standing at the pool where that miraculous healing took place, I rejoiced to be able to repeat with the one who looked that day for the first time upon the smiling heavens, "One thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see."

Resuming our walk down the valley, we passed the tree which is planted upon the traditional site where the prophet, Isaiah, was sawn asunder, and just below where this valley unites with that of Hinnom we came to Joab's well. Retracing our steps and turning up the Valley of Hinnom, we ascended the hill, Aceldama—"the field of blood." Here we visited a Greek church—the "Church of Judas Iscariot"—which contains many ancient tombs. We crawled into them by the aid of lighted candles, and saw the places where the bones of Judas Iscariot, of Annas, the father-in-law of Caiaphas, and others are supposed to have been buried. The old monk was exceedingly kind, displayed many curious relics, related much history, offered us wine, and was not averse to accepting a little "backsheesh." But the idea of naming a place of Christian worship the "Church of Judas Iscariot"! All the tombs along that ridge—and they are many—are on the foot of the "Hill of Evil Counsel," where the plot was formed to effect the death of our Lord. Up on that hill an old tree is shown which the credulous claim marks the site where Judas hung himself.

The afternoon was devoted to the Mosque of Omar and the old temple inclosure on Mount Moriah. We were accompanied by a kavass—a uniformed and sworded attache of the American consulate, and a Turkish soldier. This is quite unnecessary except to emphasize the propriety of dispensing "backsheesh" liberally, and the privilege of giving the under officials in their trappings not a little satisfaction. We entered the mosque through the "cotton bazaar," believed by some to be the place where our Lord drove out the money-changers. It is well-established that the Mosque of Omar stands on the site where Abraham prepared the altar to offer Isaac in sacrifice, and where the Ark of the Covenant was enthroned in the old temple. The original rock is shown which was first used as a threshing floor by Araunah the Jebusite, then as Abraham's altar, afterward as the high altar in Solomon's Temple. Outside and against a part of original walls of the Temple we saw the Jews' wailing-place. Every day some mourners may be seen, but on Friday afternoons they increase to hundreds, and almost rend the stones with their piteous wailings and loud repetition of Jeremiah's Lamentations.

They drive nails between the stones as memorials of their prayers, and which they hope will continue their pleadings when they are gone. The spectacle was most pathetic. How it indicates the desolation of a people who have ceased to be a nation, and yet their undying attachment to Tabernacle and Temple.

Passing out through the "Court of the Gentiles" and into the narrow streets not far from St. Stephen's Gate, we visited the Church of St. Anna, and the grotto beneath in which she was buried. Adjoining the church is the Pool of Bethesda, so tenderly associated with our Lord's ministry, and where most important excavations have been made in the past several years.

Success of South Carolina's Liquor System.

It seems to have been taken for granted throughout the North that the South Carolina State Dispensary system is a dismal failure. The people of South Carolina, outside of the old liquor interest and certain political circles, have become almost unanimous in the opinion that the system is a splendid success. Gov. Evans, when in the Legislature, was the chief promoter of the Dispensary law, and now that he is in the executive chair, he is quite as staunch in maintaining and enforcing the system as was Gov. Tillman. Railway road-masters, and other men familiar with conditions throughout the State, are enthusiastic in their acconnt of the good effects that the law has already produced. Drunkenness and disorder have decreased to a remarkable extent; and whereas the negro laborer was formerly accustomed to spend his week's earnings in carousing on Saturday night and Sunday, he is now spending more upon his family, or else saving his money to buy land. The ten or twelve State dispensaries in the city of Charleston, which have taken the place of scores or hundreds of saloons, are as openly conducted and as orderly as any drug store, and are absolutely closed at sundown. The effect upon the quiet and order of the city has been too transforming to admit of any denial. Reports from country towns throughout the State are to the effect that the closing of the old bar rooms in favor of the new dispensaries has been attended with results that have converted almost every good citizen to a belief in the present system. In view of the widely circulated reports in disparagement of the South Carolina dispensaries, these facts ought to be given a wide publicity.—Review of Reviews.

Dr. W. B. Palmore on "Perfect in Love."

The leading editorial in the St. Louis Advocate, of April 24, on "Perfect in Love," is a surprise to the many friends and admirers of Dr. W. B. Palmore, the editor. It is surprising that a man of Dr. Palmore's intelligence, manly honesty and high experience in grace will represent the Bishops of the Southern Methodist Church as teaching "the second-blessing theory of sanctification" in their last Quadrennial Address.

If Dr. Palmore did not know better than this, he is to be pitied; and if he knew better, and then wrote as he did, he ought to repent.

In order to sanctification and perfect love, there must be "truth in the inward parts." This article is not perfectly truthful. It states, as a fact, what every man, who understands the question and is not blinded by a theory, knows is not a fact.

A contributor, Rev. R. H. Cooper, stated in that number of the St. Louis, that "The Bishops and leading men of Methodism do not, nor have not, professed the second blessing; neither do they teach it as a doctrine of the church."

This editorial is in reply to this contributor, and is misleading—perhaps, unintentionally so.

Dr. Palmore must know that the term, "the second blessing," has come to have a strictly technical meaning. It means now one single thing: "A second work subsequent to regeneration whereby natural depravity is taken out and the heart made holy." It is said to be the "washing away of original sin." This brother, Cooper, said, "The Bishops did not profess, and do not teach it, as a doctrine of the church." This is "the second-blessing theory of sanctification."

In reply, Dr. Palmore says: "If they, the Bishops, do not teach the second blessing as a doctrine of the church, they have ceased to do so since the opening day of the last General Conference."

This discussion between Dr. Palmore and his contributor is not about sanctification, or being made perfect in love in this life, but it is about a theory of sanctification—about how and when one is made perfect in love.

The Bishops said not one word on this subject in their last Quadrennial Address. It is neither honest nor truthful to say they did. Anyone who sees that in the words they used reads it in there, and makes the Bishops say what they did not say—what every one of them would flatly deny saying.

Dr. Palmore says, "Two of our living Southern Bishops are in the experience" of the second blessing. As the words, "second blessing," are now used, this statement is not true. Name the men and get them to certify to the fact. To bear testimony is a part of the second-blessing theory.

The idea of Arminian Methodist Bishops teaching, as a doctrine of the Methodist Church, that "this corruption of nature doth remain in them that are regenerate"! This is fundamental in "the second-blessing theory of sanctification." The Bishops of the Southern Methodist Church are too well versed in Arminian Methodist theology and the Word of God to teach rank Calvinism of this sort. When they say in a Quadrennial Address that the doctrine of our church is, "that the corruption of nature that is naturally engendered of the offspring of Adam doth remain in the regenerate, and that this necessitates a subsequent and second cleansing to take out this remaining corruption," they will hear such a storm as they never heard in all their lives. They have never said any such thing, and they never will say it. I do not believe that any one of them, in all the history of the church, ever professed to have an experience that implied this monstrous absurdity in doctrine and scriptural teaching. I am ready to believe that two—in fact, all ten of them—have been made perfect in love in this life. I know no other way to account for their silence, patience and gentleness under the flings that are made at them, and under the false and absurd things they are represented as teaching.

Dr. Palmore represents Apollos as knowing nothing of the second blessing until he learned it from Aquila and Priscilla. Then the words, "and expounded unto him the way of God more perfectly," mean to teach one the doctrine of sanctification according to the second-blessing theory. The "way of God perfectly" is to regenerate a man by the Holy Ghost—to make him a new creature—and leave the original sin in him, to be taken out by a second and subsequent work.

I am afraid zeal for a theory of sanctification has made Dr. Palmore an unsound and unsafe interpreter of God's Holy Word. He "wrests" the Word of God as he does the last address of the Bishops.

Dr. Palmore's correspondent says: "The Bible nowhere teaches the second blessing."

If this be true, it is fatal to that theory. Here was a fine opening for Dr. Palmore to prove his contention by the Word of God. To this specific statement he enters a general denial, and lugs in a lot of irrelevant matter that has no bearing whatever on the question under discussion. If the Doctor will prove the second-blessing theory of sanctification, as now held and taught by the Word of God, the old authors and living Bishops need not be quoted any more. "To the law and the testimony."

One plain text of Scripture on doctrine or duty is worth more than all the addresses of all the Bishops since the world began. Yours,

GILDEROY.

In the Living Present.

Frozen milk, in the shape of a brick, is now furnished housekeepers in London. It is sold by weight.

General Booth, in a lecture, after his return to England, on the subject, "Darkest America," remarked that Americans, as a rule, are more practical in their religious work than Englishmen.

The physical condition of their offspring should be the parents' chief concern. In a frail, ailing body the brightest soul will grow dim. Life becomes a burden. The children of the poor are generally healthier than those of the opulent. Have not the bare feet, bare head, coarse food of the former to do with it? This is the age of over-indulgence and effeminacy.

Tobacco-chewing is a disgusting habit. Unoleanly, unnatural. Nauseating to associates. Wastage of money. But what of the revolting practice of chewing gum? Heard a young woman energetically inveigh against chewing tobacco, who was, at the same time, fiercely chewing gum. Eating solid food, requiring chewing, would prevent the hideous practice of rumination.

Archdeacon Farrar remarked that every nation had its peculiar national devil. That of Great Britain was intemperance. He assures that English wage-workers spend sixty per cent. of their income for intoxicants. Can you tell which is, possibly, the national devil of our country? Which of the following: Dishonesty, pride, inordinate lust of more, extravagance, stinginess, gluttony, or intemperance? Which?

Relating to the Manitoba public school agitation, the Catholic World characteristically remarks: "Education in that province must be controlled by our church, even though it requires bloodshed."

Our South American republics are famous for dishonest practices. Even the Baring Bros., of London, fell victim to their duplicity. The various governments did not interfere so long as the sufferers were private citizens; but recently Nicaragua objected to paying a just claim of the British government. Forthwith said government has taken possession of Corinto, the principal port of Nicaragua, in order to enforce its claim.

No. The pulpit has not lost its power. Man is the same now as he has always been. Nothing but God's grace can satisfy the aching void within. Where that grace is literately and wisely set forth, numerous attendance is the result. It is only those pulpits, disgraced by stereopticon views and discussions of political economy, ethics and sociology, which witnessed empty pews. Have no tears on that account.

ICH DIEN.

The great Methodist demonstration in Rome, which was to have been held in September of this year, is to be postponed until immediately after the Quadrennial Conference next year. It is thought that June would be a more attractive month for a visit to Rome than September.

LIKE HIM.

BY MRS D. W. OATES.

That Mind, which planned the noiverse,
Doth wondrous powers to me disperse;
Save sun and moon and stars their place,
Reserved for me the power of grace.

His thought, which lives in every flower,
And measures out each passing hour,
Which moves in every gentle breeze,
This thought lives more in me than these.

God moves in orbit infinite,
Thinks, speaks, and does that which is right;
Infinite love measures each thought,
His every plan with blessing fraught.

Omniscient, omnipresent he,
Like him in these I can not be;
But of his love and truth doth he
Design that I like him should be.

A channel for his love to pour,
On all I meet, its precious store;
His great design, that I should find
A heaven below in a tranquil mind.

Bro Halley Again.

REJOINDER NO. 3.

Bro. H. bases his assertion that Methodists reject the authority of Christ, in the second place, on the fact that we do not practice immersion to the exclusion of other modes of administering baptism. He says: "The Lord Jesus Christ commands the immersion of those who believe on him as one of his positive ordinances. . . . Methodists profess to love and obey Christ, yet they set this plain command aside, and practice something else in its place that has no resemblance to the ordinance which Christ commanded, nor semblance of authority in God's Word, and rests absolutely on nothing but man's authority."

This is sound Baptist doctrine. It is iterated and reiterated in Baptist pulpits, church papers, and elsewhere, so frequently, and with such a dogmatic air of confidence and superior learning, that many uninformed people really think that it is so. How such can have any respect for us, and even ask us to pray in their meetings, is one of the unsolved problems. The man who professes to accept Christ as his Teacher and Savior, and then rejects one of his "plain commands," is lacking in common honesty. He certainly does not possess the worthiness of Christian character.

Of making many books on baptism, there is no end; but, then, we are commanded not to be "weary in well-doing." A short chapter on this subject may not be out of place in the ADVOCATE. Bro. H., we must conclude, has never read anything but Baptist books, and he certainly needs some elementary information on the subject of baptism. Then there are others who claim that they have a right to look to the ADVOCATE for an occasional defense of "the faith once delivered to the saints." Of course, an exhaustive discussion of this subject will not be attempted. I shall simply point out some of the insuperable obstacles in the way of accepting the Baptist doctrine of exclusive immersion.

1. Baptist teaching on this subject is not sustained by the lexicons of the Greek language. The confidence with which immersionists appeal to the Greek lexicons, in support of their assumptions, is astonishing; and the manner in which they mutilate the definitions of "baptizo" is humiliating. As an illustration of the unreliability of Baptist authors when they profess to quote from Greek lexicons, I refer to Dr. J. T. Christian's book, entitled "Immersion." He says: "When we desire the definition of a word, we naturally turn to a dictionary, or lexicon, for its meaning. This I now do." Then he quotes from twenty-four Greek lexicons. As he affirms that he takes no statement at second-hand, one would suppose that he honestly gives the definitions of "baptizo" as found in these authors. Does he do so? I have before me five of the twenty-four, and if he has handled the others as he has these five, it is due to truth to say that he has garbled the definitions of "baptizo" in every case. Here is an example. Dr. C. quotes from Green's New Testament lexicon as follows: "'Baptizo,' to dip, to immerse." This is all. Anyone, ignorant of the truth, would suppose that all the definition given by Green is contained in these two words. But is that all? I quote from the lexicon itself as follows: "'Baptizo,' to dip, immerse; to cleanse or purify by washing; to administer the rite of baptism; to baptize." Dr. C. gives Green's definition correctly as far as he goes, but he stops before getting fairly started. In this way the other four lexicons have been handled. After having adroitly made the impression on the mind of his unwary reader that Greek lexicons give nothing but "to dip" and "to immerse" as meanings of "baptizo," Dr. C. seeks to escape the severity of adverse criticism by closing his chapter on lexicons with the remark that they all "give dipping as the primary meaning;" but as he adds, "if the word has any secondary meaning, it is in accordance with this idea," he must stand convicted of having mutilated these lexicons for unholy sectarian purposes. Not one of the five in my possession gives "to dip," and words with like meaning, as the only definition of "baptizo." Whether they give "to sprinkle" as one of its definitions, or not, is of no importance. If they give anything except "to dip," "to immerse," and the like, as definitions of "baptizo," they can not be appealed to as sustaining the Baptist usage of exclusive immersion. They not only do this, but Dr. Ditzler quotes twenty-nine lexicons and ancient authors, who define the word, as giving the much hated "sprinkle" as one of these definitions.

2. Baptist teaching on this subject is not sustained by the New Testament usage of the Greek word "baptizo." Baptists claim that the primary meaning of this word, in profane Greek, is "to immerse," and that it must have this meaning in the New Testament. If so, must not every other Greek word used in the New Testament have its primary meaning also? Surely, no one will say that this is not a necessary conclusion. All words, with equal claims, must be treated alike. If the primary meaning of "baptizo" is "to immerse," and we are forced to give it that meaning in the New Testament, then every other Greek word must have its primary meaning also. Let us apply this principle to a few New Testament Greek words, and note the result.

Take, first, the Greek word "pneuma," translated "spirit." Its primary meaning is "wind." Give it this meaning in the New Testament, and the idea of a human spirit, and of God as a Spirit, is at once eliminated from the entire book. Substitute "wind" for "spirit," in any passage in the New Testament, and see the absurdity of the result. Take, for instance, John iv, 24: "God is a Wind, and they that worship him must worship him in wind and in truth." The primary meaning of "proskollao" is "to glue to." Take out the words, "shall cleave to," in Matt. xix, 5 and substitute the primary meaning of the original; then read: "For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall glue to his wife." This would force some popular preachers to invest largely in glue. The word translated "groaned," in John xi, 33, is "embrimaomai." Its primary meaning is "to snort." Read, "He snorted in the spirit, and was troubled." The original for "weary," in Luke xviii, 5, is "hupopiazo." Its primary meaning is "to strike under the eye." This would make the judge say of the widow, "I will avenge her, lest by her continued coming she strike me under the eye."

These are a few illustrations of the hodge-podge that would be made of the New Testament by the adoption of this method of translation. If the primary meaning of "baptizo" is "to immerse," which some reputable scholars deny, may it not have a secondary meaning in the New Testament? The possibility of this no one can doubt, and the certainty of it is manifest when we examine the usage of the word.

L. CARLEY.

"My Experience"

One's experience in spiritual communion with the Father is very sweet, and to himself, at least, very sacred. These experiences, too, have their uses as well as their abuses. They are collateral witnesses to the truth, but, apart from the basis truth on which they rest, they can establish nothing. We believe in ultimate salvation—i. e., salvation in heaven—but we can never experience it in life. We believe that Christ died for sinners, but we can not experience that fact. Yet our experiences corroborate these great truths, for we realize that we are now saved, and by grace can continue in this state through life. Experience, therefore, relates to the effect of a truth, or doctrine, as that truth or doctrine relates to our comprehension of it. The grasp which the intelligence has on any given doctrine will determine the character of the experience based on that doctrine.

Every preacher who has ever been much among the more ignorant people, e. g., our colored population, knows that the doctrine of a divine call enters into those uncultured minds as a matter of oral intelligence. By his experience the colored brother expounds this doctrine as "something said to me," etc. To the intelligent it is a thing of consciousness and not of hearing. Hence it is clear, I think, that one's experience must be expounded in the light of the truth, and, not reversely, become exponent of the truth. Here was Wesley's great blunder. Shut out from the better society of England, Ireland and Wales, his labors were largely among the most ignorant subjects of George III. There were not many Fletchers, and Clarks, and Lady Huntingtons in those days who were accessible to Mr. Wesley.

The tremendous emphasis which he placed on the necessity of a complete victory over sin fired the hearts of his hearers with a holy zeal not balanced by a cultivated intelligence. The inevitable tendency was to enthusiasm, if not fanaticism. In Maxwell's case, Wesley being the judge, it ran into the wildest fanaticism. It is worse than folly to deny a peculiar adaptation in Wesley's mental make-up to this line of religious thought. He was not without some of the superstitious notions of his age. This defect pandered to that in the masses, and the crude experiences of the people became a rule for the interpretation of doctrine. Recently this last of doctrinal truth has been revived from its Rip-Van-Winkle nap, until some of our church papers are very much filled with it. Not only numerous persons, in their communications, appeal to their own experiences in order to prove the truth of a doctrine, but editors—in, at least, two instances—draw upon the diaries of the sainted dead for the same purpose. If this be allowable, we may draw upon the experiences of that fanatical people once quite numerous in England—the Dancers—to prove that the dance is one of the proper, and most enjoyable methods, of worshiping God!

If I am to guage my understanding of a doctrine by somebody's experience of that doctrine, in its application to their understanding, there is, for me, no escape from the doctrine of "faith cure," nor hardly any other proposition which one may assert as a matter of experience. In political economy the experiences of the rich establishes in their minds the doctrine of "contraction," so as to make money scarce and of great commercial value. But, at the same time, these same conditions establish in the minds of the poor the doctrine of "expansion," so as to make money cheaper and easier to get. Both doctrines, though established on experience, can not be correct. Some one's experience has led him into error. Each has tried his experience by all the realities of life, and each clings to his doctrine as the truth to the exclusion of all else. The fact is overlooked that experience depends upon conditions. A poor man can not experience the advantages of wealth, nor a rich man the disadvantages of poverty. A sinner can not (as a sinner) experience a sense of pardon, nor can a child of God experience a sense of condemnation. Experience may establish the fact of various stages and processes in the salvation of any given person, but can not settle the question that every other soul must be saved by degrees. At the inception of the Christian life of one there may be "a remnant of sin" left in his heart—a root of bitterness; but this does not prove that such is God's method, for another experience a complete victory from the "entering in of light."

Unless one can experience a doctrine, how can experience settle a doctrinal question? Doctrines are set forth in the Word as guides for our minds, which direct our conduct. Whatever sensations one may experience from any given line of conduct will, in the nature of things, depend upon his understanding of the doctrine upon which he acts. The doctrine of grace — God's help in time of need — must not be set aside because at some point one broke down under temptation, although one experienced an inadequacy of grace at the fatal moment. And if I experience an unusual feeling of grace to-day, I must not conclude that I was without grace yesterday. Whatever one's experience may be, he must take the doctrines as reason grasps them.

Because one is caught out in a rain and a case of la grippe follows, he must not conclude that getting wet gives men the grip. So, if he finds that when he professed religion, a "residue" of sin was left in his heart, he must not conclude that regeneration does not regenerate, nor that "whosoever is born of God" is still carnal and unholy.

I like to hear Christian men tell "what the Lord has done" for their souls; for now and then I find a case parallel to my own, out of which I derive great comfort. But for one experience to be handed out by which all experiences are to be shaped, and by which doctrine is to be interpreted, is rather more than Moses, or Job, or Paul ever attempted. A young child's experience would lack a great deal of measuring up to that of an intelligent adult.

No. Religion is not a matter of headgear; but it has very little effect on a heart above which there is no head, or a brainless one. A child can not take in as much religious thought and glory as a man. Yet the child and the man have their respective experiences, differing according to their comprehension of the doctrines under which they act, and the doctrines can no more be interpreted by the one than by the other experience.

If the brethren who want to establish the Residue Theory as a Bible truth will reason "out of the Scriptures," and not out of the experiences of men as liable to err as themselves, they will succeed better. Claiming a Bible doctrine, they should give the proofs from "ultimate rule."

I once knew a preacher who claimed that he had always to pursue an exactly opposite course to that dictated by his conscience. "My conscience," said he, "is always wrong." This was his experience, and this was the doctrine he preached till the Quarterly Conference stopped him. The Ana Baptists of the twelfth century based most of their wild and reckless conduct on their experiences. The experience of the Catholics drove the Huguenots from France. Experience "burned the bodies of men for the good of their souls." Until experience becomes uniform in different conditions of life, and in different degrees of intelligence—under different creeds and religious trainings—and tends, in every case, to one point in life and human destiny, it can not, with any show of reason, be paraded as exponent of doctrinal truth.

Why I Went to Japan.

MR. EDITOR: Some friends have advised me to make through the ADVOCATE an explanation of the circumstance under which I went to Japan. Inasmuch as a purse of nearly $200 was made up at the time of my leaving, for the purpose of buying my railroad and steamship tickets, and as many doubtless contributed under the impression that my stay in Japan would be permanent, in order to exonerate myself, and to save the mission cause from injury, I explain as follows:

On a street car in Nashville Dr. Lambuth asked me to find for him some one to fill a position in the state school for boys at Matsuyama, Japan. The State authorities had asked Bro. Moseley, our missionary at Matsuyama, to get them a teacher from America; and Bro. Moseley had referred the matter to Dr. Lambuth, urging him to get a Christian teacher at once, lest, failing in this, the authorities should secure some atheist for the position.

Learning from Dr. Lambuth that the conditions were such as would allow the teacher to return after one year, before leaving the car I told him that I might go myself for the purpose of the education that would be in a year's work in Japan and the return trip through Europe and the East. Two weeks were given me for considering the case, at the end of which time I agreed to go, but left Dr. Lambuth free to find some one who would go with the intent of staying and eventually become an employee of the Mission Board.

After some weeks, no one else having been secured, I began to arrange for my departure. The Japanese government was to pay salary from date of arrival at Matsuyama; expenses of travel were to be borne by myself. At this juncture Rev. T. L. Mellen, then presiding elder of the Meridian district, Mississippi Conference, knowing that I had the year before served the poorest charge in his district, and that my bank account was very small, began, much to my surprise, to raise the $200 named above. He did this in that praiseworthy zeal for missions which is a characteristic of the man, and in confident hope that once in Japan I would remain. Whilst I appreciated this and really needed the money, I regretted it, because it would not look well in case I carried out my plan of an early return. I almost determined to refuse the money, but finally decided to accept it and use it for some good work in Japan.

Accordingly, soon after getting to work in Matsuyama, Bro. Moseley and I started "The Matsuyama Reading Room," hoping thus to reach the 1,000 students of the higher schools of the city and the 1,800 soldiers stationed there. He was to supply the best Christian periodicals published in Japanese, and I was to expend about $50 per annum on books, and a few American periodicals. During the 20 months of my stay there $100 was thus expended; and I recently wrote for information concerning the reading room with a view to making purchases. This is the reply:

Matsuyama, Japan, March 9, 1895.

Dear Bro. Hawkins—

What to do with the reading room is a question. It has been kept open on the usual plan since you left, with good results. But my time at Matsuyama will soon be up, and then what shall be done? Will write again.

Your brother, C. B. MOSELEY.

My week days were devoted to the literary work at the school. The Sundays and certain evenings were spent in missionary labors which cost the church nothing, save that the mission paid part of my house rent.

The missionaries, Bishop Key, and my intimate friends at home understood all the time that my stay in Japan was to be temporary.

A Model Sunday-school.

MR. EDITOR: As our Sunday-school Magazine has lately had considerable to say about Bro. J. R. Pepper, of First Church, Memphis, Tenn., and his wonderful Sunday-school, no doubt some facts and figures in regard to this school would be appreciated by some of the readers of the ADVOCATE.

In the first place, the Sunday-school room is modern in all its apartments, and is equal to any in the South in point of comfort, finish, and adaptability to the ends for which it was designed. There are twelve or fourteen beautiful class-rooms, arranged in amphitheatrical form, each with the necessary appliances for teaching the lesson, such as maps, charts, blackboards, etc. These rooms all open into the main Sunday-school room, and all open toward the superintendent's desk, with which they are connected by a system of electric bells. On the main floor are to be found the junior classes, and on the gallery floor are the more advanced members of the school. When needed, the whole of the Sunday-school room may be opened into the main auditorium of the church, thereby converting the whole into one large room, as was done during the session of the late General Conference. The total membership of the school is about 825, presided over by 31 officers and teachers, and divided into 16 classes, which are carefully graded. On Children's Day the deserving ones are promoted and given certificates of merit. The largest class in the school—and to me the most interesting one—is the infant class of 275 little tots. This is quite a nice Sunday-school in itself. It is presided over by one of the best teachers in the school, and she seems specially adapted to teaching this class. This teacher, or rather superintendent of the infant department, has ten teachers, a secretary, and a musical director to assist her. There is another class of about 100 bright young business men, presided over by one of the leading business men of Memphis. Another interesting class is the old people's Bible class, of about 60 members, whose ages range from 30 to 80 years. They have finished the round of classes of the school, and are, we might say, taking a post-graduate course. They select their own line of study. Another feature of the school is its orchestra, which is very superior, and is composed of about a dozen instruments. It has to be heard to be appreciated. This school has in the last three years raised over five thousand dollars for the building fund of the church, besides paying all its own running expenses.

During the New Orleans Cotton Exposition I took occasion one day to go to the power-house, where great fires were burning and power was being generated to run all the machinery of the great Exposition; so when I was visiting this school last Winter, and Bro. Pepper was showing me around the various departments, he came to a little room, and, opening the door, he stepped reverently inside, and remarked: "This is the power-room. Here I come with the teachers just before the opening of the session of the school, and we pray to God for guidance and power." No wonder that the machinery of that school runs smoothly when God is the power behind it. No doubt many of our schools fail to do approved work for God because the power-room is lacking.

I was present in the basement of the church one Wednesday evening, upon invitation of Bro. Pepper to be present at the teacher's meeting. At six P. M. sharp we sat down to a nice hot lunch, which had been provided by some of the lady teachers, as is their custom, and when lunch was over we spent a delightful hour in the study of the lesson, with Bro. Pepper to lead. Each teacher comes prepared with an outline of the lesson, that shows that hours have been devoted to the study, and when they so come, they are prepared to give as well as to receive help. This interchange of ideas brings about unanimity of teaching and purity of doctrine.

Bro. Pepper is ably assisted in his school by his assistant superintendent, Bro. R. H. Trent, a young man of remarkable qualifications for so important a position.

Selections.

The Sunday-School Times has it that the chief virtue of some persons would seem to be in their freedom from vices. To abstain or to withhold appears to be their ideal. They are too busy with the avoidance of fault and error to take time to do positive good. They do not realize that virtue is an activity, and that the person who has no other record than the negative one of avoidance will make a poor showing in the great day of account. The vice that is simply omitted, leaving a mere vacancy in the soul's existence, at the best counts only zero. But the virtue that crowds a vice out, and puts itself into the soul as a vital force, counts one, or more.—Pulpit.

Let every person bear in mind that each time he thinks and harbors an evil thought, that he has lengthened the distance between himself and the immortal goal, and that every time he thinks a good thought he has decreased the distance. It is thus men journey to hell or to heaven; they make the distance long or short by their thoughts. Dying does not lead them into one or the other, but brings them to a mile-post where they can tell how far off from or how near to they are to the immortal state of consciousness.

The men who are engaged in the destructive criticism of the Bible modestly claim that they have a monopoly of the brains of the church. Possibly they have, but there are little backwoods preachers who report more conversions in a single year than all the destructive critics have reported from their charges since destructive criticism became a fad.

To the Women of the Louisiana Conference W. F. M. S.

We have within us the possibility and the beginning of better missionary work for the present year. Words of cheer are coming from the mission fields, and surely the response from every heart must be: "I will do my part, will render unto my Lord his reasonable service, more and better than ever heretofore." Favorable reports are received from Shanghai and from Hong Kong. They have had a gracious revival, adding scores of them that are being saved. We consider this not only a significant, but a wonderful fact, that a copy of the New Testament was presented to the Empress of China on her sixtieth birthday by the Protestant women of Shanghai. The gift was received with undisguised pleasure by the Empress, and she immediately ordered a copy of the Old Testament from a Christian book store in the capital. "The Emperor in Pekin," said Dr. Lambuth, "seeks in the Christian Bible the hidden springs of national power. Surely, the hour for China's redemption has come."

From Brazil, from Mexico, from the Indian Mission, and from the fields of the General Board, the sentiment is that "after long years of sowing, the reaping-time draws nigh." The Spirit is moving on the people in a wonderful manner. "There are open doors for ten times the force at work." Surely, this is encouraging. Decades of prayer are answered here. Consecrated souls have besought this thing, and, lo! the nations are fast wide open to-day beseeching us to come with our gospel and our Christ.

For either of three things St. Paul would have been notable: as a missionary, as a missionary, or as a Christian martyr. He was born gifted, and readily received his culture while sitting at the feet of Gamaliel. His martyrdom was but a momentary pang, but his suffering as a missionary, bearing, believing, hoping, and enduring all things, until he was ready to be "offered up"—there was grandeur in that! "For out of much affliction and anguish of heart I write unto you, with many tears; not that ye should be grieved, but that ye might know the love that I have more abundantly unto you."

It is not required of us to be martyrs, or workers of miracles, or prophets, or apostles with tongues of fire, but it is required of us everyone, as we shall be judged in that great day, to give wings to the good news of salvation; to exalt our Lord Christ among the people afar off. "O Zion, that bringest good tidings, get thee up into the high mountain; O Jerusalem, that bringest good tidings, lift up thy voice with strength; lift it up, be not afraid; say to the cities of Judah, Behold your God!" We have but a little while to work; yet eternity hinges on that little while.

The American Messenger relates an incident: A foreign missionary recently told of a woman who, on a schoolteacher's salary of $1,000, lived on one-half, and with the other half supported a substitute in China. She felt that she was really two persons and carried out her life-long desire to be a foreign missionary. She received a letter every week from her substitute, prayed for her by name every day, and realized the truth of what a friend of hers had said, namely: "This teacher serves the Lord twenty-four hours a day, and practically lives the life of the one who serve him day and night, while she antipodes her substitute is working while she sleeps."

Our great missionary Bishop has been among us. His clarion call to triumphant faith in the success of missions, as he has seen their results around the world, stir to burning the soul of the church. With vivid touches he paints the marvelous picture of individuals and hundreds saved from gross idolatry to a strong Christian living and glorious Christian dying; then rings out in magnificent voice: "Does it pay? Does it pay to send the gospel? I tell you, my friends, it does pay!" He assures us that the only tones of despondency he has heard have been at home. The missionaries, those grand spirits abiding in "love's divine self-abnegation," are jubilant with hope, and buoyant with faith in the work, which to every one of them shows prospects "bright as the promises of God."

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. F. B. Ormond, Herbert, Miss.: "The Lord is prospering us on the Linwood charge. We have met every appointment to date. Congregations have been large and attentive, and we feel that our labor is not in vain in the Lord."

Rev. H. P. Lewis, Summit, Miss.: "We are still holding the fort in Summit, the best we know how. We get a little discouraged at times, yet we try to hold on, pray on, work on, doing the very best we know. Our congregations are good; Sunday-school work moving on well. Our prayer meetings are well attended. We have a church debt hanging over us, which gives the pastor no little concern. I have not been able to look after this matter, and others seem to be waiting for their pastor to take the lead; hence we are doing almost nothing in the way of liquidating our church debt."

Rev. B. T. Crews, Pastor, Mansfield, La.: "We are moving along very goodly here, working, hoping and praying for a gracious revival in the near future. We have a goodly number of as good and faithful people in our church here as is to be found in any church in the Conference, and I do believe that the good Lord will honor their faith and work in a revival and upbuilding of the church, though he may have to send severe afflictions and judgments on the people to awaken them. Our people remembered us with a dray-load of very excellent and substantial provisions as an Easter offering. May God reward them with spiritual blessings in great abundance! Our presiding elder, Bro. Sheppard, is in favor with the people of his entire district."

WESSON, MISS.

During his meeting at Wesson Dr. Carradine publicly called attention to the Tennessee Methodist, distributed ample copies and urged the congregation to subscribe. Now, the copies distributed (April 11) contained a fulsome praise of Dr. Carradine, and, among other things, spoke of his freedom from vanity and his general humility. I respectfully suggest that such an advertisement of one's self is not calculated to impress the unbiased observer with the preacher's humility. The visiting preacher obtained the blessing the day before I got there, and during the several hours that I was in his company talked in a complaining tone about the hard times he would have among his brethren. He said that the Mississippi Conference was dominated by rings; that certain preachers were always provided for; that he would have to be moved to make room for the Conference pets, etc. And yet he was rejoicing in the blessing of perfect love; all inbred sin removed. Something wrong somewhere, brethren. VERITAS.

DR. CARRADINE AT WESSON.

It was my pleasure, as well as privilege, to attend the Carradine meeting at Wesson, Miss. I was there only two days. Heard Bro. Carradine preach four sermons. Having read all that "Rex B." and Bro. Featherstun had to say about Bro. C. and his theory, etc., I listened with intense interest to Bro. Carradine, watched him closely from various standpoints. I have been partially acquainted with Bro. C. since he first joined Mississippi Conference many years ago. I have always regarded him as being a faithful, earnest expounder of the Word of God. One of the best sermons I ever heard on "Wrestling Jacob" was preached by Bro. C. at Seashore Camp Ground a few years before he entered into the experience of sanctification, some six years ago.

After hearing him again, paying close attention to what I heard, weighing carefully every word he uttered, text he referred to in his sermons, together with his interpretation of the same, etc., I arrived at this conclusion: He, Bro. Carradine, is a faithful, earnest expounder of God's Word, and God is abundantly owning and blessing his labors in the conversion of sinners, reclamation of backsliders, and in the sanctification of believers. Would that more of our preachers—yes, all of us—were "baptized with the baptism he is baptized with." He is the happiest looking man in the pulpit I ever saw, or was when I heard him in Wesson.

Bro. Carradine does not boast of his perfection. Far from it. He says he knows his head is not perfect in all respects. He is liable to mistakes; he does not deny that. He claims to have everything he has on the altar—Christ Jesus, and God sanctifies him. Man consecrates; God sanctifies.

I was born and raised in a sanctified home. My mother was a sanctified Christian. She lived it, she sang it, she talked it. For many years her pure sanctified life was a mystery to me. It is all plain now—"glory to the name of Jesus!"—and it has been for several years.

Let me say to all our brethren who have the blessed experience of perfect love: Don't return "evil for evil, or railing for railing." If a brother kicks at you, don't kick back. If he stabs you, pray for and love him still. Be watchful and prayerful. Keep humble and sweet. "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good. Abstain from all appearance of evil. . . . I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it." (I. Thes. v, 21-24.) H. P. OBITUARIES.

YORK—WM. L. YORK died March 25, 1895, at his home two miles north of Yazoo City, aged forty years six days. The writer preached his funeral at Locust Grove Church, Yazoo county, in the presence of several relatives and friends, and we laid his remains beside his wife who had preceded him about two years.

Bro. York was a member of the M. E. Church, South, and considered a good man, though the loss of his Christian wife so saddened his heart and home that he almost despaired and neglected many of his Christian duties. I talked with Bro. York and told him that he must not give up, but look to God. He wept. Yes, we wept together. A few months ago Bro. York told me that he was trying to live right, and that he didn't think he would be here long. We believe he is at rest at the right hand of God.

Bro. York leaves five children, mother and two sisters to mourn their loss. We say to the aged mother, sisters, fatherless and motherless children: Live so as to all meet in the sweet by-and-by, on that beautiful shore, where parting is no more.

R. T. NOLEN, L. P.

HOPKINS—In the calm of the holy Sabbath evening we laid away to her final rest all that was earthly of dear Grandmother HOPKINS, while the sunshine rested like a benediction over forest and hillside, and the sweet fragrance of the first Spring blossoms came to us with each passing zephyr. A solemn hush rested upon the assembled relatives and friends as the aged Christian minister read the impressive burial service of the church she so loved in her life.

Hours of suffering preceded the death of this Christian saint. Indeed, for years the frail form hardly knew a day of perfect immunity from sickness; but the placid face of the dead showed no trace of the care and suffering that are our earthly heritage. It was as if "his angels were encamped round about her," and I thought, for her, and such as she, it was written, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord!" In all her long life of eighty-five years the faithful hands were ever busy in works of love and charity for those she loved. A good mother, a sincere friend, and a charitable, consistent Christian for sixty-five years.

Away back in the century (1829) she joined the Methodist Church, and to the close of her fourscore years she loved her church and God's people.

Dear grandma! I never entered her presence but I felt the blessing of a great peace descend upon my spirit. In times of trouble or sorrow, "like the benediction that follows after prayer" was the presence of this aged Christian to my soul. To the faithful son and loving daughter, who ministered to her last hours so tenderly, I would say: Lift up your hearts in a prayer of thanksgiving, that the frail, suffering form is at rest—the spirit with the Great Physician—and be comforted.

GODFREY—EDWIN HOLMES GODFREY, M. D., son of Rev. James A. Godfrey (deceased) and Mrs. A. M. Godfrey, was born Jan. 17, 1854, in Clinton, Miss., and died near Bradley, Miss., April 17, 1895. He was first married to Miss Jane Sykes, who died June 16, 1892, leaving three children, one having died. He was married to Miss Almeda Brown, April 13, 1893. Dr. Godfrey leaves an aged mother, an only sister (Mrs. A. Lon Edgar), an affectionate wife, and three children. He was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1869. Later in life he was greatly revived in a meeting, at Waynesboro, Miss., and identified himself with our church at that place. He never moved his membership to the Sturges circuit, though he lived within its bounds and considered the preacher in charge as his pastor. I insisted on his regular attendance at our church in Sturges, but his reply was: "If attend regularly, I will have to neglect our Sunday-school at home, which is the means of training my own and my neighbor's children for God and the right." He continued faithful in the Sabbath-school work near his home till he was called up higher. He sang well and taught the children to sing the praises of God. To know him was to love him. Kind and entertaining to all, everyone was glad to be associated with him. Gone to meet father, daughter and other loved ones.

J. W. TREADWELL.

LANPHEAR—Died, in Chicago, March 24, 1895, Mr. BENJAMIN LANPHEAR. In all the pride of his mature manhood, with a nature fully developed in all the attributes that go to make up a noble, sweet-souled, manly man, and just as sweet hopes of a new life, crowned with all the joys of wedded love with the one woman of all the world, the best and dearest to him, in a home made bright by her presence, and sanctified by her pure affection, the summons came, and Mr. Lanphear was called from earth to pass the confines of the borderland, and enter the presence of his Maker. To all true men he was the thoughtful, genial, sincere, spirited companion, with a heart ever ready to respond to all in distress. To women worthy of respect he was a chivalrous protector, ever seeing in them the reflection of his own dear ones, and bestowing on them the same kindly courtesies which he would wish other men to bestow upon those who were bound to him by the ties of nature or affection, and with the refinements of true nobility throwing the veil of charity over earth's unfortunate ones. Children were naturally drawn to him with a fearless, confiding affection, and even animals seemed to recognize in him one whose hand would ever be lifted in their defense.

Such was Ben. Lanphear; and we do not wonder, when his Master called, that he rested on his promises, and after giving his last thoughts for earth to her whose life was enriched by his love, that he peacefully and happily closed his eyes on scenes of earth to open them to the glorious possibilities of heaven. Making History.

The State of South Carolina is making history on the temperance question. Concerning the general working of her famous Dispensary law, we give in another column what seems to be a very fair and impartial statement from the May number of the Review of Reviews. When we speak of making history, however, we refer not so much to the Dispensary law itself as to the legal complications growing out of the manner of its enforcement. The constitutionality of the law so far as it relates to the sale of intoxicants seems to be conceded. But the chief executive of the State applies the law not only to the sale of liquor, but also to its importation into the State for private use. This raises the question of constitutionality. Has a State the right to prohibit her citizens from importing liquors from other States for their own private use? This is a question which has been raised in a very practical manner.

Some months ago a man named James Donald ordered from New York a barrel of beer, from Baltimore a case of whisky, and from Savannah a case of California wine. He notified the dispensary officials that the order had been placed, and gave them warning that they must not attempt to abridge his constitutional rights. His warning was disregarded. The liquors were seized and confiscated. Thereupon Donald obtained from Judge Simonton, of the United States Court, an injunction restraining the State authorities from attempting to prevent the importation of liquors for private use. The governor now appears upon the scene and orders the entire constabulary of the State to disregard this injunction of the United States Court. His orders are, of course, obeyed. The constabulary are now as of yore ransacking private dwellings in search of liquors and confiscating them whenever found. This makes an interesting case. Suppose it should be decided by the supreme tribunal that the law is unconstitutional, may not the governor pay for his rashness by langnishing for a while behind prison bars? However this may be, the point at issue will soon be decided. As we understand the matter, the entire Dispensary law is not involved—only that feature of it which prohibits the importation of liquors for private use. The right of a State to regulate the liquor traffic in the State in any way it chooses, or to prohibit it altogether, was affirmed by the United States Supreme Court years ago. The decision of this case will be a landmark in the history of the temperance question.

Mr. Wesley on Holiness.

We have taken no part in the second-blessing controversy that has been going on in our columns for nearly a year. We do not propose to do so now; but we deem it appropriate to republish the famous letter of John Wesley to Thomas Maxfield on this subject. These words of the great founder of Methodism, though written more than a century ago, seem as if they might have been written to-day, so accurately do they portray one phase of the religious life of our own age:

"Without any preface or ceremony, which is useless between you and me, I will simply and plainly tell you what I dislike in your doctrine, spirit or outward behavior.

"1. I like your doctrine of perfection, or pure love—love excluding sin; your insisting that it is merely by faith; that consequently it is instantaneous (though preceded and followed by a gradual work), and that it may be now at this instant. But I dislike your saying a man may be as perfect as an angel; that he can be infallible, or above being tempted; or that the moment he is pure in heart he can not fall from it.

"I DISLIKE YOUR directly or indirectly depreciating justification, SAYING A JUSTIFIED PERSON is not in Christ, is not born of God, IS NOT SANCTIFIED, not a temple of the Holy Ghost, or that he can not please God, or can not grow in grace.

"I DISLIKE YOUR SAYING THAT ONE SAVED FROM SIN needs nothing more than looking to Jesus, needs not to hear or think of anything else; believe, believe, is enough; that he needs no self-examination, no times of private prayer; needs not mind little or outward things; and that he CAN NOT BE TAUGHT BY ANY PERSON WHO IS NOT IN THE SAME STATE.

"I DISLIKE YOUR AFFIRMING THAT JUSTIFIED PERSONS IN GENERAL PERSECUTE THEM THAT ARE SAVED FROM SIN, AND THAT THEY HAVE PERSECUTED YOU ON THIS ACCOUNT.

"2. As to your spirit, I like your confidence in God and your zeal for the salvation of souls.

"I DISLIKE SOMETHING WHICH HAS THE APPEARANCE OF PRIDE, OF OVERVALUING YOURSELF AND UNDERVALUING OTHERS, PARTICULARLY THE PREACHERS, THINKING NOT ONLY THEY ARE BLIND AND THAT THEY ARE not sent of God, but even that they are dead—dead to God, and walking in the way to hell; that they are GOING ONE WAY, YOU ANOTHER; THAT THEY HAVE NO LIFE IN THEM, YOUR SPEAKING OF YOURSELVES AS THOUGH YOU WERE THE ONLY MEN WHO KNEW AND TAUGHT THE GOSPEL; AND AS IF NOT ONLY ALL CLERGY, BUT ALL THE METHODISTS BESIDES, WERE IN UTTER DARKNESS.

"I DISLIKE SOMETHING THAT HAS THE APPEARANCE OF ENTHUSIASM; OVERVALUING FEELING AND INWARD IMPRESSIONS; MISTAKING THE MERE WORK OF IMAGINATION FOR THE VOICE OF THE SPIRIT; accepting the means, and undervaluing reason, knowledge and wisdom in general.

"I dislike something that has the appearance of Antinomianism, not magnifying the law and making it honorable; not enough valuing tenderness of conscience and exact watchfulness in order thereto; using faith rather as contradistinguished from holiness than as productive of it

"BUT WHAT I MOST DISLIKE IS YOUR LITTLENESS OF LOVE TO YOUR BRETHREN; YOUR WANT OF MEAKNESS, GENTLENESS, LONG-SUFFERING; YOUR IMPATIENCE OF CONTRADICTION, COUNTING EVERY MAN YOUR ENEMY THAT REPROVES OR ADMONISHES YOU IN LOVE; YOUR BIGOTRY AND NARROWNESS OF SPIRIT, LOVING IN MANNER ONLY THOSE THAT LOVE YOU; CENSORIOUSNESS, PRONENESS TO THINK HARD OF ALL THAT DO NOT EARNESTLY AGREE WITH YOU; IN ONE WORD, YOUR DIVISIVE SPIRIT. Indeed, I do not believe that any of you design or desire a separation: But you do not enough fear, abhor and detest it, shuddering at the very thought. All the preceding tempers tend to it, and gradually prepare you for it.

"3. As to your outward behavior I like the general tenor of your life, devoted to God and spent in good doing.

"I dislike your appointing such meetings as hinder others from attending either the public preaching or their class or band.

"I dislike your spending so much time in several meetings, as many that attend can ill spare it from other duties of their calling unless they omit either their preaching or their class or band. This naturally tends to dissolve our society by cutting the sinews of it.

"As to your more public meetings, I like the praying fervently and largely for all the blessings of God. I know much good has been done hereby and I hope much more will be done. But I dislike several things therein. The using improper expressions in prayer, sometimes too pompous and magnificent, extolling yourselves rather than God, and telling him what you are, not what you want. Your affirming people will be justified or sanctified just now. Your affirming they are when they are not. THE BIDDING THEM SAY, 'I BELIEVE.' The bitterly condemning any that oppose, calling them wolves, etc., and pronouncing them hypocrites or not justified.

"Read this calmly and impartially before the Lord in prayer. So shall the evil cease and the good remain. And you will then be more than ever united to your affectionate brother.

"J. WESLEY."

"Canterbury."

Sins of Omission.

Duty, from the religious point of view, involves two things: first, the refraining from all known evil in word, thought and action; secondly, the doing of all possible good. Not to take this view of religion is to lower the standard of godliness, and to go directly contrary to the teachings of the New Testament. Under the old dispensation, conformity to the law of commandments and ordinances we may say comprised the whole duty of man. The religion of the New Testament, however, goes far beyond the prohibitory commandments of the Old. The dim light of Judaism, with its exclusiveness, has given place to the noonday splendor of the Sun of Righteousness, who teaches an all-embracing love. Under the gospel dispensation the horizon of religious obligation has been so enlarged as to include unremitting benevolence.

According to the teachings of the New Testament, then, sin is more than "the transgression of the law." We may refrain from all positive evil, and still be guilty sinners in the sight of God; for it is written: "To him that knoweth to do good and doeth it not, to him it is sin." It is not enough that we, as Christians, should keep the Ten Commandments. It is not enough that we avoid even the appearance of evil. As touching the law we may be blameless; but nevertheless we can not say we are without sin, unless we perform faithfully every known duty, unless we do all in our power to help our fellow-men. Vital religion is not merely being good. It consists also in doing good. The truth is, no Christian can keep a pure heart very long unless he be fruitful in good works. Of course, there are some who, by reason of bodily affliction, are cut off from this kind of fruit bearing; but if the desire to render service be present, the Lord blesses his children as graciously as if there had been an actual performance of the intended good.

Sad it is, but nevertheless true, that many church members, as well as non-Christians, base their hopes of salvation upon their harmlessness. In every community there are people who are good in the negative sense—that is, they never do any harm. But when this is said, all is said. As the old saying is, "They are so good as to be good for nothing." Aggressive warfare against existing evils strikes terror to their timid souls. They forget that the citizen of Zion, the member of Christ's spiritual kingdom, must not only "walk uprightly," but must also "work righteousness." While the Christian must be spotless in his life, if he really has the love of God in his heart, he will do with his might what his hand finds to do.

In the twenty-fifth chapter of Matthew the Savior announces the awful truth that at the last great day many will go into everlasting punishment because of their neglect of duty, because of their failure to bring forth fruit. Those on the left, on hearing their condemnation, will ask, saying, "Lord, when saw we thee an hungred, or athirst, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did not minister unto thee? Then shall he answer them, saying, Verily, I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me."

If we habitually neglect any known duty, however small, we can not enjoy conscious communion with God; for his spirit will not bear witness with ours that we are the children of God, unless there be entire consecration. There must be perfect submission coupled with earnest, persevering effort to do the Lord's will, else the consciousness of acceptance will not abide with us. Many instances are on record of men whose lives have been shipwrecked, not because of overt acts of sin, but because of the refusal to yield to some divine impulse, as, for example, to a call to preach.

What a grievous mistake it is to suppose that all sins are sins of commission. The man who, seeing another about to take poison through mistake, utters no warning, is as guilty of his death as if he had himself administered the poison. Thousands of respectable people are to-day under God's displeasure and in danger of eternal damnation because, knowing the way of life, they make no effort to turn men to righteousness; because having it in their power to do good, they do it not. Think you that a preacher, though he be upright in life, is blameless before God if he neglects the preparation of sermons, or if he neglects to visit the sick and the needy? Think you that a well-to-do church member can enjoy the peace of God if he does not give "according as God hath prospered him"? Think you that the Spirit of God will dwell in the heart of a man who, though not a drunkard, or a swearer, or a Sabbath breaker, or an adulterer, habitually neglects private prayer and the reading of the Scripture? What if we do not steal, or swear, or gratify the lusts of the flesh? Can we say we are without sin, if we comfort not the afflicted, if we relieve not the needy, if we pray not for the careless, if we warn not the erring, if we be not abundant in good works?

Think you that the whole duty of parents to their children consists in setting them a good example? What though a mother be angelic in innocence and purity? Is she without blame if she does not teach her children the fear of the Lord? Is she guiltless if she sends them not to Sunday-school, if she makes no effort to lead them to Christ!

In illustration of the truth we have just been emphasizing we reproduce from the Sunday-School Magazine the following beautiful legend of the Middle Ages: "At a certain monastery it was customary for one of the monks to go each evening at sunset to one of the convent gates and dispense charity to the village poor, who assembled there at that hour to receive their gifts. One evening a monk was praying in his cell when there was granted to him a beatific vision of the Savior. At the moment when it seemed to him that heaven had come down to his gloomy room, the bell of the convent gate rang, and he remembered that it was his evening to go and give bread to the poor. He hesitated whether to leave the heavenly vision in order to perform a disagreeable task. But his sense of obligation and the desire to do his duty triumphed over his inclinations. He went; he dispensed charities to the poor, and when he returned and opened the door, a voice said to him: 'If thou hadst staid, I had gone.'" M. M. BLACK.

Let Us Suppose a Case.

Let us suppose that a pastor in every charge to which he is sent works diligently and persistently in the pulpit and out of it to circulate the Kentucky Methodist and the Tennessee Methodist, and makes no effort whatever to circulate the official organ of his own Conference, or the general organ at Nashville. Suppose that in every charge to which this man is sent the circulation of the official organ rapidly decreases, while the circulation of these other papers rapidly increases, and that, too, in territory where other pastors have found no trouble in circulating the Conference organ?

Is this brother loyal to the church? What sense is there in adopting any particular paper as a Conference organ if every member of the Conference is at liberty to circulate any paper he chooses, to the neglect of the Conference organ? It is certainly true that every member of the Annual Conference has the same right in this matter that one has. Now, suppose that all should follow such an example, what would become of the Conference organ?

When our readers get to supposing, let them not suppose that we are describing a nnmerous class.

Not more than a corporal's guard will have the right to raise the howl of the "hit dog" when they read these lines.

He Broke His Vows.

Everyone who joins the M. E. Church, South, promises to attend upon its ordinances and support its institutions. One of the institutions of the church is the Texas Christian Advocate, the organ of the five Texas Conferences and the New Mexico Conference. They are all bound by contract, ratified by all the Conferences, to spread the circulation of the paper.

Now comes a staunch layman and says:

The dear old Advocate is always a welcome guest in our home. It would have been in almost every home on this circuit if our pastor had not been more in sympathy with the little Tennessee Methodist and Way of Faith than he was for the grand old Texas Advocate, which is always ready to build up the church rather than tear it down.—Texas Advocate.

We could produce some literature very similar to this, but prefer not to do so at present. We hope some of our brethren will yet see the error of their way in this matter and become loyal to the church.

O. J. Cheney, a Georgia farmer, has bequeathed two hundred thousand dollars to Mercer University, Macon, Ga. Mercer is to the Baptists of Georgia what Millsaps is to the Methodists of Mississippi. It has already a small endowment and good substantial buildings. We congratulate our Baptist friends upon their good fortune. How long before some rich Methodist in Mississippi or Louisiana will show his love for our divine Lord by making a similar donation to Centenary or Millsaps? There are men who have the money, but they make other uses of it.

A New Book.

OUR REASONS: OR THE SCRIPTURAL BASIS OF OUR FAITH AND PRACTICE. Being the "Articles of Religion" and "General Rules" of the Methodist Churches, with Scripture Texts in Support of Every Proposition. Designed Especially for the Use of Pastors among Converts, and in Sunday-Schools, and in Epworth Leagues. Compiled by Rev. Lyman F. Jackson. Price 10 cents; $1 per dozen by mail; $6 per hundred by express. Columbia, S. C. Published by L. L. Pickett. 1895.

The above is the title in full of a small pamphlet which lies upon our table. The title is accurately descriptive of the work. It takes up our Articles of Religion one by one and cites passages of Scripture in support of them. These Scripture selections seem to have been, in the main, judiciously made. In the second part, which deals with our General Rules, brief notes are given in addition to the Scripture quotations. The work occupies a field of its own, there being so far as we know no work in existence which covers the same ground. Those who desire to know the great fundamentals of Methodism will find them here in a nutshell.

NOTES.

The address of Rev. J. D. Harper is changed from Homer, La., to Arcadia, La.

Rev. F. N. Parker is assisting Rev. A. F. Watkins in a revival meeting at Jackson, Miss.

A notice of our recent trip to the Greenville District Conference will appear in our next issue.

Rev. J. R. Roberson's postoffice is Chappelton, Miss. Let the brethren take note who desire his services in revival work.

We give up our Home Circle Department this week to our correspondents in order to relieve the crowded state of our editorial drawer.

Mrs. Lamar, wife of Rev. A. J. Lamar, of the Alabama Conference, died in Cincinnati on the first instant. She had been ill for some months and was carried to Cincinnati for treatment.

Rev. R. Gilderoy Porter, of the North Mississippi Conference, is booked for a sermon and a lecture at the commencement of Martha Washington College, June 2-4. Those Virginians have something rich and racy in store for them.

The commencement exercises of Edward McGehee College will come off June 9, 10, 11. The annual sermon will be preached by Rev. C. W. Carter, D. D., president of Centenary College, La., and the literary address will be delivered by Hon. L. W. Magruder, of Vicksburg, Miss. Prospects for a most pleasant time are bright.

The Supreme Court of Louisiana has decided that a prize fight is a prize fight, even though the fighters fight with gloves on. So the prize fight, so dear to the heart of New Orleans hoodlumism, has taken its everlasting departure. Louisiana is at the rear, but she is in the procession nevertheless—the procession which is marching onward and upward to a higher plane of civilization. Other sadly needed reforms will come by and by when Rome ceases to be the dominant religious force in politics and society—not before.

From an extended report of Mrs. R. R. Settoon we glean the following facts concerning the recent W. C. T. U. State Convention at Alexandria. Seventy-one delegates were in attendance. The treasurer's report showed $146.50 in the treasury. The address of the president, Mrs. Mary Reed Goodale, was a very masterly one. The address emphasized the fact that the Louisiana W. C. T. U. has never adopted equal suffrage as one of its lines of work. Interesting lectures were given by Mrs. Benjamin, of Michigan; Mrs. Tomlinson, of North Carolina; Mrs. Snell and Miss Belle Kearney, of Mississippi. As a result of the convention twenty-five new names were added to the roll of the local union at Alexandria and a W. C. T. U. was organized with twenty members. A Loyal Temperance Legion was also organized by Miss Kearney with a membership of about seventy-five. A Law and Order League was also organized by the men of the city. These grand results were largely due to the work of Mrs. M. M. Snell and Miss Belle Kearney. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. R. Goodale; corresponding secretary, Mrs. A. M. Zable; recording secretary, Mrs. E. A. White; treasurer, Miss D. A. Neal; vice-president, Mrs. Pharr. Delegates to the National Convention—Mrs. H. C. Pharr, Mrs. E. Blanks, Mrs. M. L. Herring. Resolutions were adopted strongly commendatory of the W. C. T. U. Restaurant, 142 Gravier street, New Orleans.

The Advocate for Seventy Cents.

We are now offering the ADVOCATE for seventy cents a year in connection with Holman's Self-Pronouncing Bible. Figure it this way: The publisher's price of the Bible we offer is $3.15, and it is very cheap at that. Many Bibles inferior to it are selling at from four to five dollars. We give this $3.15 Bible and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE for one year for $3.85. A person who is not a subscriber can not get it for a cent less than $3.15. Is this not putting the ADVOCATE at seventy cents? This Bible has the helps contained in the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the most valuable Bible on the market. Our subscribers who have procured it are enthusiastic in its praise. If you want it, don't delay; otherwise, you may do as some of our subscribers have done in regard to other premiums—get left. See description of it on another page. Everybody ought to have it.

A Bequest to the Louisiana Conference.

CONFERENCE CLAIMANTS REMEMBERED.

On the eight day of December, 1890, Mrs. Emmeline Bynum, of New Orleans, made her will, and by it bequeathed to the Louisiana Conference, for the benefit of the superannuates and widows and orphans of deceased preachers, a large plantation in Grant parish. The only condition imposed was that the Conference should use enough of the revenue of the property to educate at Centenary College a son of the late Rev. Philo Woodwyn and a grandson of Dr. J. B. Walker. The will expressly states that these boys shall be "prepared to enter college" when the Conference takes charge of their education. In about two weeks after the will was executed Mrs. Bynum died and the testamentary executor took charge of the estate; but before he had fairly entered upon the settlement of its affairs he also died. As the Conference was the universal legatee, it was deemed best for me, as president of the Louisiana Conference, to qualify as dative testamentary executor and take possession of the property and settle the succession. A large bond was required, but two of our good friends signed with me as securities and the Civil Court put me in possession. About the time we were ready to wind up the matter, a suit was brought against the estate for $6,000—a claim for personal services rendered Mrs. Bynum during several years of ill-health. The circumstances of the case were such that the Conference thought best to end the suit by a compromise, which was effected at the price of $1,100. Now, we thought, we can settle up. But we were soon confronted with another law suit, brought by distant heirs of Mrs. Bynum, to annul the will. So we had to go into the fight again. After weary months of the "law's delays" the opposition offered to compromise, but we did not see any reason for compromise in this case, and so the suit "dragged its slow length along" until finally the court decided in our favor. Then we had this offer: "If you will give us $3,500, we won't appeal to the Supreme Court and get the decision reversed." This sounded so much like, "You have got us down, but if you will give us a good round sum we will let you up," that we concluded to risk the appeal and its consequences. The law of Louisiana allows one year within which a case may be appealed to the Supreme Court, and so we waited in anxiety for another long twelve months to roll by, expecting every week to hear that our opponents had appealed the case. I am glad to say to the church in Louisiana the time has expired and the appeal has not been taken and the property is ours for good and all.

Now, everybody who has had anything to do with law suits has learned something of the expense attending them. In this case we have had not only the expenses of winding up the succession, such as debts, funeral charges, doctor's bills, court fees, etc., but we have had the expense attending two formidable law suits and also the expense of keeping up the plantation pending the decision of the case. I am thankful to say to the church that we have paid all expenses up to date. We "owe no man anything." This case has been a serious worry to me for more than four years; but personal inconvenience is not to be compared to the good which will come to our Conference claimants from a proper handling of this bequest.

I take this opportunity, in behalf of the Conference, to thank our attorney, H. P. Dart, of New Orleans, for his energy and skill in conducting the case to a successful issue. He was wary and wise in every step he took.

Dots by the Way.

On Thursday, April 25, we took shipping via Mobile and Ohio railroad for Biloxi, the seat of the Seashore District Conference. As we passed the town of Enterprise, we were shown the new church which Bro. Peebles is just completing. Having begun the work at the beginning of the financial stringency, he has found it difficult at all times to proceed; but, by untiring zeal, he has brought the work to a successful finish, which gives to the people of that little city one of the neatest, most comfortable and attractive buildings in our Conference. The amount of labor and prayer which has attended this enterprise is known only to the faithful pastor and those who have watched his efforts. An expression of great zeal and sacrifice.

Six o'clock, Friday morning, found us at the depot in Biloxi. Pastor Selby had assigned us, in company with Bro. W. G. Forsythe, to a most delightful home with Bro. DuKate, general manager of the Biloxi Canning Factory. True to our past experience, we found that it was our great love for children which had secured to us such pleasant surroundings. May the great future prove the wisdom of the assignment and the beneficial results of our stay! May God spare the precious little ones, and give wisdom and grace to the fond parents in training them for usefulness in society and in the church.

On our arrival at the church we found Bro. Powell and a goodly number of the faithful pastors busy in the work for which they had convened. The young elder presided with ease and general satisfaction. The representation was not full, neither clerical nor lay; yet the attendance was fair. As to the details of the Conference work, I suppose the worthy secretary, Rev. C. F. Emory, will furnish a full report to your columns.

One thing impressed me fully: the necessity of larger appropriations by our Church Extension and Missionary Boards upon this coast, if we would accomplish the best results. These coast works represent large and growing fields, and call loudly upon us for more money and men of strong character and wide experience; men of physical strength, mental culture and moral courage to meet the growing demands of this growing section. Real estate is held at high figures in all of these coast towns, and the tendency is strongly upwards.

By invitation, we occupied the pulpit at Moss Point, Sabbath, morning and evening. We have heard much of this delightful community, and had longed to meet its people. We were pleased, indeed, at the high esteem in which the pastor, Bro. Adams, is held. If the large and attentive congregation which greeted us speaks anything, it is that his ministry among them is most encouraging. Not knowing of the presence of a stranger, no motives of curiosity had prompted any to come—only the usual audience—and yet nearly every seat was taken. Such thoughtful attention from a congregation is not the usual experience. The spiritual atmosphere well warrants the rejoicing of the earnest pastor. The neat little parsonage, sitting among the live oaks, gives evidence of a thoughtful people. With a home neatly, comfortably and abundantly furnished, a parsonage cow, horse and buggy, garden spot, large surroundings and harmonious people, the preacher can not be aught but happy. The church is commodious and neatly furnished—a good auditorium in size; accoustics.

Here are located the large saw-mill interests under the management of our brother, L. M. Dantzler, in whose home every weary itinerant finds a hearty welcome. The town of Moss Point is unique, being built in groups; a collection of houses, an intervening clump of woods, with now and then a crystal stream to add charm to the surroundings. A town scattered over more than a mile square, and yet without mayor or marshal, the ordinary county officers being sufficient to keep the peace.

A few minutes' ride on the Moss Point and Pascagoula railroad brought us to Scranton, where we soon took shipping for Mobile; thence to Meridian, where I find myself again, confronted with an unsurmountable pile of letters to give attention. Teachers for all places and of all ages. Teachers, teachers, teachers.

Notice.

To the Local Boards of Education of Sardis District, North Mississippi Conference:

In "Report No. 2" of the Board of Education, made at the last session of the Annual Conference, held at Sardis, Miss., Dec. 5-10, 1894, occurs a recommendation asking that local Boards of Education, consisting of three members, be elected by the Quarterly Conference on the nomination of the preacher in charge, whose duty it shall be:

"1. To co-operate with the pastor and Sunday-school superintendent in arranging and executing a programme for Children's Day.

"2. To secure, as far as possible, the statistics called for by the District Board of Education.

"3. To aid the representatives of our educational institutions in the canvass of the charge.

"4. To recommend to the District Board of Education such persons as they approve as beneficiary candidates for the ministry, and to raise the amount laid upon the charge by the District Board. (Sec. II, 2.)

"5. To report in writing to the District Board of Education the statistics gathered by them of the educational work within the pastoral charges, together with the number of students attending our institutions of learning from their charges."

The District Board of Education of Sardis district will hold its meeting during the District Conference, to be held at Pleasant Grove, Miss., May 23, 24, 25 and 26, 1895, and the Local Boards are earnestly requested to secure as far as practicable the statistics and information asked for in the recommendations, and report the same in writing to the District Board at that time. For fear the Local Boards should not see this notice in the ADVOCATE, the preachers of the district are earnestly requested to call the attention of the Local Boards in their charges to this matter and insist upon a written report from each pastoral charge.

The strong point about Hood's Sarsaparilla is that they are permanent, because they start from the solid foundation of purified, vitalized and enriched blood.

Domestic Missions.

By a resolution of the Mississippi Conference, I am allowed to pay the preachers serving missions 60 per cent. of what is due up to date, after receiving a report from the preacher of his work, approved by the presiding elder.

The reports are coming in fast, many such as this: "I have five appointments. I missed one appointment during the bad weather in February. Received seven members; baptized four children. I tried to take some of my collections; got some good subscriptions; there seems to be no money here. I have received as quarterage up to date only eight dollars and forty cents. I hardly know what to do. Can't you forward me part of the appropriation for this work." I have to write, No. Brother, I wish that I could; but there is not a dollar in the treasury. Only six charges have sent in anything this year for domestic missions; three of these from the Brandon district. A simple statement of the facts is the best appeal that I can make. I think all that is needed to move the brethren is a knowledge of the situation. Forward something soon, my brethren.

Mary Lucie Edgar.

Mary Lucie, our little afflicted daughter, has gone to heaven. She has been a great sufferer for nine years. She was always patient and resigned. She died last Sunday evening at 6 o'clock. She was laid to rest in the cemetery here, and, by request, in the "W. C. Vaught enclosure." The decoration of altar and pulpit were elaborate and beautiful. Such expressions of love and sympathy as were given by these noble people were never surpassed anywhere. Our hearts overflow with gratitude to all. May God bless them abundantly. Bros. Norsworthy and J. M. Morse performed the last sad rites. Pray for us. Your brother,

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

MAN'S FRAILTY AND MORTALITY;
(Job xiv, 1-12.)

Divine imagery exquisite. "He cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down." Yes, such is life.

1. Comparing man to a flower is very apropos. They resemble each other in many respects.

(1) Seedlings are nearly all alike. Their subsequent distinctive features not perceivable. The King's infant as helpless as that of his gardener. Play with each other as children.

(2) Some flowers beautiful and valuable. Others ugly and worthless. Some lives are charming. Their biography a benediction. Their influence beneficial. Products of their pen the delight of the nation. But the reverse, too, is true. Some men have been a curse to our race.

(3) Flowers are frail. Easily suffer injury. Drouth, rain-storm, worms, ants, mildew, poor soil entail harm. Fade. The same is true of man. Life's ills numerous. Many are the diseases to which flesh is heir.

(4) Flowers thrive not without assiduous attention. Man's destiny is shapen by our mothers, guardians, teachers. Are they aware of their responsibility?

2. And is cut down. Death stalks through the land. Mortality the inscription on all things sublunar. Man must die.

(1) In preparing bouquets the gardener selects the choicest flowers. Even buds. Death loves a shining mark. Many die young.

(2) Atmospheric irruption causes many flowers to fade. Contagious diseases, epidemics bring thousands to the grave.

(3) Finally all wither, decay. Even, though, we attain to hoary age, death surely comes.

(4) How vast the change! Formerly beauty, charms, fragrance, admiration. Now decay, decomposition, putrefaction—aversion.

3. These considerations teach important lessons.

(1) To rejoice with trembling. Physical and intellectual charms may soon cease. Call the folly of vanity, of pride.

(2) Dissatisfaction with our lot foolish. Ancestry and early environments made us what we are. Why should the tulip grieve that she is not a rose, etc? Notwithstanding disparity, all of us can make "our lives sublime." Though an unloved violet, a forsaken forget-me-not—small, though, our sphere of influence—we can charm our surroundings and impregnate the moral atmosphere with celestial fragrance.

(3) Death is but the occasion of transplantation from soil terrestrial to the sweet fields of Eden. There we shall bloom forever.

League Dots.

Some express themselves desirous of holding the Louisiana State Epworth League Convention on the Seashore Camp Ground, soon after the annual camp meeting in July. Let us have the convention. If the place named does not suit, suggest another.

The Mississippi State Epworth League Convention at Grenada, May 10-12, promises to be a great success. Make haste to attend.

The Epworth League, properly managed, will hold our young people as church members. Too long have the offspring of Methodists enriched other denominations.

"The Epworth Era" is our paper. Support it. Dr. Steele's utterances about possible "decapitation" does not indicate possible failure of the enterprise. The paper should be widely circulated.

Had There Never Been a Cloud, There Had Never Been a Rainbow.

Let us imagine ourselves transported in the realm of vision, far back through the long corridors of the misty past, ere the radiant morn of creation broke, and the world in the smile of God awoke, and, from the towering peak of some neighboring planet, witness, with awe and wonder, as God, in his infinite wisdom, spins out on its endless orbit the radiant, seething earth.

As time rolls on, this sister planet becomes less and less radiant, and finally disappears in the trackless void. O'er the rolling orb dictates the voice of God, "Let there be light." And, lo! the gray earth's shroud of mist dissolves as the radiance of the morn fills this distant earth with splendor. As the ages glide by we see the teeming earth radiant with luxuriant foliage of field and forest, and, while contemplating the loveliness of this distant paradise, we see moving softly through its shadowy vistas beings in the image of God, whose supermundane beauty far rivals all charms of nature in this realm of bliss. As they list the harmoniously blending notes of innumerable warblers echo through leafy aisles of God's first temples. In the unconscious lapse of time families blend into tribes, and tribes into nations. As the increasing tribes and nations dot the earth, we observe a tiny cloud rising and darkening the ethereal splendor of the home of man. Higher and darker rises the eastern cloud, as man, so soon forgetful of God's love and care, wanders farther and farther astray in the paths of sin and folly, till gathering clouds encompass the darkened earth and in one mighty and reverberating peal pour forth, in wrath, their reservoirs of falling waters, till naught but the sight and sound of wildly tossing waves envelop a sinful world. One lone tossing ark, with God's faithful few, embrace all that survive the universal deluge. The rain abates, decreases, stops. The clouds scatter in the heavens, and as the broken cloudlets hasten across the sky, behold! in the eastern clouds, shining brighter and brighter through misty falling tears, a radiant bow, of seven distinct and glowing colors, arches the heavens in its embrace. As we, in spell bound awe and admiration, gaze on this unique and gorgeous wonder, gradually the colors fade away. The clouds one by one approach and follow the setting sun. The waters recede to their caverns vast and deep. The silvery orb of the rising moon sheds her tender, glistening rays once again as when man, in his Maker's image, first enjoyed its heavenly purity.

Again man reigns over a paradise as transcendent as before. As we, on the lofty peak of this neighboring planet, meditate on the shifting scenery of the heavens, a sylvan zephyr, through the moonbeam's mellow glory, softly whispers, "Had there never been a cloud, there had never been a rainbow."

C. A. SABINE.

What the Lord Has Done for Me.

The Lord deals out salvation to some people in dribblets, like rations are issued on plantations. But, blessed be his goodness! he gave me full salvation at once. He plucked that old carnal nature out of my heart, root, trunk, and branch, at one time. There were no roots of bitterness left in my soul. May I ever be so humble and faithful that I will never betray the trust which the good Lord has imposed in me! For all who are less fortunate than I, I sympathize and pray.

JOHN W. CRISLER.

Lee, Miss.

Methodists and Baptists Contrasted.

Rev. Dr. Eaton, of Louisville, Ky., remarked in the Southern Baptist Convention, in Atlanta, Ga., in 1892, that as the world was being controlled by steam, which was produced by water and fire, so the religious influence in its salvation would depend chiefly upon those two denominations that use so much the water and the fire. The Baptists go in for water, and the Methodists for the fire of energy, in presenting God's Word. I have found the notes below in one of my old sermon books, taken down from, in part at least, Dr. H. H. Tucker, then editor of the Christian Index, of Atlanta, Ga., dated by me Denison, Texas, May 17, 1887.

"Ye are all one in Christ." (Gal. iii, 28.)

The Methodists are a great people. They have done, and are doing, a great work. God has blessed them, and they are a blessing. We thank God for them! Now, what is the secret of their success? Let us see! At the bottom of it all is the blessing of God's Holy Spirit on the gospel which they preach. Without this blessing they could do nothing. They have a kind of faith which exhibits itself in works. This is the only faith which is genuine. They are zealous, energetic, never-tiring, model Christians—examples for us all. They have next to the Catholics the most efficient religious organization in the world. As a system, Methodism creates force, economizes force, organizes and directs it. In very strong contrast with that is the Baptist system of this world, which economizes nothing, organizes nothing, and directs nothing. Though it be in some sense less efficient, it is safer, and certainly we think more in accordance with Scripture. Methodists, in some points, differ from the Baptists. They are what is called by the world Arminian, and we Calvinistic. How, then, do they succeed so well? Discarding these terms, we all agree:

1. In our conversion we all learn that we are sinners, and nothing but sinners, and we take "Jesus as our all and in all"—a full and complete Savior. If there were a window in each heart, and they were put side by side, we would discover the same heart-beat. We would love alike, believe alike, hope alike; and desire earnestly to follow alike, glorifying him in body and in spirit, which are his.

2. When they preach from the heart (and our Methodist brethren generally preach from the heart) they preach alike justification by faith, the necessity of the blood of Christ to wash away sin, growth in grace. They love to preach Christ and him crucified.

3. Language is a poor vehicle of thought, and we fail in attempting to represent the Scripture plan of salvation. There is a "God-side" which Baptists use at times, it may be, too much, while the other, or "the manward side," is used by the Methodist at times too much; yet in heart we all agree, and with our pious Presbyterian brethren, too. Thank God for such union!

4. The Methodists and Baptists all pray alike, unless when cold and formal in their worship. We pray for the presence and converting power of the Holy Ghost—a friend we can not save. We cry, "Lord, save, or they perish!" We teach often better by our prayers than by our sermons—in fact, we may call prayers simple object-sermons. They show the gospel in the concrete; they are practical exhibitions of the doctrine of the gospel, and people are often taught very much from them.

5. We use the same songs, with their beautiful, soul inspiring doctrine. The strong sentiment of Toplady, in his "Rock of Ages," is covered by the soul-stirring "Jesus, lover of my soul," written by Charles Wesley. We alike love and enjoy the songs of Watts and Newton and Heber, and others we all sing, and pray alike, whether we be Methodists, or Baptists, or Presbyterians.

6. As we have said, there are two side-views of salvation—a God-side and a man-side. Baptists often dwell too much on the God-side, while Methodists too much at times on the man-side. Let us do as John Wesley taught in his day, "Work as though we could do it all," but ever and always "trust as though we could do nothing."

"Amazing grace! how sweet the sound!
'Tis music to my ears;
A sovereign balm for every wound,
A cordial for my fears.

"Grace all the work shall crown,
Through everlasting days;
It lays in heaven the topmost stone,
And well deserves praise."

Let us, then, love one another, and be careful to love those most who love the Savior most, and serve him most fully, whether Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Episcopalian, or Catholic. We have the same Bible, the same Savior, the same hope of heaven in the end, for, if saved by the gospel, "we are all one in Christ Jesus."

Yours for the truth,

W. H. ROBERT.

Unfortunate for Pastor and Church.

1. If a preacher is not willing to go where the Bishop and cabinet direct, he ought not to join Conference.

2. If a preacher is not pleased with his appointment, he should hold his peace. Especially should he not let his people know of his displeasure.

3. It is unfortunate for a pastor to grumble at and scold his people. A chronic grumbler never builds up a church; neither is he apt to be sought as a companion. Pray for and hold up your people, praise their virtues, and leave it to others to say disparaging things of them.

4. As a rule, it is unfortunate for both church and Sunday-school for a pastor to spend much time from his work, no matter what the cause may be. The absence of a pastor is keenly felt, though he may be off seeking health.

5. It is unfortunate for a pastor to get the idea that a revival can not be had without sending off for an evangelist (so called) to conduct the services of his own charge, and thereby falsely educate the people with the idea that there is no tact, revival fire, or enthusiasm in the regular pastorate.

6. It is unfortunate for the pastor to do all the public praying, either in the closing of the regular service, or opening Sunday-schools, or leading in prayer meetings. As many persons as possible ought to be encouraged to lead in prayer.

7. It is unfortunate for the church, where there is a parsonage—if it is at all respectable—to have a preacher sent that won't occupy the parsonage, though it may be at some sacrifice of his pride. Also it is unfortunate for a single man to have to go where a parsonage has been provided at the expense of much anxiety, toil, and sacrifice of our good women, who expect the association of the preacher's family. It is certainly poor encouragement to the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society.

8. It is unfortunate for a preacher, after he has gone through his four-years' course, not to have a suitable companion to help him in the all-important work of saving souls.

9. It is unfortunate for the pastor's children to attend base ball, circuses, the dance, or social card games in parlors. Where such is the case, the pastor is shorn of his strength against worldly mindedness.

10. It is unfortunate for a pastor to criticise his superiors in office.

11. It is unfortunate for a pastor to spend a great deal of time in fishing and hunting.

12. It is unfortunate for a presiding elder to be slow in advertising his quarterly meetings, district stewards' meetings, Ministers' Institutes, District Conference, and Sunday-school Convention. The pastors need time to arrange for these meetings.

13. It is unfortunate for a pastor, on finishing up on a charge, to exact a promise from the young people that when the ceremony is said, he is to be sent for to marry them.

OBSERVER.

The House We Dwell In.

It is supposed that just before Moses ascended "to the top of Pisgah," he wrote these beautiful words: "Lord, thou hast been our dwelling-place in all generations." For hundreds of years his people had known no dwelling-place, save the full and rich promises of God. In these alone they had lived, and had enacted some of the most thrilling events in the history of the human race and of the church of God. And how beautifully did God recognize and reward the faith and the confession of this leader of the hosts of Israel! "So Moses, the servant of the Lord, died there in the land of Moab, according to the word of the Lord. And he buried him in a valley in the land of Moab, over against Beth-peor: but no man knoweth of his sepulchor unto this day." It was a beautiful legacy Moses left to his people—a home in the promises of God; and the Lord honored his faith by taking charge of his temporal affairs when his life was over.

And then David wrote: "I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread." Commenting upon these words, Dr. Clarke says: "I believe this to be literally true in all cases. I am now gray-headed myself; I have traveled in different countries, and have had many opportunities of seeing and conversing with religious people in all situations in life, and I have not, to my knowledge, seen one instance to the contrary."

This may seem much for two such men as David and Clarke to say, and yet my own observations convince me that it is all literally true. I have seen so many start in life with prospects the most flattering, come to a sudden and hopeless ruin. Neighbors and close friends have looked on them in sorrowful astonishment, and asked, "How is this?" And when no reason for it would appear, they have ascribed it all to hard luck; and then, without revealing my purpose, I have enquired about the old home life—the house they lived in—and found a sufficient reason for it all. Sometimes it was a prayerless house; sometimes the money that should have gone to the support of the institutions of Christ's kingdom had been appropriated to private uses; and sometimes there had been an over reaching, if not oppressive, method employed in what appeared to the thoughtless, legitimate gain. And then I saw with the wise man, "There is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty." And I have seen the other side of this question so beautifully and so clearly illustrated as to feel in my soul a renewedly inspired confidence in the promises of God.

Only a few days ago I was in conversation with a brother, who is more than sixty years of age, and after telling me of his father's great wealth, he spoke of his strong faith in God, and of his abundant good works. I asked him how his father's children had succeeded in life, and he answered: "There are eight of us, and I am the poorest one of them, and I own two farms, and do not owe a dollar I could not pay at any hour." Again I thought with the wise man, "There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth."

I would that our people understood that "the steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord, and he delighteth in his way. Though he fall, he shall not be utterly cast down: for the Lord upholdeth him with his hand."

What kind of a house do you dwell in? Is it built of God's promises to you and to yours?

DYE—Hardly had the refrain of the joyous music and the blessedness of brotherly fellowship ended in our last Conference session before a wave of sorrow struck a pastor's home and brought the whole family under its withering influence. Death is always an unwelcome visitor—aye, he is a grief, a calamity irreparable in this life. But more so when wife and mother is brought under its withering influence.

Mrs. ELLEN DYE, wife of our noble brother, Rev. Thos. W. Dye, of the North Mississippi Conference, fell on sleep Sunday evening, Dec. 16, 1894.

She was the daughter of that staunch Methodist couple and citizens, Col. and Mrs. H. D. Allen of Cockrum, DeSoto county, Miss. The religious, educational and social advantages of the home and community in which Sister Dye was reared were of the highest type, and her whole life responded gladly to these gracious influences. She met the expectation of parents and friends as daughter, church member and friend. She was reserved to the most beautiful womanly modesty, without confusing embarrassment, and at the same time ready to do her part in the work of the church of God without the slightest manifestation of a desire to attract attention. Here was a faithful, consistent, pure life, not merely in profession, but in living, working and sacrificing for the good of others. When she consented to become the wife of our brother she did it after mature deliberation and with a knowledge of the privation, delicate and difficult duties of the position. She was indeed an helpmeet for our brother, never hindering, but always aiding him in his loved employ. Though an invalid for several years, she moved from charge to charge unmurmuringly as her husband went in obedience to the authorities of the church. As an evidence of her self-sacrificing devotion to the work of her husband and the interest of the people whom he was appointed to serve, her last day on earth was spent without him, having urged him to fill his appointment, and saying "she would be cared for," and responded to the call of her Lord before he could return. Grief in the sudden death of two children seemed so great as to crush the very life; but, like a bruised flower, when baptized with the refreshing shower and generous sunshine, puts on a cheerful appearance and smiles in beauty and love on her home and friends. She knew where to go for comfort and grace.

Thank God for such a life, which ended as serenely as a Summer's day. May her influence always tenderly, but surely impress the three sweet little girls and noble son! May our Lord sustain our suffering brother and the children! H. C. MORRISON.

BETHEA—Mrs. MARY ELIZA BETHEA (nee LeGette) was born in Marlan district, S. C., in March, 1832, and died in Summit, Miss., Feb. 19, 1895. She was married to Rev. R. C. Bethea, M. D., in 1852. This union was recognized and blessed of God in the gift of four sons and two daughters—all of whom are living.

Sister Bethea was converted and joined the Methodist Church at old Centenary Camp Ground, Marion district, S. C., early in life, and ever after remained true to her profession. Her Christian experience was marked by many brilliant and ecstatic manifestations of the divine presence. A lingering illness familiarized her with the thought and scene of dying. Protracted suffering crystallized her patience and submissiveness, and transformed them into perfect trustfulness. Her death was peaceful, triumphant.

The youthful itinerant found a most cordial welcome in her home, and in her a true friend, whose care and counsel were invaluable. Her devotion to her home and church was beautiful. Her zeal and consecration inspired hope and courage in timid hearts. Her faith and piety were of that robust, active type, which stimulates others to noble deeds and higher endeavors.

A devoted wife, an affectionate mother, a kind, generous friend, and a consistent Christian is gone from the embrace of loved ones to live with God and the angels forever. May the God of wife and mother comfort the sorrow-stricken husband and children!

B. F. JONES.

MERRILL—As the rising sun announced the dawn of a new day, it also brought to our sorrowful hearts the knowledge that the eventide of our loved one's life was fading away, and her spirit wee wafted above to bask in the sunshine of heaven.

Mrs. SARAH E. MERRILL, daughter of Rev. David Pipes, and wife of Rev. James H. Merrill, died at the residence of her son, A. Ferrar Merrill, March 28, 1895, aged sixty-five years ten months and twenty-nine days.

Hers was truly an eventful life, but in all her trials and bereavements she ever trusted in Him who "doeth all things well." Her mother died in her infancy, leaving her to the care of a loving grandmother, Mrs. Pipes, near Natchez, Miss., where she lived until she was happily married, in 1846, to Rev. J. H. Merrill, a native of New York. After having served on several works in Mississippi and Texas, they embarked in 1867 for British Honduras, where, in a few weeks, she was left a widow, her husband having died of cholera, which was raging there at the time, thus leaving her and five little children to the care of her eldest son, then a boy of sixteen, who nobly stood by her the remainder of her days. They returned to Louisiana the following year, where she spent the remainder of her life with her two sons, who are now the only surviving ones of eleven children. She was a devoted Christian and a noble example in her gentle and unselfish disposition. She was, from her early youth, a member of the Methodist Church, and she often said that her Bible was her chief comfort. F. L. M.

COLBERT—Mrs. CALLIE E. COLBERT, daughter of Joseph D. Eads and Caroline Herper, was born Jan. 8, 1849, and died happily in January, 1894. She received an early religious and literary training. She gave her heart to God at the age of ten, and joined the Methodist Church. On Nov. 8, 1865, she was married to Mr. Lynn Cameron. On July 22, 1867, she was left a widow, with one child. On Oct. 12, 1870, she was again happily married to Mr. William Hines Colbert. In 1881 they moved to Utica, Miss., where Mr. Colbert engaged in a successful mercantile business. Early in 1892, while engaged in the delightful services of the sanctuary, she was called to the side of her husband, who had been shot down in his own store. His tragic death so shocked her nervous system that she was never well afterward. A true Christian, faithful wife and devoted mother has gone to her reward. May the Lord help her children to meet her in heaven! L. S. JONES.

COOPER—WILLIE COOPER was born in Jasper county, Miss., in 1820; was married to Mary Snell there; moved to Louisiana in 1854; joined the Methodist Church, Oct. 1, 1856; died in Rapides parish, near Glenmora, La., April 5, 1895.

The writer met him last year for the first time, and we have met several times since. We always talked, when we met, on the subject of religion, and at our different meetings I could never see any change in him. His faith was strong in God at all times. I was with him when he died, and he told me a short time before the breath left him that he was not afraid to die, and was going home to heaven to rest. Dr. Cooper, his son, asked him if he was sure he would be saved. He said his faith was unshaken. He leaves a wife, no old mother (she is in Israel), and six children to mourn his departure. May God bless the bereaved ones, and save them all in heaven! is my prayer. R. C. GRACE.

BROCK—Whereas, That reaper, whose name is Death, has taken from us our beloved friend and co-worker in our Sunday-school work, Mrs. BROCK who departed this life, and we feel it a duty to give some suitable expression of our grief because of the loss this Sabbath-school, individually and collectively, has sustained; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of Mrs. Brock we realize that the husband has lost a devoted wife, the children a kind and affectionate mother, the church and Sabbath school a zealous supporter, and the community one of its brightest Christian lights.

Resolved, That this Sabbath school hereby tenders to the bereaved family its sincere condolence and sympathy, and commends them to the merciful Giver of all good for comfort in the hour of their sad distress. She has left her earthly home for a "house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the family of Bro. E. R. Brock.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication. W. M. GOUDIN, for Com.

I, A. C. Hamedinger, do say consumption can be cured by Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. My mother, years ago, contracting a terrible cough soon became unable to attend to her household duties. Prominent physicians pronounced it incurable consumption. We knew of Dr. Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and commenced giving it to her. Before two bottles had been taken an improvement was noticed, and by the time one dozen bottles had been consumed she was well, and has never been troubled since. We have recommended it to many and always have it in the house. For coughs, colds, croup, whooping-cough, asthma, bronchitis, it is without a rival. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as 50c. bottles.

It will not make your heart any whiter to try to blacken somebody else.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1039 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound, or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result; and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

"Earthly Footsteps of the Man of Galilee."

A new work of Bishop Vincent, and Dr. J. W. Lee (of St. Louis). A great publishing company is just bringing to light the fruit of much toil and outlay of money. They sent an artist photographer, under the guidance of Dr. Lee, to the Holy Land, there to secure the most exact and perfect pictures of the salient scenes of the earthly life of Christ and the Apostles. We have examined a portion of the work and unhesitatingly pronounce it by far the best thing of its kind ever seen by us. The method of photographic reproduction employed is faultless.

The forthcoming book will contain some four or five hundred of these splendid pictures, 8x10 inches in size. The work will be issued in twenty-four parts, pages 11½x13½ inches, with chronological charts and colored maps. Each part will contain sixteen pictures, besides the enchanting pen pictures of these renowned writers. The series will run through twenty-four weeks, one a week, at a regular price of 25 cents each. But the ADVOCATE has made a special arrangement by which it will furnish all its subscribers, new and old, for 10 cents a number. Less than half, but very little more than a third of what you will have to pay if your name is not on our subscription roll. The entire series in this way will cost only $2.40; otherwise it will cost $6. This rule of the publishers of this book is the strictest that only to our subscribers can we make this special offer. For $2 40 you may get what another must pay $6 for if you are a subscriber to the ADVOCATE. Send $2.40, and each of the series will be mailed you as fast as issued. Or ten cents (stamps taken) for one issue—any way you prefer.

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER (Spring No. 2.)

Nature's Nerve Tonic—It's Value in the Lithaemic or Gouty State.

James L. Cabell, M. D., A. M., LL.D., Professor of Physiology and Surgery in the Medical Department of the University of Virginia, and President of the National Board of Health:

"I have recently read with interest a paper in the New York Medical Journal on 'The BUFFALO LITHIA WATER in Diseases of the Nervous System,' citing his own observations and those of other eminent physicians, ascribes to this Water a special virtue as a direct Tonic for the Nervous System in cases of Cerebral Exhaustion. I have only had occasion to test its effects in this direction in cases in which the nervous symptoms may have been due to a Lithaemic condition, for which it is a well-known therapeutic resource. In these cases, the relief following the use of the remedy was very decided."

[LITHÆMIC—"Suppressed" or "latent Gout."]

Dr. Wm. A. Hammond, of Washington, D. C.:

"It is well known that many cases of diseases of the nervous system are complicated with Lithæmia, and that unless this condition is removed, a cure is very often retarded and not infrequently entirely prevented. It is quite commonly the case that in Cerebral Congestion producing Insomnia, Nervous Prostration, resulting from over-mental work or much emotional disturbance, and in Epilepsy (to say nothing of many cases of Insanity), an excess of uric acid in the blood is often observed. This state appears to be altogether independent of the character of the food, for no matter how careful the physician may be in regard to the diet of his patient, the lithæmic condition continues. I have tried to overcome this persistence by the use of phosphate of ammonia and other so-called solvents for uric acid, but without notable effect. Several years ago, however, I began to treat such cases with a salt that was astonishing BUFFALO LITHIA WATER with a result that was beneficial to the patient."

This water is for sale by druggists generally, or in cases of one dozen half-gallon bottles $5.00 f. o. b. at the Springs. Descriptive pamphlets sent to any address.

IF I SHOULD DIE.

If I should die, how kind you all would grow;
In that strange hour I would not have one foe.
There are no words too beautiful to say
Of me, who goes forevermore away,
Across that ebbing tide which has no flow.

With what new lustre my good deeds would glow!
If faults were mine, no one would call them so,
Or speak of me in aught but praise that day,
If I should die.

Ah! friends, before my listening ear lies low,
While I can hear and understand, bestow
That gentle treatment and fond love, I pray,
The lustre of whose fate, though radiant, may
Would gild my grave with mocking light, I know,
If I should die.

To Bethlehem and Hebron by Carriage.

BY BISHOP CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

On Monday morning, Jan. 7, we left Jerusalem at six o'clock for a trip to Hebron, returning by way of Bethlehem. We were up at five, breakfasted at half-past five, and at six, just as the sun began to tip with gold the top of Olivet, while the shadows yet lingered in the valleys, five of us crowded into a rattling old carriage, drawn by three horses working abreast, and started down to Hebron. We had forty miles to travel that day, and much to see. But the road was excellent, thanks to the engineering skill borrowed by the Turkish government from somewhere to superintend its construction.

Our driver was a Jew, with all the caution and conceit characteristic of the later generations of that historic race. Our dragoman appeared in the dress of a Bedouin, mounted on a fiery steed, with a pistol in his belt, a sword at his side, wearing spurs, and wielding a long whip. At points of special interest he had the carriage to stop, and made explanations in good and loud English. There is energy in the tones of all natives. They vociferate and gesticulate as though the hearer was deaf and they were mad.

Around Mt. Zion we rode, crossed the vale of Hinnom, and climbed the steep hillside to the borders of the Plain of Rephaim, so renowned in the wars between Jews and Philistines, and so intimately associated with the brilliant military history of King David.

Beyond the railway station, on the Bethlehem road, we were shown on the right the valley of the giants, while to the left a gnarled old olive tree was pointed out as marking the exact spot where Judas Iscariot "went out and hung himself." On the summit of the high hill farther on we have a nearer and better view of the country home of the Greek Patriarch of Jerusalem, built where it is supposed old Simeon lived who so rejoiced at the birth of our Savior. And near there is a cistern which marks the reputed site where the star reappeared to the wise men, and "they rejoiced with exceeding great joy." Though that may not be the exact location, no doubt we were traveling the very road those mysterious sages of the far East walked on their way to Bethlehem, with a planet robed in fire for a dragoman, and gifts of gold, frankincense, and myrrh for "the young Child," before whom they fell down and worshiped. The lessons of that pilgrimage and the significance of that offering were brought vividly and powerfully to mind as we traveled the same road they went in their diligent search. Their star was not in the cloudless sky that morning, but it was in our hearts, and guids us not only to Bethlehem, but to the place he has gone to prepare for them that love him. From the landscape that greeted their eyes that morning, Herod's palace had long since disappeared, but in its place we saw the "Herodian mountain," where Herod the Great is said to have been buried.

A little further on we reach the spot where the prophet Elijah is said to have tarried one night in his flight to the wilderness. On the left of the road is the Greek convent called Mar-Elias, with spacious and attractive buildings. At that point both Jerusalem and Bethlehem are in full view. The Mosque of Omar on Mt. Moriah and the Church of the Nativity in Bethlehem can be seen at almost a single glance. One traveler thus happily describes the view from that elevation: "By a simple turn of the head one can see the birthplace of Jesus, the place where he taught in the temple, the site of Calvary, and the scene of his final ascension from Olivet." It is doubted if in one sweep of the eye such historic and sacred scenes can be found elsewhere in all the wide world.

A short drive brought us to a small, dome-shaped building, known as Rachel's Tomb. Here the "beautiful and well-favored" wife of Jacob was laid to rest, who, "as her soul was in departing," left a last legacy to the world in the person of the child Benjamin. "And Jacob set a pillar upon her grave: that is the pillar of Rachel's grave unto this day." The pillar is no more, but that place of sorrow never has been without some memorial. Once a simple monument marked it, then a stately pyramid crowned it for many centuries, and now a Moslem building covers it, in which, I learned, Jews were allowed to occasionally worship.

Less than a mile westward from here is a small village, which has taken the place of ancient Zelzah, the home of Kish, the father of King Saul, that tall and "choice young man," who, "from his shoulders and upward was higher than any of the people." It was out from that very hill-side the young man went to "seek the asses" of his father that were lost, but instead found a crown and a kingdom.

Leaving the Bethlehem road at Rachel's Tomb, we turned to the right, going direct to Hebron. In less than an hour we came to Solomon's Pools, three immense reservoirs, between steep hills, the one draining into the other, built by King Solomon to supply Jerusalem with water. These are supplied by four bold springs, besides a well in the valley. The upper pool is 380x236 feet, the middle one 423x250 feet, and the lower 582x207 feet. By the side of these pools are the ruins of an old Turkish fortress, supposed, however, to have been used originally for a khan to accommodate travelers on the highway (?) from Egypt to Damascus. Before reaching these pools several of our party concluded we would walk on ahead of the carriage, which was stopped for the horses to be fed. Along that way the weary feet of many generations had gone before us. To place our shoes where other sandals had walked for all the centuries from Abraham to the present, was a privilege that ripened into an inspiration. Then came the prayer that the faith of the "father of the faithful" might abide in his children until the final generation. As we went on and talked, attention was attracted by the sound of weeping, and then by a large company of persons on a hill near the roadside. Further investigation ascertained that it was a burial. The body had just been placed in a tomb hewn out of the rock, and over the mouth of the sepulcher stones were being placed. When the last rock was laid the mourners walked slowly away, the women weeping aloud, but the men as stolid as the stones with which they had sealed the graves of their dead.

We passed a well where women were drawing water, and which is one of the reputed sites where Philip baptized the eunuch. I did not have time to examine the argument in favor of this claim, but supposed it quite as plausible as that which supports the other two.

From Solomon's Pools to Hebron, a distance of two and a half hours, there was nothing of special interest till we approached the ancient city. The country is barren and rocky, with only small patches in the narrow valleys and on the terraced hill-sides capable of producing remunerative crops. Once fertile, and supporting a large population, by neglect, poor tillage, and no fertilization, the soil has washed away, and only bare rocks remain. In those flinty hills may be discovered an explanation of the providence which has allowed this land of such holy associations to fall so largely into Moslem and alien hands.

Just before reaching Hebron, we passed through the Valley of Eshcol, now, as in the days of Caleb and Joshua, a land of grapes, pomegranates, and figs. The little vineyards are separated by stone walls, and filled with vines and their fruitful branches. As it was not the time of grapes, I could not compare the yield now with the day when the spies plucked "one cluster of grapes and bare it between two upon a staff." It is yet the chief industry of the valley, and the wine pressed from the fruit is said to command a premium in Eastern markets.

Hebron is an old city, but only interesting because of its historic associations and priceless treasures. It is dirty, and inhabited by an ignorant, fanatical Moslem people. They despise Christians, and even the children greet their coming with curses, and bid them adieu with stones and maledictions. Policemen usually attend visitors to protect them from insult and annoyance. One of the principal streets is very dark, being covered over its entire length, the light only admitted through small windows above. It was really dreary and dungeon-like to see old Turks seated on the floor, or ground, plying their different trades by the dim, spectral light of small tapers. Of course, the place of chief and most pathetic interest is the Cave of Machpelah. But no Jew or Christian is ever allowed to approach that sacred shrine. It is covered by an immense mosque, and in order to keep Christian eyes from being gratified by too near a view, a high wall has been built around the Moslem temple itself. The lower portion of the mosque is part of the palace of King David; just above, the wall dates back to the days of Constantine, while the top is Saracenic. On one side of the venerable building there are three small, irregular holes in the wall, which the Jews believe have connection with the graves of Abraham and Sarah, of Isaac and Rebecca, and of Jacob and Leah. Strangers are allowed on the stone steps near these openings, and there we saw three Jewish women weeping and reading the Lamentations of their weeping prophet. Big tears were rolling down their cheeks, and their faces wore the agony of genuine grief. They were weeping because the tombs of their fathers had been wrested from them, and their land of promise was in alien hands, and were praying the God of Abraham to help them in their afflictions. Nowhere have I seen a more pathetic picture. Only four times have Christians been permitted to enter the mosque—the Prince of Wales in 1862 and 1881, the Marquis of Bute in 1868, and the Crown Prince of Russia in 1869. On one of these occasions some fanatical Mohammedans came near precipitating a serious riot. With heavy hearts we turned away and walked down to David's Pool, so called because it was there King David had the murderers of Ish-bosheth, the son of Saul, publicly executed.

While resting for a few moments at an inn we looked up the principal Scripture references to Hebron, and reread the history of stirring scenes and tragic events. Hebron was one of the cities of refuge, and within its walls many a hotly-pursued offender had come on flying feet, while scores watched the chase from the towers above, wondering if he would escape the avenger, or have to give eye for eye, or life for life. Those very hills and valleys were given to heroic Caleb as his well-deserved inheritance. In Hebron, David was anointed King over Judah, "and the time that David was king in Hebron over the house of Judah was seven years and six months." And it was in Hebron that his ungrateful son, Absalom, had himself proclaimed king, and organized revolt against the throne of his honored father.

About a mile or so from the city, in the Vale of Mamre, is a large and venerable-looking tree, known as "Abraham's Oak." Up there we walked, passing en route several springs of water and the ruins of an old Roman aqueduct, and under the shade of that historic tree spread our lunch, which, to our little company, was like eating together another paschal feast. We saw in vision the great patriarch sitting "in the tent door in the heat of the day," and witnessed his warm greeting to the three angels as "he ran to meet them," and "bowed himself toward the ground." A few acorns from the great tree we picked up, and gathered leaves from the bending branches as souvenirs of an hour's sweet rest and holy meditation amid scenes sacred in the life of "the friend of God."

We returned in the early afternoon by the same road to Rachel's tomb, and then turned aside to spend a twilight hour in Bethlehem. En route we came near having an adventure with a small band of robbers. But for the boldness and shrewdness of our dragoman, and the presence of four bronzed, stout-looking passengers, who seemed quite able to cope with a company of bandits, we would have been unfortunate enough to fall among thieves.

It was matter of regret that we did not have longer time to linger amid the scenes of Bethlehem. As we rode around the ridge into this beautiful and well-kept city of 7 000 inhabitants, the field of Boaz was pointed out, where Ruth gleaned behind the reapers and made a history as fascinating and beautiful as any story ever woven by the hand of genius. In this very city Jesse lived and David was born, and here the great miracle of the centuries was wrought in the birth of the Son of man. We spent an hour in the Church of the Nativity, which is really a group of buildings in which Roman Catholics, Greeks, and Armenians have chapels. What is known as the Chapel of St. Helena contains forty-four columns, which were brought from Solomon's Temple. We descended to the chapel, where are costly altars, marking the sites where the star rested, and where the manger stood in which the world's Redeemer was born. Several Greek monks were kneeling reverently around this shrine and offering their evening prayers. There our company knelt, and together repeated that form of prayer which He gave to guide the heart of the world in its approach to God. Even though there may be doubt about the exact location, there was sweet inspiration in the associations of the place; and I was glad, in such a presence, to renew a solemn covenant made six-and-twenty years ago. We visited also the grotto of St. Jerome, where he translated the Bible into Latin, and also the tombs of Eusebius and other wise men. A detailed description of the several chapels I can not give in these hurried notes. When we came out the heavens were full of stars, and a soft silvery light seemed to invest the little city and its surrounding hills with the glory of another transfiguration. I thought surely that memorable night must have been much like this, when the shepherds, tending their flocks, heard "the overture of the angels," singing, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good-will to men." No more glittering host was ever "marshaled on the nightly plain." I was glad to have been there at such an hour, and all the way to our hotel at Jerusalem the lines of Henry Kirke White were making melody in my soul:

"I'll sing first in night's diadem,
Forever, and forevermore,
The Star—the Star of Bethlehem."

One of the interesting items in the educational world is the fact that all Jewish communities and churches in the United States have been appealed to for help to found a Jewish university in Jerusalem. How near are the uttermost parts of the earth to-day, that a common interest thus binds the scattered children of Abraham! To them Jerusalem is the city of cities. This proposed institution of learning will have a wonderful effect on Palestine, for while it will be Jewish, it must reflect the spirit of modern Christendom, if it be a true university.—Pittsburgh Advocate.

Greenville District Conference.

The Greenville District Conference, of the North Mississippi Conference, met in the Methodist Church at Tunica, Miss., May 3, 1895; Rev. Jno. A. Randolph, P. E., in the chair. Every pastor in the district, sixteen in number, was present, and a goodly number of laymen.

The reports of the preachers were very gratifying. Fine revivals have blessed half the charges, and the membership materially increased. Sunday-schools are growing in number and usefulness. Epworth Leagues are being organized, and missionary societies are working with renewed energy. A new church has been built at Arcola; the plans for one at Duncan and another at Lyons have been secured, and a new parsonage built at Hillhouse. The district has never been in so good a condition.

Special emphasis was given devotional exercises. The preaching of Drs. Brown, and W. C. Black, of NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE; J. W. Malone, of Grenada Collegiate Institute; W. B. Murrah, of Millsaps, was up to high-water mark. Rev. J. W. Honnoll, of Malone College, at Holly Springs, and Rev. G. W. Bachman, Conference collporteur, were present representing their respective interests. Rev. J. W. McLaurin was on hand looking after the interests of the American Bible Society. Geo. B. Shelby, J. B. Pease, M. D.; J. D. Palmer, L. P., and D. J. Allen were elected delegates to the Annual Conference. W. R. Trigg, Thos. Mount, and Dr. Sparkman, alternates.

Next Conference meets at Rosedale.

The Woman's Missionary Conference, on May 2, was full of interest. It was presided over by Mrs. T. B. Hargrove. It goes without saying that she is inimitable in her line. Foreign and parsonage and home mission work was carefully looked into. Her accurate knowledge of the needs of the work and her wise counsel made a deep impression and will yield bountiful fruitage. Mrs. H. P. Gibbs, sweet-spirited and gifted, talked to the edification of everybody. Mrs. Jones, district secretary of foreign, and Mrs. Geo. Shelby, district secretary of P. and H. M. work, aided to the success of the meeting. The little folks were represented by Misses Birdie McCorkle and Minnette Pease and Master Geo. Shelby.

Holly Springs District Conference.

The twenty-fifth session of the Holly Springs District Conference was held at Mount Pleasant, Miss., May 2-5; the Rev. J. D. Cameron, D. D., presiding elder, in the chair. All the pastors of the district were present, and lay delegates from all the charges except three. The session was pleasant and harmonious, and encouraging reports were presented. The brethren pledged themselves to make an honest effort to increase the circulation of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, the Conference organ. Five promising young men were unanimously recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial. Among the number was a son of the sainted John Moss, of the Memphis Conference.

The following were elected lay delegates to the ensuing Annual Conference: M. C. Pegues, M. J. McKinney, J. G. Leach, and W. A. Young. Alternates: A. R. Bogard, Fred Ivy.

Byhalia was selected as the place for the next meeting.

The District Board of Education was constituted as follows: Clerical—J. D. Cameron, J. W. Honnoll, L. D. Worsham, J. S. Oakley. Lay—G. E. Kelsey, M. C. Pegues, E. J. McKinney, E. H. Randle.

The citizens of Mount Pleasant dispensed a bountiful hospitality, and appropriate resolutions of thanks were adopted.

In the Living Present.

Gov. Altgeld, of Illinois, millionaire is not anarchistically inclined from principle. As a true demagogue, he is courting favor with the roughs and toughs. Thus he is also a rabid silverite, catering to the favor of the numerous class of debtors. These debtors would be pleased to liquidate with a depreciated currency, worth, say, fifty cents on the dollar. But he recently leased some of his property, stipulating that payment be made in gold. As a politician, he simply maneuvers for votes. That, and nothing more.

It is now officially announced that it is not true, as has been stated of yore, that the early Moravian missionaries sold themselves into slavery in order to preach to the negroes in West India. Have to remodel some of the old sermons in which above item was pathetically expressed.

Scribner's Magazine, for May, laments the decay of letter writing. The telephone, telegraph, and especially the newspaper, are the cause. The latter render news items in letters superfluous, and the painful brevity of the former spoils the epistolary style. True, missives by mail have increased rather than decreased, but they are, as it were, amplified telegrams. Even the postscripts of our ladies have grown less and shorter.

A psychological society in San Francisco has been sued for damages by the wife of one of its members. That member had been driven to insanity by the prescribed research. Psychological society is the high-sounding name for an Americanized Buddhistic organization, better known as spiritualism.

The sainted Prof. Blackie used to write in the corner of every letter he composed, in Greek characters, what is expressed in Eph. iv, 15. In English: "Speak the truth in love." He was accustomed to say that, if this injunction were generally heeded, earth would be converted into heaven.

Canon Farrar has been promoted by Premier Rosebery to the deanery of Canterbury. Rightly some of the London papers remark, that if he had been less ironique and less outspoken, he would have been made archbishop ere this. We hold that he has no superior in the realm of theology.

The king of fashion, M. Worth, the famous Paris manufacturer of woman's attire, and who recently died, left an estate valued at five million dollars. A native of London, he came to the metropolis on the Seine forty years ago, a penniless youth. His taste was exquisite. Eugenie, Empress of France, as well as the entire European aristocracy, patronized him. American dudines did the same. His authority of establishing the ever-changing fashion was never questioned. "I SHALL NOT PASS AGAIN THIS WAY."

The bread that bringeth strength I want to give,
The water pure that bids the thirsty live;
I want to help the fainting day by day,
I'm sure I shall not pass again this way.

I want to give the oil of joy for tears,
The faith to conquer crowding doubts and fears;
Beauty for ashes may I give alway,
I'm sure I shall not pass again this way.

I want to give good measure, running o'er,
And into angry hearts I want to pour
The answer soft that turneth wrath away,
I'm sure I shall not pass again this way.

I want to give to others hope and faith;
I want to do all that the Master saith;
I want to live aright from day to day,
I'm sure I shall not pass again this way.

REJOINDER NO. 3.

(Concluded.)

The usage of any word is to be ascertained by examining the passages that contain it. By doing this, we are led to the following conclusions:

(1) In some places to construe "baptizo" as meaning "to immerse" would do no violence to the laws of language.

(2) In no place does it necessarily mean "to immerse."

(3) In some places it can not possibly mean "to immerse." Proof of the last statement is all that I need to give.

This word is applied to the outpouring of the Holy Spirit. In Prov. i, 23; Isa. xliv, 3; Joel ii, 28, 29 and elsewhere, the outpouring of the Spirit, under the New Testament dispensation, was foretold; and when the promise was fulfilled, the people were said to be baptized with the Holy Ghost. In Matt. iii, 11, John says: "I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance: but he that cometh after me is mightier than I: . . . he shall baptise you with the Holy Ghost, and with fire." This baptism was spoken of by Christ in John xiv, 16, 17, and xv, 26. In Luke xxiv, 49 Christ said: "And, behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high." The promise of the Father was the Holy Spirit; and when he came upon them, they were to be "endued with power from on high." Now read Acts i, 4, 5: "And, being assembled together with them, commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith he, ye have heard of me. For John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence." Now, how were they baptized with the Holy Ghost? He continues: Acts i, 8: "But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you." He came on the day of Pentecost. "And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them. And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost." (Acts ii, 3, 4.) In this way they were baptized with the Holy Ghost, and with fire. Peter, in explaining the cause of this remarkable phenomenon, said: "But this is that which was spoken by the prophet, Joel. And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh." (Acts ii, 16 17.) The Holy Ghost was "poured out" and "sat upon" the disciples. They were "filled with the Holy Ghost," but not enveloped. This is called baptism. How anyone, in the face of all this, will contend that "baptizo" never means anything but "to immerse," is a mystery of mysteries. In the tenth chapter of Acts we have an account of Peter's visit to Cornelius, and in verse 44 it is said: "While Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the Word." In the eleventh chapter of Acts, Peter gives his own account of this visit. In verses 15 and 16 he says: "And as I began to speak, the Holy Ghost fell on them, as on us at the beginning"—i. e., on the day of Pentecost. "Then remembered I the word of the Lord, how that he said, John indeed baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost." Here it is as clear as a sunbeam that "baptizo" does not mean "to immerse."

3. Baptist teaching on this subject is contradicted by the meaning of words used as synonymous with "baptizo." In II. Kings v, 10-14, the Septuagint, written in the same dialect as the New Testament, gives "louo" as synonymous with "baptizo." Elisha said, "Go and wash in Jordan seven times." The word here for wash is "louo." So it is in verse 12: "May I not wash in them"—rivers of Damascus—"and be clean?" The servant, in remonstrating with Naaman, used the same word. "Louo" is used three times to signify what Elisha commanded Naaman to do. In verse 14 it is said, "Then went he down and baptized himself seven times." "Baptizo" must mean here whatever "louo" means. Liddell and Scott define this word as meaning "to wash; to wash the body; to bathe." The specific manner of washing is not given, for it is not in the word. In Naaman's case there was no immersion, for he said: "Behold, I thought, He will surely come out to me, and stand, and call on the name of the Lord his God, and strike his hand over the place, and recover the leper." In confirmation of this, the Latin Vulgate uses the word "lovo" in each place; and Ainsworth's Dictionary defines "lovo" in this way: "1. To wash, to rinse, to bathe. 2 To besprinkle," etc. Now, when we remember that the seven applications of water, required by the law (Lev. xiv, 7), were to be by sprinkling, it is manifest that in this case no immersion took place.

"Nipto" is likewise used as synonymous with "baptizo." A Pharisee invited Christ to dine with him, "and he went in and sat down to meat." In Luke xi, 38, it is said: "And when the Pharisee saw it, he marveled that he had not first washed before dinner." The word "washed" here is from "baptizo." In Mark vii, 3, it is said: "For the Pharisees, and all the Jews, except they wash their hands oft, eat not, holding the tradition of the elders." The word "wash" here is "nipto," defined by Liddell and Scott as follows: "'Nipto,' later form for 'nizo,' 'Nizo,' to wash, especially the hands and feet; to purge, cleanse, purify; to wash off." The Savior, in the Pharisee's house, did not wash his hands, thus ignoring a custom described in Luke by "baptizo," and in Mark by "nipto." These words were evidently used by Mark and Luke as synonymous, and if there is no immersion in one, there is none in the other.

These arguments against exclusive immersion could be made even stronger, but, for the lack of space, I must desist. Many other arguments I can not enter upon for the same reason. These are sufficient, however, to convince all who are not joined to their idol that when Bro. H., or anyone else, says, "When I say baptism, I mean immersion," he is speaking as a narrow sectarian, and not as the oracles of God.

Some Thoughts Concerning the "Residue Theory" of Regeneration.

MR. EDITOR: With your permission, I wish to make a few statements about the subject of sanctification, and the basis for its necessity as a second and independent experience apart from regeneration.

It will not be denied that all Christians, of every name, believe in the necessity of entire sanctification at some time before they reach heaven. The Antinomian theory is, that the environments of Christians are such in this life that they must continually live in sin; hence, they refer the matter of entire deliverance from sin to the purifying (?) ordeal of physical death. This theory is only to be stated in order to be refuted. The Romanist repudiates the Antinomian dogma by refering the whole matter of entire sanctification to the purgatorial fires after death. The theory of the Methodist Church is, that in this life Christians are thoroughly liberated from all sin through faith in the Son of God, whose blood (not physical death-pangs, not purgatorial fires) cleanses from all sin. A difference of opinion, however, has long since obtained among us as to the theory, the real point of difference being as to whether God gives full salvation from all sin in the process of regeneration, or whether he gives only a fractional cleansing then, and a thorough cleansing at some time in the future. The "residue theory" of regeneration is open to many and irreconcilable objections, which the most enthusiastic advocates are utterly powerless to remove. For instance: ask for information why they adopt a theory which the great body of the church has never accepted, and never will. I say they never will, for the following reasons, which I think will be found satisfactory grounds for repudiation:

1. It minifies and underrates and renders almost nugatory the work of regeneration, the importance of which, Mr. Wesley said, could not be too much stressed in public ministration.

2. It makes regeneration a partial, instead of a thorough, cleansing from all sin, as the Bible so unequivocally teaches. See Paul's direction to Titus, the third chapter, concerning the things which he should teach: "and be not faithless, but believing."

3. It holds to the fanciful idea of fractional, fragmentary forgiveness, which is at war with common sense, reason, and the Bible.

4. It presupposes that the faith which apprehends Christ, so as to bring about conscious justification, regeneration and adoption, is insufficient to apply to cleanse from all sin.

5. It so inflates those who hold it that they do not regard those who differ from them as being friends to the propagation of the great doctrine of holiness.

6. It puts forth for credence an unreasonable and an untenable absurdity, to wit: That depravity is a sin, and that particular sin is not touched by the blood of Christ in the first cleansing. Further, that God forgives the sinner his actual transgressions, but leaves him under the embarrassment of being guilty of wilfully retaining inbred sin (?). Nevertheless, he is a child of God, and has the witness of the Spirit. Away with such nonsense!

Finally. It arrays itself logically against the plainest teachings of Jesus the Christ. "Ye can not serve two masters." Ye can not serve God and mammon. If these assertions and solemn declarations of our Lord are true, the second-blessing theory of sanctification is not true. "If the Son, therefore, shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." (John viii, 36.) "But now, being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life." (Romans vi, 22.)

Correspondence.

To the Chairmen of the Annual Conferences Sunday-School Boards of the M. E. Church, South.

MY DEAR BRETHREN: I have been chairman of the Sunday-school Board of the Memphis Conference since the authorization of such Boards by the General Conference. I have often felt that the chairmen of the various Annual Conferences ought to have some means of communication by which plans of work would be exchanged, and the work thereby stimulated in the bounds of each Conference. I believe that a little informal organization, composed of the forty-five chairmen, would be of much value. There need be no expense attached to it, or, if any, it would be very nominal, and could be distributed pro rata, which would make it exceedingly light. At present, while all the Boards are working in harmony with disciplinary provisions, each one, in fact, is working independently, having its own by-laws and regulations. Good, earnest, co-operative work on the part of each chairman along similar lines would not only make the chairmen more efficient, but we could be of immense value to our Publishing House in the way of distributing literature and other collateral matter.

I simply write this to suggest that our forty-five chairmen, by correspondence or otherwise, form such an organization with, say, a president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer. Now, who will second the motion?

Beg to say that I have been working some lines recently as chairman of the Board of our Memphis Conference which, I think, would be very helpful to our general work, and I should like to send a copy of the matter to the chairman of each Annual Conference; and, if they will send me their names and addresses, I shall be glad to forward same at once.

Hoping that something permanent and of much value may come of these suggestions, I am, Yours truly,

J. R. PEPPER.

The One Necessary Endowment.

The success of every church is in the purity and the perpetual Christian life of its membership, and in its constant devotion to the Lord's cause. The success of every one of us is exactly in proportion to our reception and our retaining of the blessed Holy Ghost. A church may have every facility and accommodation, and yet, if the Spirit of God is not in the church to give success and everlasting power, that church is cold and dead. These material things are well enough in their place, but a church may have all of them and yet only be in a condition to be spewed out from the mouth of the Almighty. The vitalizing and progressive power of every church of God on the earth is the Holy Spirit. The little Pentecostal church of a hundred and twenty members had no organ or choir; no special equipments or adornments; it had no money, so that Peter had to say to the beggar, "Silver and gold have I none;" but that church had more power for salvation and for the revolution of the world than all the churches in the land which are cold and lifeless, although reveling in paint and plush and fresco and Dutch music.—Doctor McKaig.

Walking with God.

Very little does the Bible say about Enoch; but what little is said means a vast deal. In a terse way it is said that he "walked with God." It does not say that he walked behind God, nor that he walked ahead of him; but he just walked with him. This, we take it, means that Enoch kept even step with God, side by side with him, going neither faster nor slower than God did. This gave that splendid saint all of the blessed advantages which it is possible for any human being to receive in a companionship with God. It was thus that Enoch was constantly near God. He could not be any nearer. He was so near that he could not only hear God talk, but also every gentle whisper. In whispering speech he could make known his requests to God. What sweet and delicate communings they must have had! Let us remember that if we want to know much of God we must walk close by his side, and have our ears so sensitive that we shall hear every word that he says, and let him do the most of the talking. It becomes ignorance to be very modest while in the august presence of infinite wisdom. Our walking with God will be profitable in proportion to our capacity to listen reverently and teachably to all his utterances.—Baptist Courier.

To-Day's Duty.

"It will not last long." Your day, my day, the world's day, the day of opportunity, the day of grace, the day of salvation—all days are swiftly passing away; and the great day, the last day, will surely and speedily come."—So speaks a wise man. He speaks well. Time is short. Our waking hours are soon over. The cradle, the death chair of Frederick the Great in the Hohenzollern museum are placed side by side. With all of us they stand near together. The time allotted us to do our work for God will soon have emptied itself into the ocean of eternity. We must seize the present opportunities. Their neglect can never be repaired. We have our work to do. We have a daily work. It is more important than we know. Let us be up and doing. Remember what Jesus said: "I must do the work of him who sent me while it is day; for behold, the night cometh, when no man can work." Only one conscious of this necessity will be able to say when the sun is setting: "I have glorified thee on the earth. I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do."—Selected.

Hold On.

The man who is climbing the Alps has but to follow his guide, and set his foot in the right spot before him. This is the way you and I must let Christ lead, and have him so close to us also that it will be but a short way to behold him. Sometimes young Christians say to me: "I am afraid to make a public confession of Christ. I may not hold out." They have nothing to do with holding out; it is simply their duty to hold on. When future trials and perils come, their Master will give them help for the hour, if they only make sure they are his. The short view they need to take is a close, clear view of their own spiritual wants, and a distinct view of Jesus as ever at hand to meet those wants. If the fishermen of Galilee had worried themselves over the hardships they were to encounter, they might have been frightened out of their apostleship and their eternal crowns.—T. L. Cuyler, D. D.

How independent of outward circumstances the Holy Ghost can make the Christian. What a bright light may shine within us when it is all dark without! How firm, how happy, how calm, how peaceful we may be, when the world shakes to and fro, and the pillars of the earth are removed. Even death itself, with all its terrible influences, has no power to suspend the music of a Christian's heart, but rather makes that music become more sweet, more clear, more heavenly, till the last kind act which death can do is to let the earthly strain melt into the heavenly chorus, the temporal joy into the eternal bliss.—Spurgeon.

It is not enough to say, I will speak no evil; you are forbidden to think evil of anyone. Drive forth the thought as you would repel a venomous snake.

To think evil of others is to harbor in the chamber of the soul an insidious poison—a malaria, or miasma of death, which, by creating an atmosphere of inharmony, will injure you far more than the one against whom your thoughts go forth; an atmosphere that will blight every noble and spiritual impulse as frost in early spring time blights the daring flowers.

The world is full of shadows. Do not add to the darkness. Your mission should be to banish the night.

No man can belong to Christ who does not "let his light shine before men." We owe him time, talents, money, toil, and sacrifice of self to his service. Not the cheese parings or the candle ends are to be turned over to him. He has a sovereign right to the best. And if we are ready to acknowledge that, if we gladly consecrate to him our energy, influence, purse, and hearts, O how he will take us into the closest, sweetest, tenderest intimacy of his love! Not servants merely will we be, but confidential friends.—Exchange.

Many people will suffer this year from hunger and cold as they never did before. But God is touching the springs of charity, and many who have opportunity are responding to the cries of the needy as they have not done before. It is estimated that $125,000,000 has been expended to maintain charitable institutions the past year. There is $500,000,000 invested in institutions where the needy are cared for. And yet many suffer who are surrounded by plenty.—Methodist Herald.

How to Increase the Interest in, and Membership of, Our Missionary Societies.

[Extracts from a paper read by Mrs. T. B. Clifford before the missionary meeting of the Sardis district.]

First. By personal appeals. Each member of the W. F. M. S. should feel that it is incumbent upon her to seek to arouse to interest and duty every woman with whom she comes in contact. In our daily contact with each other in the home and social circle, this personal obligation should ever be uppermost in our minds, and we should seek to persuade others to throw off the lethargic cloak in which they have been so long wrapped, and co-operate with us in studying how and where we can do the best work for Jesus.

Second. The training of our women by the dissemination of missionary literature, and the use of charts, etc., in our monthly meetings. If there is a lack of information, it is not because we have no literature. Our presses are giving out in books, tracts, reports, etc., great floods of information; but there are too many who do not give the great stream of knowledge any attention. No missionary society can reach its highest effectiveness which has not at ready command maps, charts, tracts, books, and reports. These being at hand, are useful only as members will take the trouble to examine and understand them. The monthly journals of mission work are not carefully read. I shall not make a wild venture here when I say that, perhaps, one-third of our members who have subscribed for the Woman's Missionary Advocate do not read it with care, for often it goes directly from the postoffice to some secluded shelf, where it lies unread; and, alas! there are many who do not even subscribe. Not only in the regular monthly periodicals, but inexpensive books and leaflets, there are to be found facts and figures that would arouse the dull consciences of any who would not take the trouble to read. Then let the members of each auxiliary look to the dissemination of such literature, purchasing and scattering it broadcast throughout our own communities. Suppose every nominal member of the W. F. M. S. was fully posted about our work, our power would be doubled without the addition of one new member. The woman who blindly gives one dollar because some one says it is her duty, would give two were she informed sufficiently to see that it is a privilege to help the cause of her Lord. If she knew enough of the work to be able to tell her neighbor just what course her money would take, through whose hands it would pass, to what hands it would go, the names of the missionaries who would receive it, and for what kind of work it would be expended, she would become at once a missionary at home for increasing the work abroad. In our monthly meetings we might give several months to the earnest study of missionary geography. Have some competent person prepare to address the society with maps, showing the location of the mission fields. Let another give some account of the religious belief and the manners of that field. Let a history of the work in that field be given, with the names and occupations of the missionaries. Some such plan should be the central feature of every monthly meeting.

Third. Faithfulness to duty on the part of officers and members. As our programs should be carefully prepared beforehand, we, as officers and members, should discharge faithfully and conscientiously our own duty in this work, and so inspire others. We should let nothing that can possibly be overcome keep us from the meetings. We should plan to this end. We must be enthusiastic ourselves, that we may interest the unconcerned. Let cordial invitations be given outsiders, not only once, but many times, making them feel that their presence will be an encouragment. Presidents, are you always on hand, ready to greet the others with words of cheer? A great deal depends on you. Our corresponding secretary should notice the absentees, and send to each a copy of the leaflet. It is human nature to like to be noticed when present, and missed when absent. Our recording secretary should make the Minutes of the last meeting such a pleasing feature that those coming in late will feel they have lost the best part of the meeting.

Fourth. As every auxiliary should tend to build up to the spiritual life of its members, the devotional exercises should be an important part of the meeting. Let no leader of the devotions open her Bible at haphazard.

The best way to get one's cup full is to praise the Lord for what he has already put in it.

Hints to Presidents of Local Societies.

Be regular in holding your monthly meetings, having a fixed time and place if possible.

Have a card or postal card printed, with the dates and place of meeting for the year, and sent to every woman and young lady in the congregation (whether members of the society, or not), after the Annual Meeting of the society, for use during the coming year. Put "For Reference" on the card.

Have a strong Executive Committee to help you in your work, in your church; this committee to be composed of vice-presidents, secretary and treasurer of your society.

Call your Executive Committee together, if possible, once a month, just after the regular monthly meeting; then, after prayer and a few words of Scripture, review the work, taking an account of stocks, as it were; plan for next month's meeting. Do not be afraid to vary the meetings; give each one something to do; appoint the vice-presidents in turn to assist you at the next meeting (if at all watchful, they will see during the month something to read or tell about in the daily papers, or surely in the religious papers); ascertain from the treasurer how much money is in hand; appoint the secretary to ascertain from the pastor if there are any new members to whom she shall send the card, with time, place, etc. Each president, or her secretary, should have a list of every family in the church, obtained from the pastor. All women on this list who are not already members of the Home Mission Society should be invited to unite. The list will also be useful in sending out notices, etc.

After each communion season, if any women, or young ladies, have been received into the church, have the secretary get their address from the pastor and write them a personal letter, with invitation to become members of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society of your church, stating the amount constituting membership, with names of officers, time and place of meeting, etc. Then, as president, make it convenient, as soon as possible, to call upon the newcomers and cordially invite them to the next meeting. If the president can not follow up the personal letter, let her see that her vice-president does it.

Try and adopt some plan to receive the monthly gifts regularly. Do not encourage the members to give for a year at one time. Carefully consider the different ways, and adopt the best way, for receiving monthly all contributions.

Have the treasurer give a monthly report at the monthly meeting of moneys received, and see that the sum in hand is sent every three months to the Conference treasurer, and a receipt received and filed away. Often the Conference treasurer sends articles, as leaflets, when acknowledging money. Let the treasurer hand these to the president.

Have some person appointed to secure subscriptions to Our Homes, and forward to Miss Lucinda B. Helm, 1500 Third avenue, Louisville, Ky. The price is fifty cents a year.

It is pleasant and profitable to have a "watchword," or text of Scripture, for your motto or inspiration for the year, and at each monthly meeting repeat it in concert. Invite the ladies to study it up, and bring a thought or text upon it. Then at the Annual Meeting when the delegate, when her name on the roll is called, repeat it as the "watchword" of her society.

Each president should have a care over the Bands of the church. Send them a leaflet or item that may interest or help them; pray for them; do not let interest die out, but encourage them in every possible way. If there is no Band in your church, try and form one. Use your influence to have the Sabbath-school interested in home missions, and try to secure at least one collection each year for the work of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society. Do not grow discouraged, but pray earnestly and work diligently in your particular field which is your own, and all that belongs to it. Consult with and ask the aid of your pastor. Make your annual meeting memorable. Send special invitations to the members; have your pastor say a few words of cheer. Above all, pray daily for our country, for a pure government, for the home mission work in our land, for the salvation of souls everywhere and for your own work in particular. Feel your individual responsibility as an officer in your church, and as a representative of your Conference.

If you seek divine aid, you will receive it, and your influence will be felt far and near. "Your labor is not be in vain in the Lord." (1. Cor. xv, 58.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. J. E. Riddle, Coushatta, La.: "I just wanted to tell you that our presiding elder was around again last week, and was so genial and everyway so highly acceptable as to completely captivate not only our people, but Baptists and everybody else who saw and heard him. He is spoken of as a tip-top preacher and an ideal presiding officer. We are preaching to large congregations here, and the church is prospering."

Rev. R. A. Breland, P. C., Camden, Miss.: "I report from Camden circuit for the month of April as follows: Sermons preached, 8; pastoral visits made, 30; miles traveled, 270; prayer meetings held, 4; love-feasts held, 1; funerals attended, 1; marriages attended, 1; adults baptized, 1; infants baptized, 2; new subscribers to NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, 1; renewals to NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, 3. The Lord is blessing us graciously. Pray for us."

Rev. W. W. Woollard, Inks, North Mississippi Conference, April 30: "We are just closing a most powerful meeting here. The whole town was moved as it had not been for years. A great many have been converted. Thus far we have received into the church 22, making 40 in all since Conference. Rev. H. C. Johnson, from Memphis, has done the preaching during the meeting. It was a great joy to see how earnestly and zealously the young men and young women worked for their friends. God has given us a great victory."

Rev. W. T. Woodward, Simmsport, La.: "We are progressing nicely over here in the land of mosquitoes. Our prayer meetings are very well attended, and much interest manifested along the line of spiritual growth. Sunday-schools are increasing in attendance and interest. We have some attending our schools that have never attended before. Our second Quarterly Conference has come and gone, with good results. Bro. Davies preached two splendid sermons. He left us happy, and we sent him off rejoicing—paid his quarterage in full. The preacher's salary was raised fifty dollars. Recommended one brother to District Conference for license to preach. Repaired one church at the cost of $10.85. Improvements on parsonage to the amount of $33 85. We have $34 in cash and good subscription to cell the Riverside Church. Received four into the church, married one couple, buried two infants, secured two subscribers to NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. We are to have Revs. J. Louis Morrell and D. C. Rawls to conduct revival meetings for us during the latter part of May and first part of June. Should any of the brethren need their services, it would be well for them to write them at once at Simmsport, La. We ask the prayers of all Christian people upon above-named services. God bless the ADVOCATE. May it continue to grow and bless her thousands!"

Rev. Wm. Schuhle, P. C., Grosse Tete and False River circuit, Louisiana Conference: "For more than twenty-five years Methodism has struggled for an existence in this territory. At times our prospects would bid fair to a development of strength and permanency; then again they would be blasted by looming floods and outgoing members. Thus the once flourishing church at Arhroth, on the banks of the Mississippi, met its fate. Harmony Church, at Lakeland, experienced a similar destiny. Methodism at both of these points has a past, but no present. At this time we have but two congregations left. Cottonwood is our only church in Pointe Coupee; in West Baton Rouge parish we have no congregation; and at Rosedale (which, by the way, is the only Protestant community in Iberville parish) we have a membership of twenty, but no house of worship. Through all this struggling past we worshiped in the Presbyterian Church, and we continue to enjoy this hospitality of our sister denomination. But surely Methodism is now old (if not rich) enough to set up housekeeping. In pursuance with the existing sentiment, a resolution was passed at our recent Quarterly Conference, a Building Committee was appointed and given leave to solicit funds, etc. Hence if the readers should happen to receive a letter from any member of said committee (C. L. Andrews, Andrew H. Gay, Mrs. L. R. Davis, J. A. Matirne, and the writer) soliciting funds for this enterprise, it is sincerely hoped that a hearty response will not be denied. A house of worship we must have, or Methodism can never be a distinctive force in the country. In the language of this prophet, 'Let us rise up and build.'"

Rev. R. C. Phillips, Supply, Theadville, Miss.: "Our mission is progressing favorably. We have organized one church and two Sunday-schools. We have reason to believe that the foundation is being laid for at least two active substantial churches on our work, viz., New Home and State Line. In the last round we received 12 additions at the former and 2 at the latter. Each of these churches have a Sunday-school and a weekly prayer meeting. There is a pressing need for active work in this section. Here are the unsaved from the children to the patriarchs tottering in the feebleness of old age. 'The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few.' Then I have noticed that some of these unconverted old people have been attending church services all of their lives. They seem to delight in them, and some of them attend church regularly. Now, where is the trouble? Are we ministers chargeable in this matter? Do we entertain them without awakening their concern as to the danger of their lethargy? Are we letting them sleep on to their death without a warning cry? Do we 'preach peace when there is no peace?' Oh, for a great awakening! for a consciousness of sin—a fear of evil and eternal death! God help us to preach sin to the death and redemption to eternal life. Our treasurer of the Mission Board sent us a partial payment of the first quarter of our appropriation, stating that this was all the money on hand, and that as floods were coming in slowly he was fearful our time would not come again until Fall? Well, there are some of our people who have not been educated to pay the assessments, etc.; but, by the help of God, we will do our best to make an improvement on this line. Brethren, pray for us."

Rev. W. C. Harris, Corinth, Miss., April 29: "On April 7 W. P. Fife, a Presbyterian evangelist, began a union meeting in the court-house in our town, and continued until the twenty-second. It was a great meeting, and will be remembered as such for many years. It was claimed that there had been as many as three hundred conversions. This, I am sorry to say, is, in my judgment, far from the correct number. I think, perhaps, we can find as many as one hundred who claim to have been converted. I suppose this mistake grew out of a failure on the part of many to comprehend what was involved in certain propositions. The meeting was continued in the Baptist Church last week; will be carried on in the Presbyterian Church this week, and thus from church to church it will go on until we have gotten all round. Up to date there have been eighty-nine accessions to the different churches. Thirty-eight of these have come into our church. There are others to join yet. Besides this number of conversions and accessions, a wonderful work has been done. Christians are more consecrated; quite a number of family altars have been erected, and, perhaps, best of all, there is an increased interest on the part of the people generally in the study of the Bible. I have been impressed more than ever before with the fact that the success of a meeting depends upon the co-operation of the church with the preacher. Bro. Fife is a remarkable man. Still, had the pastors and churches of the town not rallied to his support with earnest prayer and constant work, the meeting would have been an absolute failure. On the other hand, with this co-operation, almost any man would have succeeded. While I am profoundly thankful for all the good that has been done, I verily believe that the coming of an evangelist was not the best thing that could have happened for the town of Corinth."

Rev. J. W. Anderson, P. C., Houston, Miss., May 3: "On last night we closed in Houston, Miss., a most interesting and profitable ten-days' meeting, which resulted in the conversion of eighteen precious souls to Christ, the addition of eight new members to our church, with several more to follow, and a gracious revival quickening throughout nearly the entire membership of the church. The church was elevated to a higher Christian experience, and we hope for more and better work along all the lines of church interest. Bro. L. A. McKeown, of Inks, Miss., was with us the first eight days of the meeting, and then was called home to the bedside of a sick wife. Bro. M. Keown is a fine revival preacher. The people of Houston feel much in love with him. The second Quarterly Conference for this charge was held at this place during our protracted meeting. Our much-esteemed presiding elder, Bro. S. M. Thames, was on hand in good spirits, and preached us two very thoughtful and soul-stirring sermons. This was Bro. Thames' first visit to this town, and he made a good impression on the people. We had a fine communion service on Sunday after the sermon. The spiritual outlook of this charge is much better than it was in the Winter. We have our literature, and expect to observe Children's Day at each appointment. Our Sunday-schools are doing well. We are getting along as well as could be expected in raising the collections ordered by the Conference. We have collected a little over half this amount, and have nearly all of the other half provided for by subscription. We have collected about half as much money on these assessments as the entire charge has paid the presiding elder and preacher in charge. We have secured eleven new subscribers to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE and several to other papers since Conference. May the Lord give us a successful year. I hope to meet you, Mr. Editor, at our District Conference. God bless you and the ADVOCATE. Bro. W. L. Anderson was with us in the last of our meeting, and preached two good, earnest sermons for us."

NOTES FROM KENTWOOD, LA.

We commenced a meeting at Kentwood on the third Sunday in April. Rev. D. C. Rawls, evangelist, came to us on Thursday of that week, and remained for ten days, doing most of the preaching. The meeting was held under his large tent, as we had no church-building. From the start the people seemed to be interested, and the interest increased until the close. It is hard to give a correct estimate of the result. The hearts made to rejoice in a Savior's love, the homes made happy, and the lives straightened out, etc. There were between 50 and 100 who professed conversion at the altar, and 8 sanctifications. We took 22 members into the Methodist Church, and baptized 14 children. Some joined the other churches in the town. Withal, the most wonderful meeting that has ever been held in that section of the country.

Bro. Rawls left us and went to Rayne, La., where he engages in another meeting. We pray that he may be as successful in all his efforts as with us. He won the hearts of the people in Kentwood. He is a good, earnest, consecrated preacher. God bless him. His address is Y. M. C. A., New Orleans, La. J. J. SMYLIE, P. C.

Echoes from Louisville.

At its recent meeting in Louisville the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society resolved to establish a training-school in the mountains of Kentucky. The town of London has offered a suitable site and a bonus of $15,000 on condition that $20,000 more shall be raised as an endowment fund. The Kentucky Conference P. and H. M. Society has already raised $5,000, leaving only $15,000 to be raised from the church at large. The work of raising this money has been entrusted to Miss Belle Bennett. That she will succeed is not doubted by those who know her marvelous success in raising funds for the Kansas City Training-school.

The reports made to the Church Extension Board were exceedingly gratifying. The regular collections for the past year aggregate $53 503.32. In addition to this $2,795.37 has been received from legacies and donations; and two loan funds have been added, aggregating $6,200. Including those assisted by the Conference Boards, 348 churches have been aided. The number of churches aided since the beginning in 1882 is 2,986. Money raised from the beginning, $839,565.91. Property secured, $3,500,000.

The Board of Missions resolved to establish a new mission station in Northern China, and authorized Bishop Galloway to raise the necessary funds by special collections.

The assessments are the same as last year, $350,000. The appropriations are as follows: Brazil, $31,400; China, $31,947; Japan, $30,251; Central Mexico, $26 660; Mexican Border, $15,307; Northwest Mexico, $12 393; Indian, $17,500; Pacific, $3,200; Los Angeles, $4 250; Columbia, $3,560; East Columbia, $2,225; Denver, $4,940; Montana, $3,560; Western, $1 750; New Mexico, $4,600; Florida, $2,500; Western Virginia, $750; German, $2,500; expense account, $16,350. Total, $215,643. Less two single men's salaries paid by two individuals, $1,100. Total, $214,543. The Board requested the Sunday-school editor to prepare once a quarter a programme for Sunday-school missionary societies. A resolution was also adopted requesting the Sunday-school Board to prepare by-laws for Sunday-school missionary societies.

On Sunday the churches in Louisville were, of course, occupied by the Bishops and other visiting celebrities, and collections were taken for the benefit of the Louisville Church Extension Society. The sum of $18,768 was raised. Very good for one day. Eleven thousand dollars of this was paid by two persons: J. S. Lithgow and Mrs. E. L. Webb — $5,000 and $6,000 respectively.

Baltimore was selected as the place for holding the next General Conference.

In the Delta.

We had the pleasure of looking in on the Greenville District Conference, which was held at Tunica, May 3-5. Sub-bishop Randolph presided with dignity and grace. An account of the proceedings will be found in this issue from the facile pen of the secretary, Rev. T. Y. Ramsey. Dr. Murrah, Rev. J. W. Malone and Rev. J. W. Honnoll made addresses in behalf of the institutions of learning over which they preside. The reports from all these institutions were encouraging and gratifying. Rev. J. W. McLaurin made a brief address in behalf of the important interest which he represents—the American Bible Society. Bro. Bachman, the Conference colporteur, was on hand with a good supply of Methodist literature, and seemed to be doing a thriving business. The only preaching we heard during our brief stay was by an individual whom we have frequently heard before — the editor of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. During Saturday's session a very fine paper was read by Rev. T. Y. Ramsey on Pastoral Work.

Tunica is quite a nice little town, situated about thirty miles south of Memphis. Our church at this point is not yet very strong, numerically, but is growing. The pastor, Dr. H. T. Gaines, is in favor with his people. We were delightfully domiciled in the elegant and hospitable home of Mr. Erwin—a Presbyterian family.

On Saturday night we dropped down one hundred and ten miles southward to Arcola, where we had an engagement to dedicate a church on Sunday. After preaching to a very large and attentive audience, we solemnly dedicated the church according to the disciplinary form. It is a very neat, tasteful structure, built according to one of Uncle David Morton's plans, and is of ample dimensions to meet the wants of the community. The pastor, Bro Mimms, is to be congratulated upon his success in building such a house during a time of great financial stringency. This church contributed last year for all church purposes forty-five dollars per capita. Has any charge had a better record? Some other things in this church are worthy of mention. Although many of its members live some distance in the country, the attendance upon the weekly prayer meeting is frequently in excess of the entire membership of the church. Although the membership is quite small, it pays its pastor a fair salary, and does a great deal for him that is not counted in his salary. The liberality of this little band is shown in various ways. For instance: Not long since an appeal was made through the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE for help for a preacher and his family in Indian Territory. Immediately some of these Arcola sisters set to work to raise a box of supplies, and in a day or two a box worth more than fifty dollars was on its way to the brother in need.

During our stay in Arcola we were the guests of Bro. and Sister Mimms at the parsonage, to whom we are indebted for many courtesies. We also enjoyed the hospitalities of Bros. Phillips and Smith.

We know of no region in Southern Methodism that has developed as much along moral and religious lines within the last two decades as this Delta country. The contrast between now and then seems almost marvelous. Our brethren of the North Mississippi Conference are to be congratulated upon the possession of such territory and upon the manner in which they are developing its magnificent resources.

During the present year revivals of great power have been held in many of the charges in this district. A glorious future awaits our church in this region.

Neither Dead Nor Sleeping.

When President Cleveland attached his signature to the Anti-Lottery bill, passed by the last Congress, it was generally supposed that this was the death-knell of that famous iniquity, the Louisiana Lottery, alias the Honduras National Lottery. This, however, is an egregious mistake. The traditional nine-lived cat is far more easily extinguished than the Louisiana Lottery. It has instituted legal proceedings to test the constitutionality of the Anti-Lottery law. But, if anybody supposes that it is going to await the slow processes of the law in order to continue its work of pocketing the shekels of fools, he is simply "a back number"—"a regular greeney." The infamous concern is now carrying on its operations, not in Tampa, Florida, or Honduras, but in its original home, the Crescent City. We do not mean by this that its drawings take place here. If there are any drawings, they may take place in Honduras. But we do not believe there are any drawings. We believe that at present every purchaser of a ticket simply loses his money. But, drawings or no drawings, it is constantly receiving money for tickets, and sending out tickets. Of course, no tickets are sent to the address of the Lottery. All its mail and express matter comes to the address of private individuals; and the same individual often has a number of aliases. When the tickets are sent out they are sent in disguise—put up in a box and marked "shoes," "cigars," "confections," and so on to the end of a very long chapter. The express companies are bringing daily money for lottery tickets, and sending out daily packages of tickets thus disguised. And the express companies are not culpable in this matter. An express official has no right to open a box marked "shoes" to see whether it contains shoes or something else.

If grand juries and United States officials desire to enforce the Anti-Lottery law, let them subpæna the officials of the express companies of this city, and put them through a rigid catechization. And express agents in other localities stationed on the coast of Mississippi might make some remarkable revelations as to mysteirous packages delivered frequently to persons who have not heretofore been known as citizens. Do the powers that be really wish to stamp out this iniquity? We shall see. Believing that in a case of this sort the press is almost omnipotent, we suggest to our brethren of the tripod that they turn on the light.

States' Rights.

The Legislature of the State of South Carolina, at its last session, made provision for the holding of a convention for the purpose of remodeling the Constitution of the State. Two or three weeks since a citizen of the State of the name of Mills applied to Judge Goff, of the United States Court, for an injunction restraining the State authorities from holding an election for delegates to the said convention, basing his plea upon the unconstitutionality of the registration laws of the State. On the eighth instant Judge Goff granted the injunction asked for. Some of the provisions of the registration statutes which he pronounces unconstitutional are as follows: (1) The voter is required not only to register, but also to produce on the day of the election a certificate of registration. (2) The voter must procure a new certificate of registration with every change of residence to a new voting precinct. (3) The registration books close four months before the election.

Such a decision resting upon such a basis seems to us to be the most remarkable judicial event of the century. Granting for the sake of argument that the United States Courts have authority to interfere with the holding of a State election, we fail to see in the facts here cited any sufficient ground for judicial interference. We regard these provisions as admirably adapted to the securing of an honest exercise of the right of suffrage. But even if it could be shown that these provisions are unwise and oppressive, we would still none the less deprecate Judge Goff's decision. Notwithstanding the war and its results, we believe there is still such a thing in existence as States' rights; and if States have any rights at all, the one more sacred than all others is the regulation of the right of suffrage.

We hold that as this is purely a State election, it is a matter with which the Federal Courts should have nothing to do. Provisions similar to those of the South Carolina registration laws exist in many of the States. If the United States Courts have a right to step in and prevent the holding of this election in South Carolina, then they have a right to annul the acts of what they regard as illegally constituted Constitutional Conventions in various States—notably Mississippi. We firmly believe that this decision will be reversed by the Supreme Court of the United States. We do not believe that the hour has yet arrived when the several States that compose this great nation will be called upon to surrender their autonomy to a great centralized government at Washington. In that faith we will abide until we see what we shall see.

The International Epworth League Conference.

The second International Conference of the Epworth League is to be held in Chattanooga in 1895. Rev. Dr. S. A. Steele, Secretary of the League of the M. E. Church, South, visited Chattanooga recently, and after a thorough investigation of the ability of the city to creditably handle the meeting, announced that it would be held there. This will, without doubt, be the most important religious meeting yet held in the South, and brings opportunities near to us that our people will not be slow to take advantage of. The help it will bring to our rapidly developing League work will be most valuable.

Chattanooga is a representative Southern city, and has many advantages for this great meeting. The geographical location is good. In the very center of the South, it is not far from the great States of the central North. Ten railroad lines enter the city, insuring quick transit and low rates. No point in the country possesses more of historic interest than Chattanooga and its environs. In the city itself are forts, breastworks, headquarters, military prisons and hospitals, besides very large cemeteries for the dead of each army. Lookout Mountain, on the sides of which the celebrated "battle above the clouds" was fought, and from the summit of which one of the finest scenic views in America is obtained, is only a mile south of the city limits. On the top of this mountain, Lookout Inn, a palatial Summer and Winter hotel to accommodate 1,000 guests, has recently been erected. Missionary Ridge, the scene of another great battle, is not further to the east of Chattanooga, and is easily reached. Just beyond the Ridge is "Bloody Chickamauga." It is well known the government is now converting these historic battlefields into the "Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Military Park." Nearly $750,000 has already been spent on the work, and probably as much more will go into it. Every position of a body of troops during the battles is being carefully marked with descriptive tablets, making an absolutely correct history of the battles. Monuments are also being erected by nearly all of the States of the Union in the park to their regiments that participated in the battles. The park is established as a tribute to "American valor"—the government erecting exactly the same monuments to Confederate as for Federal troops.

Chattanooga is a prosperous city of nearly 50,000 people, and is greatly interested in the proposed League meeting. The leading business men of the city have taken hold of the movement, and insure its financial success and satisfactory entertainment. The hotel and street car accommodations are good. Visitors can be entertained on Lookout Mountain, Mission Ridge or Chickamauga, and reach all the meetings of the Conference without difficulty. The city is finely paved, well lighted, has a good sewerage system and is well governed. The people are moral and come from every section of the country. All Protestant religious denominations are represented in the city with good churches. Methodism predominates — with twenty churches. Every church has a working League Chapter, and all come together in a "Fraternal Union League." All will unite in the entertainment of this Conference. A number of prominent League officers reside there.

The Centenary Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of which the Rev. Dr. J. P. McFerrin is pastor, is one of the strongest in the whole denomination.

An attendance of fully 10,000 Leaguers is anticipated at the coming meeting. Dr. Schell expects more than 5,000 to come from the North, and Dr. Steele very happily adds that "if 5,000 Yankees are to invade the South, he proposes to see to it that they are met by an army from Dixie of equal numbers." The Chattanooga Committee will take up the work promptly and handle it aggressively. One great open-air meeting on Lookout Mountain has been suggested as one of the features of the Conference.

A New Book.

ADDRESSES DELIVERED BY REV. J. W. SHOAFF, D. D., in St. Francis Street Methodist Church, Mobile, Ala. 1895.

The above is the title of a neatly printed pamphlet which lies upon our table through the courtesy of Bro. W. J. Hearn. The pamphlet contains two addresses. The first is an address delivered at the funeral of that prince of Mobile Methodism, W. L. Baker. The other is entitled "The Historic Memories of St. Francis Street Church, Mobile." It was delivered March 31, '95, at the last service held in the old St. Francis Street Church, preparatory to tearing it down to make room for a more spacious and modern structure. Both addresses are written in the ornate style characteristic of the gifted author. The second contains much information concerning the history of Methodism in "The Gulf City." It has also charming pen portraits of the men who have filled the pulpit of that celebrated church.

A meeting composed of representatives of all the Methodist Churches of the city was held at Carondelet Street Church, on the seventh, for the purpose of organizing a City Mission and Church Extension Society. Presiding Elder Sawyer in the chair. Addresses were made by Dr. Sawyer, J. L. Pierce, F. S. Parker, D. Zable, and E. P. Mackie. A constitution admirably adapted to the purposes of the organization was read by Bro. Westerfield, and unanimously adopted. A collection was taken aggregating nearly a hundred dollars. A tent or a gospel wagon will soon be procured and aggressive work will commence. New Orleans is a field white unto the harvest for work of this sort. The society begins with a good membership, which will, doubtless, be much increased in the near future.

A revival meeting is in progress at Louisiana Avenue.

A mass meeting in the interest of ballot reform was held in this city on the thirteenth. This was the beginning of a movement that will spread rapidly throughout the State. We shall have more to say on the subject in our next issue.

We regret to learn that Rev. J. W. Lowrance, of the Southwest Missouri Conference, and stationed in Kansas City, has been obliged to give up his work on account of ill-health. Bro. Lowrance will make his home in Holly Springs, Miss.

In concluding a business letter a brother writes: "Let me say now what I have long wanted to tell you. I get more benefit and enjoyment from the ADVOCATE now than I have ever gotten, and especially do I enjoy your strong and spirited editorials. God bless you and your work."

"Bridgeport Training-school" is the name of a new institution of learning founded at Bridgeport, Ala. It will begin its first session next Fall. The members of the faculty, so far as the public has been advised, are as follows: E. K. Turner, J. R. Hunter, and J. S. Johnston. It is supposed that Rev. B. M. Drake, formerly of Centenary College, will also occupy a chair. Prof. Johnston is a son of Rev. P. A. Johnston, of the Louisiana Conference.

The Woman's Board of Missions met in Meridian, Miss., last week. From the official reports we glean the following statistics: Conference societies, 34; auxiliaries, 3,411; membership, 69 559; contributions for foreign work, $63 951.98; contributions for Scarritt Training-school, $6 396.91; total contributions, $70 348.89; missionaries in the field, 38; native helpers, 109; hospitals, 1; boarding-schools, 13; day-schools, 40; pupils under instruction, 4,376. This is an exceedingly gratifying report. The more one reflects upon these figures the more he will wonder at "what God has wrought" through the instrumentality of these noble women of our church. Every member of this organization should feel her heart swelling with emotions of joy and gratitude as she contemplates the magnitude of this work; and every woman who is not a member should regard it as both a privilege and a duty to fall in with this mighty procession that is marching on to a glorious destiny. Can it be said of any woman who refuses to participate in this work, "She hath done what she could"?

***

Last week's issue of Zion's Herald contains a cut of the Methodist Hospital in New York City; and a superb structure it is. This institution came into existence through the munificence of that prince among Methodist laymen, George I. Seney, who expended $410,000 on the buildings. One hundred thousand dollars additional has been raised by the superintendent, Rev. J. S. Breckenridge, D. D.; and still the buildings are far from being completed. This gives some idea of the magnificent scale on which the institution has been projected. An endowment fund of $300 000 has been raised, and this is being constantly increased. The Annual Conferences are pledging themselves to raise sums varying from $500 to $5,000. We congratulate our sister church upon her achievements in this direction. This movement came none too soon. There is need of a first-class hospital, with all modern appliances, in every large city in our land; and Methodism will be remiss in her duty if she does not do her part in meeting this want. Who would not rather have such an institution to perpetuate his memory on the earth than the tallest shaft or costliest mausoleum ever erected.

The Advocate for Seventy Cents.

We are now offering the ADVOCATE for seventy cents a year in connection with Holman's Self-Pronouncing Bible. Figure it this way: The publisher's price of the Bible we offer is $3 15, and it is very cheap at that. Many Bibles inferior to it are selling at from four to five dollars. We give this $3 15 Bible and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE for one year for $3 85. A person who is not a subscriber can not get it for a cent less than $3.15. Is he not putting the ADVOCATE at seventy cents? This Bible has the helps contained in the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the most valuable Bible on the market. Our subscribers who have procured it are enthusiastic in its praise. If you want it, don't delay; otherwise, you may do as some of our subscribers have done in regard to other premiums—get left. See description of it on another page. Everybody ought to have it.

An Explanation.

Some time since we agreed to publish an advertisement of Lookout Inn, Chattanooga, Tenn. When the "ad." came, being exceedingly crowded with work, we did not read it carefully, but merely glanced at it and turned it over to the printer, never dreaming that it contained anything insulted to our columns. Great was our surprise, therefore, when we learned a few days since by a letter from a brother that the aforesaid advertises "dancing" as one of the attractions of the place. The "ad." will not appear again in our columns in any form.

Columbus District Conference.

The District Conference of Columbus district, North Mississippi Conference, will convene at Starkville, beginning Tuesday, June 4, at 2:30 P. M., and continue until 10:30 A. M., Friday. The first day will be given to Sunday-school work. All Sunday-school superintendents are invited to be present and participate in this work. Woman's work, foreign missions, and parsonage and home missions will be represented by members of the respective boards.

A full attendance of the preachers, delegates, and Sunday-school superintendents is earnestly requested. A program of exercises will be furnished later. T. C. WIER, P. E.

Our Sunday-School Literature.

The business manager informs me today, May 7, that the circulation of our Sunday-school periodicals is increasing so rapidly as to necessitate the printing of two thousand additional copies of the Magazine and fifteen thousand additional copies of the Senior and Intermediate Quarterlies for June. This is very gratifying, indeed. Let the good work go on. We are trying to give the church the best Sunday-school literature we have ever had, and ask for it the largest possible circulation. W. D. Wesson, Miss.

The admirable letter of Bro. H. P. Lewis, in the ADVOCATE of to-day, May 9, is a sufficient answer to that effusion of the unknown "Veritas" just preceding it. Bro. Lewis was not ashamed of his article and signed his name to it.

When anonymous letters refer to myself, they are always ignored. But as "Veritas" refers in a disparaging manner to Dr. Carradine, who was my guest, come to Wesson on my invitation, and held a meeting which was owned and blessed of God, it is my duty to defend my friend against the misstatements of "Veritas," whose motive may not be as apparent to others as it is to the "people that are called Methodists" at Wesson.

During his stay in Wesson Dr. Carradine did not publicly call attention to the Tennessee Methodist, distribute sample copies and urge the congregation to subscribe. But, with my hearty consent, he did distribute sample copies of The Methodist and urge the congregation to subscribe—and a goodly number did so. A bundle of fifty copies of the Tennessee Methodist, sent to me by Dr. Haynes, were distributed by me and not by Dr. Carradine. Had Dr. Black sent me a bundle of NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATES, they would have been distributed also.

Dr. Carradine said not one word concerning himself which any unprejudiced person could have condemned. In no way whatever did he advertise himself, or his freedom from vanity, or his great humility, or his little humility, or his humility at all.

"Veritas" may not know that the Tennessee Methodist is published at Nashville, Tenn., and The Methodist at Louisville, Ky., by corporations as distinct from each other as the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE corporation of New Orleans, La., is from either.

"Veritas" and I agree in saying, 'Something wrong somewhere, brethren;" but differ in locating the wrong. God bless him or her—whichever "Veritas" may be.

Yours faithfully,
T. L. MELLEN.

Second Week of Grace.

Rev. T. K. Faunt LeRoy, pastor of the Felicity Street Methodist Church, was among the pastors who refused to allow Dr. Carradine, or any other preacher proclaiming the doctrine of the second blessing, to use his pulpit for that purpose.

Yesterday evening a representative of The Times-Democrat called on him for the purpose of interviewing him.

Inquiring of Mr. Faunt LeRoy what his opinion was of this second work of grace before he had experienced it, he replied:

"The thought was repugnant to me, and I opposed with honest antagonism, and no one was more surprised than myself when conscious of the desire for this second work."

When asked for a statement of the doctrine, the preacher said: "Theologically, I have not studied the subject of the doctrine of entire sanctification as a second work of grace, but as to the fact itself as an experience to be realized and enjoyed. There is no question as distinct and convincing as that which is theologically termed conversion or the new birth. This second work of grace does not in the least degree minify conversion, regeneration, or whatever you may be pleased to term it; but, upon the contrary, it only intensifies and brings out that mysterious work of God upon the human heart with a distinctiveness that adds strength to that act and gives to God a deeper feeling of gratitude for what he has already done and witnessed to by the Holy Ghost. Words can not convey the exact idea of this second work of grace; it must be seen to be appreciated. It is a revelation, not a conception.

"Because I have experienced this second work, it must in no sense be understood as evincing a want of spiritual union and harmony with God anterior to the present work.

"Some states are hard to convey in language, but this sanctifying power of God is that point where I not only feel that God loves me and sustains me, but it is that exact point where my personality is merged into God's love for me, and I worship God because I love him, and prior to this because God loved me."—Times-Democrat.

A Chance to Make Money.

I have berries, grapes and peaches, a year old, fresh as when picked. I use the California Cold Process; do not heat or seal the fruit, just put it up cold, keeps perfectly fresh, and costs almost nothing; can put up a bushel in ten minutes. Last week I sold directions to over 120 families; anyone will pay a dollar for directions, when they see the beautiful samples of fruit. As there are many people poor like myself, I consider it my duty to give my experience to such, and feel confident anyone can make one or two hundred dollars round home in a few days. I will mail sample of fruit and complete directions, to any of your readers, for eighteen two-cent stamps, which is only the actual cost of the sampler, postage, etc., to me.

It is our deliberate opinion that a Methodist preacher, whether traveling or local, who will boldly and unqualifiedly, in the public press, accuse his brethren who oppose the "second blessing" theory of sanctification of opposing holiness in the church, should have his character arrested for false accusation. Scarcely a copy of certain "second blessing" papers reaches our office that does not contain this charge, in some form or other, by editors or contributors, and the time has come when this thing should cease, or the accusers be held to account. Whether this charge is made ignorantly or maliciously does not alter the fact, nor lessen the gravity of the falsehood. This charge has been uttered and repeated until it is getting to be an old song, and it will be kept up until some one whose love for the church, and for the truth, is strong enough to induce him to teach some of these men a lesson which they seem unable to learn in any other way.—Holston Methodist.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

INTIMATION OF IMMORTALITY.
(Job xiv, 13-16.)

"To be or not to be, that is the question," said the bard of Avon. Yes, "If a man die, shall he live again?"

1. Immortality is the desire of all nations. Heathen, as well as Christian, philosophers so expressed themselves. You know the ancient fable of the phœnix. This imaginary bird would, repeatedly, when attaining to old age, withdraw himself in his nest, miraculously ignite it, be consumed, and out of the ashes rise rejuvenated.

2. Nature vaguely intimates the immortality of man. Death reigns in the vegetable kingdom in the Winter. Snow and ice furnish the winding sheet. But soon Boreas is conquered. Lovely Spring appears. Reanimation, life, beauty.

3. Reason, though staggering, discovers foothold for the establishment of the doctrine of immortality.

(1) All created being indicates the wisdom of the Creator. Everywhere design and object apparent.

(2) Man's intellect a source of wealth. Development marvelous. Proficiency. But, even then, man is conscious of possibilities which old age and death suddenly cut off. Destroyed. Is it in keeping with God's wisdom and justice that such rare opulence be destroyed, annihilated? It would be wicked wastage.

(3) Though agreeing that there are different standards of right and wrong, at no time and in no nation did the right always succeed. The wrong usually won the day. Must there not be an hereafter where there is a proper equalization according to man's real moral worth?

4. Revelation only throws full light on this subject. We refer only to what Job held in chapter xix, 25-27.

(1) The life of the Redeemer was to him proof of his own immortality. He lives. And because Christ lives, we shall live also.

(2) That, notwithstanding the consumption of our bodies by worms, putrefaction inevitable, they shall be restored and live in the presence of God. "In my flesh shall I see God."

(3) He held to the unimpaired maintenance of man's individual identity. "Whom I shall see for myself, . . . and not another." A creation would destroy that identity. In case of judgment, those to be judged could readily prove an alibi. It will be a resurrection.

(4) The same omnipotence which called the body of Christ from the grave will effect our resurrection. "The mighty working by which he is able to subdue all things unto himself" will result in collection, re-formation and re-animation of the constituent parts of our body.

League Dots.

Dolorous pietism is not Methodism. Do not kill your League with sad sighs and long faces.

The literary department of the League gives most trouble. It will be reduced to a minimum if it is borne in mind that not all the members are esthetically cultured.

The monthly meeting of the New Orleans Epworth League Union in Carondelet Street Church, Thursday May 9, was well attended. The reports were encouraging.

A Pure Baking Powder.

A baking powder that can be depended upon to be free from lime and alum is a desideratum in these days of adulterated food. So far as can be judged from the official reports, the "Royal" seems to be the only one yet found by chemical analyses to be entirely without one or the other of these substances, and absolutely pure. This, it is shown, results from the exclusive use by its manufacturers of cream of tartar specially refined and prepared by patent processes which totally remove the tartrate of lime and other impurities. The cost of this chemically pure cream of tartar is much greater than any other, and it is used in no baking powder except the "Royal," the manufacturers of which control the patents under which it is refined.

Dr. Edward G. Love, formerly analytical chemist for the U. S. Government, who made the analyses for the New York State Board of Health in their investigation of baking powders, and whose intimate knowledge of the ingredients of all those sold in this market enables him to speak authoritatively, says of the purity, wholesomeness and superior quality of the "Royal:"

"I find the Royal Baking Powder composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder, and does not contain either alum or phosphates, or other injurious substance."

Prof. Love's tests, and the recent official test by both the United States and Canadian Governments, show the Royal Baking Powder to be superior to all others in strength and leavening power. It is not only the most economical in use, but makes the purest, finest flavored and most wholesome food.

HOME CIRCLE.

RULES FOR DAILY LIFE.

Begin the day with God:
Kneel down to him in prayer;
Lift up thy heart to his abode,
And seek his love to share.

Open the Book of God,
And read a portion there;
That it may hallow all thy thoughts,
And sweeten all thy care.

Go through the day with God,
Whate'er thy work may be;
Where'er thou art - at home, abroad -
He still is near to thee.

Converse in mind with God;
Thy spirit heavenward raise;
Acknowledge every good bestowed,
And offer grateful praise.

Conclude the day with God;
Thy sins to him confess;
Trust in the Lord's atoning blood,
And plead his righteousness.

Lie down at night with God,
Who gives his servants sleep;
And when thou tread'st the vale of death,
He will thee guard and keep.

Sunbeams.

Every individual, in his influence upon others, is a sunbeam or a shadow. Some people are sunbeams to-day and shadows to-morrow. They are so variable we do not know what to expect when we meet them. On one occasion they are exceptionally bright, cheerful and genial, and the next day chill you with their absent-mindedness and coldness. To be near such people is like living one day in an overheated room, and the next day in an ice-house. You are perpetually sweated and chilled. I have often wondered if such people realize how disagreeable they make themselves on occasions. If they find it impossible to be genial all the time, it would be far better if they were chilly all the time in their department.

Who can express the vitalizing and cheering effects of rays of sunshine pouring into the house at breakfast time, or as we step out to our daily work? The whole system is toned up by the cheerful aspect. How great the contrast when the sky is overcast with clouds, and the storm beats upon the window-panes! Remember this, let us be more careful that we act the part of sunbeams rather than clouds.

This may not be an easy thing for all persons. I have known people to be moody and sulky for days over petty trifles, which should have been dispelled from the mind in a moment. Some people have fits of the blues occasioned by biliousness or homesickness, absence of friends, financial distress, the slights and slurs of friends and acquaintances. Happy is the man who can ward off these slight afflictions, as a duck sheds water from its feathers.—C. A. Green, in Green's Fruit Grower.

The Unspoken Word.

"A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver." To what shall we compare the fitly unspoken word? What pictures of horror would never have had existence if certain words had not been spoken. A great many persons are not so endowed that they can rise to the noble occasion with nobly fitting utterance, who can by self-control and wise judgment refrain from speaking unfit words.

"You were the only person in the company," said Mrs. Bentley to Mrs. Price, "who said nothing you could regret. It was very kind in Mrs. Ames to defend Mrs. George when her case was up, but I guess she wished afterward she had left some things she said unspoken."

Mrs. Price was so much pleased with the compliment Mrs. Bentley paid her that she could not keep from telling it to her best friend.

"I have tried so hard to govern my tongue," she said, "and it has so many times got away with me, and the first I knew words passed my lips that I so regretted afterward to have spoken. But on this occasion I did preserve a smiling, and what I intended to be an agreeable, silence. So many times I have come home from social gatherings, and been taken to task by my conscience for frivolous or unkind or unworthy expressions, that I've almost resolved not to go into company again."

"John is dreadfully conceited," said a young man of one of his college mates, "but he is very smart, and he has been very much spoiled by friends. One day he was almost insufferably aggressive, and I was on the very edge of making a cutting remark to prick the bubble of his conceit, but thought better of it, and didn't make it. Next day he said, 'I hear, Fred, that you would like to be secretary for Prof. G.,' and largely through his influence I secured the position."

The unspoken word in this case won for "Fred" a place by which he was enabled to pay his way through college.

"Miss B. has been a guest in my house a week, and in all that time I haven't heard her make a single silly remark. She is a very uncommon young woman." And yet Miss B. was by no means very highly endowed with anything beyond plain common sense and a conscientious desire to be right and to do right.

All the instances above given are negatives. Great is the power of positives. Great also is the power of negatives. Powerful is the fitly unspoken word. —Selected.

Parents, Tell Your Children.

If there is one thing above another that parents ought to see to, and one duty above another that parents ought to make it their special business to look after, it is informing their children fully in regard to their physical conditions. Thousands of young men and young girls go wrong because their parents have considered it too great a trial or too much trouble or have not known exactly how to go at it, to tell them about those delicate things that would have saved their lives. One girl said not long since, who had been living a wrong life for a number of years, "Oh, if mother had only told me! If she had only answered the questions I asked!" Children must know. They are naturally anxious. We ought to give them the information. If parents do not know how, ask God. Take the matter to him. He will give wisdom. He will give us just the words to use. Mothers, fathers, friends, this is for you. God will hold you and me responsible if we do not take up this duty and do it faithfully with his help.—Exchange.

The Hallowed Home.

That home is hallowed into which Jesus is invited and comes with the master of it. He who goes with us on the dusty, weary way will abide with us in the hours of rest. Christ sanctifies domestic repose, and will sit at our tables, if we will. Luxury and levity and excess banish him. How many so-called Christians are there who would find his presence at their meal very inconvenient. Where Jesus is invited as a guest, he becomes host. He takes the place of master of the house, according to his own deep saying, "I . . . will sup with him, and he with me." He takes the humbler fare, blesses it, and gives it back to the owner, sweetened by his hand. His blessing mends the feast; and makes the coarsest food a dainty.—Alexander McLaren, D. D.

Mother Not to Blame.

Probably there are none of our readers, or at any rate very few, who would willfully lay the blame for their own misdeeds on the shoulders of others. There are many who are doing it unconsciously, however. You ask in what way? Let this story answer.

Tom had been an idle, careless, mischievous boy in school. He did not mean to be a bad boy, but he wanted to do about as he liked, without seeming to care how much he troubled others by it. He had a seat-mate who was quite unlike him, in that he was careful to try to please his teachers.

One day Tom heard his teachers talking about some of their pupils; he heard his own name mentioned, and then that of his seat-mate.

"Jamie must have a lovely mother, I think," said one, "for he is always so polite and agreeable, and tries very hard to please all who are around him."

"I have heard that Tom Dunn's mother is a good woman," said another, "but I don't see how it is that she has such an unpleasant boy. I think he has a generous nature, and when he likes can show fine manners. It is my opinion that his mother tries to teach him just what is right, but he will not listen to her teaching. You know there is many a boy that will go on to destruction in spite of his mother."

Tom had heard enough to make him miserable for the rest of the day; and he had not put conscience away so far but that he could hear a whisper: "You've been a mean boy, and they've laid it all to your mother."

Now, he did really love his mother, and could not bear the thought that he had brought discredit upon her. After school that night he lingered until the others had passed out, and going up to his teacher he said slowly, and as if he hardly knew how to say it:

"I want to tell you—that—that mother isn't a bit to blame. Don't lay it to my mother—all my bad ways, I mean."

Tom did not think at all of what a brave thing he was doing; he thought of nothing but the wish to defend his mother. But when the teacher took his hand, and said, "Your mother must be a brave lady, Tom, for her boy has shown himself brave to-night, and I shall except good things from him in the future," he thought, "I wonder if the other boys know that all they do, good or bad, is laid to their mothers?"—Exchange.

Who Follows?

Coming home in the darkness one night, a child clung to his father's hand in fear.

"Listen, father," he said, "some one is following us."

"I hear nothing; no one is following," answered her father.

And then, partly to divert the child's mind and partly because a solemn truth glimmered through the timid words, the father made a little parable of them:

"Somebody is always following you, my boy; as long as you live some footsteps follow yours. You can not always hear them, you can not always see them, but as the years go by the procession grows longer and longer of those who are drawn east or west, right or wrong, to helpfulness or to despair, by following you."

Listen, lads and lassies! Who follows you? In the home are tender little feet, perhaps, just beginning to walk alone; whether you wish it or not, they turn with loving instinct after the big brother or sister, admiring your doing, coveting your gifts, repeating your words. In what direction are you leading them—upward, or downward?

In that same home are servants, doubtless, fellow-beings who are less favored than yourselves; secretly they watch your walk and conversation, secretly they try to reproduce in their own lives what your education and training and accomplishments make them admire in you. Are you on guard against leading them astray?

And as your path leaves your own door, this line of followers widens, too; at school, in society, in the workshop, in the market-place, still you lead, still they follow. The noise and stir of life is so great that you may not hear the footsteps behind you; you may think you are treading the journey alone, but it is not so; not a day passes that your actions or your inertia, your silence or your speech, do not influence some one.

Listen, then! Who follows? And where are you leading?—Selected.

The Blessing of Health.

It is our bounden duty to improve every blessing which God has given us to the best purposes. When he gives us health and strength they are to be wisely conserved, and used for the advancement of our highest interest. It is infinitely more foolish and reprehensible for a man to be prodigal with his store of vitality and healthful energy than with money and other material possessions. Fortunes thrown away may be restored, but wasted vitality never can be regained. The old-fashioned hour-glass furnished a good illustration of human life. So many sands are measured out to everyone. The faster they are allowed to run out, so much nearer is the end of all. The glass is never turned. It measures one period and no more. Health is a priceless treasure. Few realize its value until it is gone. It is especially to be prized by every worker in the vineyard of the Lord. So much more can be done for him in the glory and vigor of health than in feebleness and suffering. Too many may give only their weakness and their sad hours and dark days to the service of the Master. The choicest gift that he has given them is spent in wantonness and sinful pleasure. When sickness comes and the body is prostrated with disease, then the puny hands are lifted in prayer to God, and the sorry remnants of the shattered and broken life are laid upon the altar of sacrifice. The heyday of youthful vigor and the sturdy strength of the noonday of life is the time for the noblest service of God. He needs all the stout hearts and the strong hands for the building up of his kingdom. The energy is great and powerful and the struggle will be fearful and long. The soldiers of the cross need the best equipment—strength of body, strength of soul.

A strict obedience to the laws of God is the best conservator of physical health. Stated periods of rest, temperance in all things, subjection of the passions, a patient and cheerful spirit—all these things are enjoined in the Scripture and all are necessary for the preservation of health. A very large proportion of the diseases that afflict mankind are the consequences of the direct violation of moral law. When Christianity, in its purity, shall hold undisputed sway over all mankind, one of its first and most visible results will be a stronger, heartier, sturdier, and thus a happier and better race of men. —Christian Work.

"One meets with many odd freaks of human nature in my profession," said a physician. "Perhaps the most common is the weakness of lying to the doctor. When a person goes to a medical man to be treated, the sensible thing is obviously to help him to judge of the case by giving all details as to pains and other symptoms with as much accuracy as possible. That anybody should try to deceive the physician to whom he or she is applying for advice seems the height of absurdity. Yet I do assure you that it is done so constantly that we have always to be on our guard. Women are much more given to that sort of folly than men are. I have a lady on my list of patients who is truthful enough, I doubt not, in all other affairs; but she does not hesitate to mislead me as far as she can by false statements respecting her own maladies, though she is extremely anxious to get well. I confess that it is a psychological puzzle."

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

MOONSHINE. (A nice Summer dessert.)—Beat the whites of six eggs in a broad plate to a very stiff froth; then add gradually six tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar, beaten for not less than thirty minutes, and then beat in, after being cut in tiny pieces, one-half cup of preserved peaches, pineapple, or you can use a spoonful of jelly. In serving, pour all on a platter and serve with whipped cream flavored. Moonshine is especially nice for a dessert on a warm day. To be served like ice cream, and to be eaten ice cold with cake.—International Cook Book.

DELICATE CAKE.—Three cups of flour, one cup of sugar, three-fourths cups of sweet milk, whites of six eggs, one-half cup of butter, teaspoon of cream tartar, one-half teaspoon soda. Flavor with lemon.—International Cook Book.

THE OLD-FASHIONED STYLE of pill gives you a feeling of horror when you see it, and when you feel it. It is the "blunderbuss" of former decade, it is big and clumsy, but not effective. In this century of enlightenment, you have Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, which cure all liver troubles in the most effective way. For Indigestion, Constipation, Bilious Attacks, Sick and Bilious Headache, nothing has been found to equal these pills of Dr. Pierce's invention.

MR. S. BAKER, Sr.

Mr. SAMUEL BAKER, Sr., of No. 161 Summit Av., Phillipsburgh, N. J., says: "There is nothing that can compare with Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, as Liver Pills. They have done me more good than any other medicine I have ever taken."

OBITUARIES.

LOVARN—MATILDA M. LOVARN (nee Lowe) was born Nov. 27, 1821. She was married to Wm E. Lovarn, Jan 26, 1840. To them were born nine children. Seven of them are still living. Her husband died in 1865, leaving her a widow, and she lived the same until March 16, 1895. She died at the home of her grandson, near Edinburg, Miss

Sister Lovarn was born in South Carolina, but for many years she has lived in this county She was converted and joined the M E Church, South, in 1844, and lived a consistent member of the same until she peacefully passed away. It was never the privilege of the writer to see and talk to Sister Lovarn, as she was absent from home; but from all I can learn, she leaves a record that can not be stained by all. She was an affectionate wife, and mother, and was true to her God and church. Her death was a shock to the community in which she lived. She is sadly missed by all Such words as these are common among those who knew her best: "She was a good Christian. She was a noble woman," etc. She suffered for several days, but never murmured or complained. She said to her loved ones, "I am ready, at the Master's call to go to my eternal home." She leaves a host of friends and relatives to mourn, but our loss is her gain. God bless the bereaved family, and may they meet her in a better land!

W. M. SULLIVAN.

Carthage, Miss.

SMITH—DAVID H. SMITH was born in Spartanburg, S. C., March 6, 1821, and died at his home near DeSotoville, Ala., April 12, 1895.

Bro. Smith gave his heart and life to God and the M E Church, South, when a young man, and honored each until death. As a citizen, he was patriotic, liberty-loving, noble and true. His big heart, filled with love for God and man, was not capable of doing anything little, low or mean. Standing on this high plane of fellowship with his Lord, he could but look with contemptible pity upon anything base in State, Church, or individual. He was a model husband, gentle, patient, and kind. He obeyed to the letter the injunction, "Husbands, love your wives." His children respected and loved him, because he had positiveness blended with love as his light shone most brightly in the church he loved to honor, serving her faithfully as steward and trustee for years. He loved the Word of God, and was a prayerful and spiritual listener to the gospel of love. The weary itinerant was as irresistibly drawn to his hospitable home as the needle to the pole. We all have sustained a great loss in his death. May God give us grace to live as he did, that we may meet him in heaven!

J. W. KILLOUGH.

DOUGLASS—SARAH DOUGLASS was born Nov. 8, 1811, and died at her home, Dec 29, 1894. She united herself to the M. E. Church at the age of twenty-one, and has for sixty-two years lived a consistent and faithful Christian life. Her life was an exemplification of the truth, "The path of the just is as a shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

"Aunt Sallie" was widely known, and loved by everyone who knew her. Many are the testimonials of her good words and deeds, and many hearts were made sad by her departure. The Bible was her constant companion, and her special delight seemed to be in the Epistles of St. Paul, from which she selected the text for her funeral service. II. Tim. iv, 6, 7; "For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith."

The funeral was preached, April 14, by Rev. J. N. Broadway, to a large audience at New Home Church, of which she was a member. God grant that we all may meet her on the other shore, and may he comfort her children she leaves behind!

R. L. PHILLIPS, Supply.

Theadville, Miss.

IRBY—Mrs. ELIZABETH IRBY (nee Garett) was born in Simpson county, Miss., July 9, 1854, and died at her home, near Rocky Springs, Claiborne county, Miss., March 14, 1895.

At the early age of sixteen she joined the M. E. Church, South, in Harrisville, Simpson county, Miss., and for several years before her death lived pionsly before God. On Sept. 15, 1886, she was happily married to Mr. John F. Irby, of Claiborne county, Miss., who still lives to cherish her memory and mourn her loss.

Sister Irby, during her last illness, spoke fearlessly of her approaching death, and declared that she wished the will of the Lord accomplished in her. She left no children, her only child, a bright little boy, dying in its infancy, had preceded her to the grave, and was waiting and watching at the brink of the river to welcome dear mother into the land of the blest. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

W. M. STEVENS.

BAIRD—Died, on Sunday, April 14, 1895, at her humble home in Coryell county, Texas, Sister CLARA L. BAIRD (nee Stamply), wife of Charles B Baird. A true Christian, a faithful wife, a loving mother, a true friend. Suddenly, by a paralytic stroke, the old clay tenement was dissolved, and the freed spirit sped its way to a "home in heaven."

She was converted twenty years ago in Bell county, Texas, and she kept the faith, enjoyed the fruits of the Spirit, peace and joy in the Holy Ghost and often rejoiced in the hope of eternal life. Under many adverse circumstances and trials, once in affluent circumstances, surrounded with all the comforts and conveniences of life, also cruel war despoiled her of her goods, and hardships and want and poverty all filled her cup of sorrow But, amid all these trials and hardships, she could "approach the mercy seat," and have her cup filled with gladness, "from the rising of the sun until its going down"

She was born near Fayette, Jefferson county, Miss., fifty-two years ago; lived many years in Natchitoches parish, La; came to Texas in 1869; leaves an invalid husband and six children. BYTHEL HAYNES BAIRD.

Pilcoe, Texas.

CLOUD—At a meeting of the Juvenile Missionary Society, of Water Valley, a committee was appointed to draw up resolutions expressive of our deep grief caused by the death of our president, HAZEL CLOUD.

Resolved, That we bow in humble submission to the will of our heavenly Father, who has transplanted this sweetest and purest of Water Valley lilies to bloom in eternal beauty in the land of the pure and home of the good.

Resolved, That we have not only lost our president but one of our best and most faithful members

We deeply sympathize with the grief-stricken mother, grandmother and sisters, praying the blessing of God to rest upon them, and that his grace may abound onto them in this dark hour through which they are called to pass

Let us imitate her good example, and in the sweet by and by we will meet her in the beautiful land of the blessed.

LOUISE BURROUGHS,
MAUD STEPHENS,

MCCRARY—JOHN REED'S MCCRARY was born in Lowndes county, Miss., Feb. 27, 1855, and died near Patterson, La., April 8, 1895. He was married to Miss Eugenie Cherry, Dec. 23, 1879; professed religion and joined the Methodist Church in Florida about twelve years ago.

Bro. McCrary seemed to have a very clear view of Jesus as able and willing to save and keep him from sin. His life was beautiful and consistent. Everyone who knew him seemed to have full faith in his piety. He suffered much and long before his death, but was patient and peaceful through it all.

Everything was arranged with care for the great change, and he joyously awaited the summons. Never have I found a person awaiting so restfully the message to "come up higher." His bereaved partner weeps not as those who have no hope, but has a full assurance that he has just "gone before" to the "rest that remains for the people of God."

MCGEHEE—The following resolutions were adopted by the Como Sunday-school:

Whereas, In view of the loss sustained by this school in the death of ANNIE MCGEHEE; be it

Resolved, That this school has lost one of its best loved and most cheerful members, as by her gentle disposition and Christian grace she had endeared all hearts to her.

Resolved, That while we have been called upon to "pass under the rod," and our hearts are grieved with the thought that Annie will be with us no more, yet we know that our Father doeth all things well, and that she is drinking of the waters of that river that is making glad the city of our God.

Resolved, That we tender to the family of our deceased friend and companion our sincere sympathy, and may God, in his wisdom, pour the oil of consolation into the hearts of father, mother, brother and sister, and may they consecrate themselves anew unto the Lord, and determine to meet Annie on that bright and golden shore, where partings are no more!

Como, Miss.

Asthma can't be cured? Oh! yes it can. Dr Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar will do it. I know it because it gave me relief. Every winter I was troubled with asthma, especially if the weather was damp, suffering severely. I took about six bottles of Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and am completely cured. It is the remedy for asthma. CHAS. HEINES, 500½ Chippewa Street, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar is a sure and speedy cure for coughs, colds, catarrh, bronchitis and consumption, and gives immediate relief in cases of croup and whooping-cough. Try it. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

Never forget that every hour gone is one less to live. What thy record?

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

One of the leading and best known painters in this country says, "I cannot afford to use anything but Pure White Lead" (see list of brands). Every practical painter knows this. It is only those who haven't any reputation to lose who don't know it, or will use misleading brands of White Lead or unknown worthless mixtures. Although low-priced, they are not cheap. Pure White Lead is the cheapest, because it is the best.

If colors are required they are easily made by using the National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead tinting colors. Pamphlet and colored card sent free.

DOMESTIC.

The Ohio Wesleyan University has made a rule that after the present term none of the students may use tobacco. There are 800 students in attendance.

Negaunee, Mich., has adopted a curfew ordinance. The bell rings at 9 o'clock, and after that all persons under 16 found on the streets are liable to arrest.

The United States Circuit Court of South Carolina has decided the Dispensary laws of that State unconstitutional and void, and the Supreme Court is to pass on the matter.

Mark Twain has signed a contract in Paris for a lecture tour around the world. He will start shortly for the United States, and, after lecturing across the continent to San Francisco he will proceed to Australia and thence to India.

A gang of fifteen tramps "took" a town in Michigan the other day, robbing a saloon and a grocery, and terrorizing the inhabitants. Some citizens got guns and succeeded in driving the ruffians away, but could not capture any of them.

Advices have been received from Washington that Assistant Postmaster-General Neilson will be in New Orleans this week for the purpose of conferring with local business men and the managements of the various street railroad lines as to the feasibility of inaugurating the system of collecting and distributing mail within the city limits by means of postal cars operated on the various electric lines.

For more than a month past there has been an active business in all classes of American securities at the New York Stock Exchange. The steady character of this demand, coupled, as it has been, with reports of improved earnings on the part of the railroads, an advance of wages by manufacturing establishments, and an active business experienced by the great industrial corporations, point most unmistakably to the fact that it is not speculation, but a healthy expansion of trade and a return of confidence that are responsible for the improvement.

It is expected that 75,000 visitors will attend the meeting of the United Confederate Veterans and the State encampment of the Texas Volunteer Guard, which will assemble in Houston on the twentieth. An auditorium capable of seating 10,000 people has been built at a cost of $20 000. Indications point to a representation from nearly all of the 700 camps. Every company in the Texas Volunteer Guard, with their bands, and several companies of the United States regulars from Fort Sam Houston, at San Antonio, will be camped at Fort Culberson, named in honor of the governor.

FOREIGN.

The Durango, Mexico, "slave colony," as it has been called, contains between 1,000 and 1 500 negroes from the United States, says the New York World. It was colonized by W. H. Ellis. Statements come by telegraph that the colonists were escaping whenever it was possible from them to do so; that those who stayed were worked from sunrise until sunset.

The Pope has beaten a retreat in regard to the French tax on religious societies. A secret envoy of France has modified the Pope's intention in sustaining the French Catholics in resistance to the law. The Pope will now encourage them to submit.

The Republic of Brazil is having an experience in finance much like that of the United States. The depreciated paper currency will be redeemed by floating an internal loan of $50 000 000. This will lessen the margin between gold and paper. Very little silver is used in that country.

It is said that the Spanish authorities no longer regard the Cuban uprising as a serious affair. It is not considered that the trouble is actually closed and the rebellion formally ended, but the authorities are satisfied that the revolt has ceased to have the menacing aspect of a few weeks ago.

The Canadian government is tired of having the members of its House of Commons travelling on railroad passes while they are drawing mileage from the public treasury. They are allowed 10 cents a mile from their homes to Ottawa by the shortest rail route going and returning, and they had religiously drawn the money, though it is notorious that the most of them have passes. It is said that the mileage is to be discontinued and the members allowed to ride on passes, if they can get them.

An official dispatch from Tokio states that the ratifications of the treaty of peace between Japan and China were exchanged at Che Foo last week. No change was made in the text of the treaty as originally concluded. Taking into account, however, the recommendations made by Russia, Germany and France, the Japanese government has agreed to renounce the permanent possession of the Liao Tung peninsula, on condition that the arrangements regarding the terms and form of renunciation shall be reserved for adjustment between itself and the government of China.

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound, or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result; and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Things like these, hundreds of them, all more or less important, make Pearline the best thing to wash with. Then, on top of that, it saves labor, saves rubbing, saves wear and tear, time and money.

Send it Back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as," or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 433

"Earthly Footsteps of the Man of Galilee."

A new work of Bishop Vincent, and Dr. J. W. Lee (of St. Louis). A great publishing company is just bringing to light the fruit of much toil and outlay of money. They sent an artist photographer, under the guidance of Dr. Lee, to the Holy Land, there to secure the most exact and perfect pictures of the salient scenes of the earthly life of Christ and the Apostles. We have examined a portion of the work and unhesitatingly pronounce it by far the best thing of its kind ever seen by us. The method of photographic reproduction employed is faultless.

The forthcoming book will contain some four or five hundred of these splendid pictures, 8x10 inches in size. The work will be issued in twenty-four parts; pages 11¼x13¼ inches, with chronological charts and colored maps. Each part will contain sixteen pictures, besides the enchanting pen pictures of these renowned writers. The series will run through twenty-four weeks, one a week, at a regular price of 25 cents each. But the ADVOCATE has made a special arrangement by which it will furnish all its subscribers, new and old, for 10 cents a number. Less than half, but very little more than a third of what you will have to pay if your name is not on our subscription roll. The entire series in this way will cost only $2.40; otherwise it will cost $6. This rule of the publishers of this book is the strictest that only to our subscribers can we make this special offer. For $2 40 you may get what another must pay $6 for if you are a subscriber to the ADVOCATE. Send $2.40, and each of the series will be mailed you as fast as issued. Or ten cents (stamps taken) for one issue—any way you prefer.

THE YEAR OUTGROWS THE SPRING.

BY ELLA WHEELER.

The year outgrows the Spring it thought so sweet,
And clasps the Summer with a new delight;
Yet, wearied, leaves her languors and her heat
When cool-browed Autumn dawns upon his sight.

The tree outgrows the bud's suggestive grace,
And feels new pride in blossoms fully blown;
Not even this to deeper joy gives place
When beading boughs 'neath blushing burdens groan.

Life's rarest moments are derived from change.
The heart outgrows old happiness, old grief,
And sue itself in feelings new and strange.
The most enduring pleasure is but brief.

Our tastes, our needs, are never twice the same;
Nothing contents us long, however dear.
The spirit in us, like the grosser frame,
Outgrows the garments which it wore last year.

Change is the watchword of progression. When
We tire of well-worn ways, we seek for new.
This restless craving in the souls of men
Spurs them to climb and seek the mountain view.

Let who will erect an altar shrine
To meek-browed constancy, and sing her praise,
Into enlivening change I shall build mine,
Who lends new zest and interest in my days.

The Roman Papacy.

BY SCOTT F. HERSHEY, PH.D.

I.

The world still has to deal with the Papacy. It is not a dead quantity. It is not even on the decline. It gives every evidence of a great revival of its political power. Civilization is confronted by perils and assailed by conspiracies which should have passed away two centuries ago. On careful inquiry it is found that the Papacy is the instigator of the one and the designer of the other. The Pope exercises a despotic influence in America as the nineteenth century as he did in Europe in the sixteenth. Papal institutions and Protestant civilization are incompatible and irreconcilable, and they contront each other as deadly foes. History is just now engaged in repeating itself.

The best possible way to understand the Papacy of our day is to study the Papacy of other days. Our people should be prepared to deal with Romanism in our country to the extent that they are brought to understand the ways of Romanism in the countries of Europe. To this end these articles are written. The Roman Papacy has always impeded the progress of the nations, and done its utmost to prevent the rise of civil and religious liberty, and was always ready to overthrow freedom. The Papacy has always interfered in the administration of the governments of the world. It will continue to do so. Many are the lessons showing this, which are drawn from the great Protestant Reformation. We shall do no more in this first article than indicate some reflections on the change of ancient Pagan Romanism into Papal Romanism. Pagan Romanism was the most centralized despotism with which the ancient world was familiar; Papal Romanism the greatest and only universal despotism the modern world has known. Papal Romanism is only a changed, and not a very greatly improved Pagan Romanism. The ancient world had to destroy Pagan Romanism; the modern world must overthrow the despotism of Papal Romanism. Pagan Romanism threw the world into moral desolation; Papal Romanism is doing the same.

The Papacy, in its earliest childhood, received from Paganism those very elements of Pagan corruption and those ceremonies which later developed into the evil Papal courts, and produced the dungeons of the Inquisition. Papal Rome became worse than Pagan Rome. Pagan persecutions, at their worst, were not more diabolical than the Papal persecutions of later centuries. The Papacy took the name, without the heart, of Christianity.

The elements of the Papacy, stripped of their distinctive affiliations with primitive Christianity, came altogether from Pagan sources. In the fourth century the Papal religion (though the name Pope was not in vogue) was largely a transferred, but not transformed, Pagan religion. The gross practices of Paganism were already seen into the church. The heathen still believed in many gods; the church of Rome thought to win the heathen by coming near their belief, and in this way there rapidly came in images, pictures, relics, processions, pilgrimages, bodily injuries and penances, all in order to conform to heathen fashion.

Ambition became intrenched in the Papal-Pagan Church. The Bishop of Rome wanted power. By Roman Catholic authority it is quite evident that the local heads of the church at Rome had no thought of supremacy over the other Bishops up to this time. Constantine had much to do in preparing the way for Papal assumption. After his signal victory near Rome, at the Milvian Bridge, he assumed the Emperorship of the West, and espoused the cause of the church. A flood of heathen customs rolled in on the church. The worship of Christ was united to the worship of Apollo, the name of the One and the figure of the other being placed on the Roman coins. In the beginning of the seventh century the Emperor Phocas conferred on Boniface III., who was Bishop of Rome, the title of Universal Bishop, and from this grant dates the real beginning of the Papacy. Then Gregory I., whose distinguishing traits were enthusiasm, ambition and ignorance, began the claim of divine authority, defined a succession from Peter, and opened negotiations with the neighboring princes, looking to his temporal sovereignty. By the tenth century the Popes held large sections of Europe, and subfeuded to military vassals.

One of the best-known Roman Catholics in the United States, after a recent visit to Rome, has said that the government of the church ran along the lines of ancient Roman (Pagan) imperialism. The Papacy is essentially despotic, and set against all constitutional rights and liberties, both religious and political. A Pope may be a good man, but the system which he must administer is evil and pernicious; and, however good he may be, he is a menace and threat to constitutionalism throughout the world. There may be a liberal and strictly loyal party in the Roman Church in this country, but they are the subjects of a foreign despotism. The Papacy, wherever it is established, represents a despotic constituency in the government. This idea should be borne in mind through all these articles.

Boston, Mass.

Some Points of Methodist Doctrine.

My reading has been limited to comparatively few books. They were old books, but good ones. These books have gone far towards making me what I am—far towards coloring and fixing my mind on some subjects. I am free to confess that I have never had but few original ideas. I have my own way of expressing things, but my thoughts are generally borrowed from some one else. Now and then, when I think I have had a brand-new thought, I find it written out in some one of my old books. I want to write of some points of Methodist doctrine that have been fixed in my mind by the reading I have done. This is the reason I can not keep up with some of the new things of these latter days. It is psychologically impossible for me to do so. I believe I am right in spirit, in the purpose of my mind, but my head may be wrong.

I freely confess that much that is said and written now about the removal, the taking away, of original sin is all Greek to me. I do not understand it. The removal, or extraction, of original sin, in the Methodist sense of the term "original sin," either in regeneration or sanctification, is contrary to our books of theology as I understand them. I may not understand them correctly. If not, I hope some of the younger and wiser brethren will set me right, if, indeed, I am not too far gone to be set right.

I understand from the old books that God, foreseeing what Adam would do, afore provided Christ to be a sacrifice, propitiation and satisfaction for the sins of the whole world, both actual and original sin. God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself. So far as he is concerned, the whole world is reconciled and accepted in Jesus Christ, his Son. I get the idea that all the infants in all the world are in a state of salvation and acceptance with God. This general justification of the race is unconditional. It comes to all because God gave his Son to die for all. The guilt and condemnation of original sin is all taken away. No one is liable to the wrath of God or to damnation on account of original sin; hence I never say, "Infants dying in infancy are regenerated and saved." Regeneration is not predicable of the saved and accepted state infant children are in. Sanctification can not properly—be affirmed of this initial state of life.

I get from my books the idea that the present state of man is a gracious state. Original sin, total depravity, generated corruption, however bad some persons may take it to be, is just what it is by virtue of the death of Jesus Christ. In fact, Adam would not have been permitted to propagate his species, only that God had provided for it to be propagated just as it is. God had just as well have made Adam a sinner at the start as to have made him to propagate a race of condemned sinners, liable to fall into hell for what they are, what they could not help being.

I have been taught to believe that the race was as much seminally in Adam when God forgave him and accepted him as it was when God condemned him. The members of the human race are not individually and personally guilty of, or responsible for, the sin of Adam.

My idea, which I got from my books—Wesley, Watson, Clark, Fletcher, Fisk, Wheedon, Raymond, Pope, Wiley, Summers and Tigert—is that no individual is responsible for, or guilty of, original sin until he makes his original sin his own sin by an act of his own choice. He is in a saved state till he personally rejects Christ. This act, or choice of sin, of being in the flesh and serving the law of sin, may be forgiven, and still original sin remains, just as it does in the infant.

I get from my books the idea that a regenerated man may go on and perfect holiness in the fear of God, so that he is sanctified wholly throughout, soul, body, and spirit, and still the sin, the kind of sin that was generated in him, remains. It was never meant to free the human race from original sin, in this sense of that term.

Bad as this state is, and much as we say against original sin and natural depravity, my books tell me that we stand our trial upon much more advantageous terms than Adam did in Paradise. I am sure I would rather be in this state with my naturally depraved nature, with the promise and hope of forgiveness for many offenses, than to have a pure nature and be in a state where one sin would land me in hell forever.

The sin of original sin may be, and is, forgiven, but the being of original sin, in our Methodist sense of that term, is a characteristic of the human race as it now exists by Christ. No state, or condition, or operation of grace will ever take it out of men while the world stands. No matter how holy men and women get to be in this life, they generate in their children the same kind of original sin they did before they were regenerated or sanctified. This is a racial condition, or state.

When I am asked to come to the altar and seek to have original sin taken out of me, I do not go. I emphatically deny having original sin in me in any sense in which it can be taken out. Owing to the deprivation that comes by original sin, I often discover a degree of depravation that makes me ashamed of myself before God. As I learn more of God's Word, and am more and more enlightened by his Holy Spirit, I discover more and more imperfections that come of ignorance, prejudice, and preconceived opinions.

I firmly believe I have had a right spirit in all this great matter for full forty-eight years, but somehow I am still lamentably ignorant, weak and simple. My heart is fixed, but my head is often set wrong. So, as I learn more, I have to keep mending my ways. Imperfection marks all I do—my prayers, Bible reading, preaching, pastoral work, and all else.

Some, who claim to have been cleansed from the least and remains of original sin by a second and subsequent work to regeneration, come to talk to me about seeking holiness, and if I contend with them, they grow red in the face, and show temper in tones and words. I sit and think, "Well, you are not so entirely free from original sin as you thought you were." The fact is, it is a great grace to learn how to endure the contradiction of sinners against one's self without showing a rise of temper over it.

This will do for this time. I may ask your readers to study with me some other phases of this subject, and others related to it, as set forth in my old books. GILDEROY.

The Southern Methodist Jubilee.

The jubilee exercises of the M. E. Church, South, were opened on the night of May 1 in Broadway Methodist Church by an able historical discourse by Bishop E. R. Hendrix. The discourse showed the historic ground of the protest of the Southern delegates against the extra-judicial action of the Northern majority in the virtual suspension of Bishop O. Andrew by resolution without trial, and how the future of Methodism in the South impelled all parties to the adoption of a just plan of separation, and of the organization of the M. E. Church, South, into a separate ecclesiastic jurisdiction under that plan just fifty years ago.

The second of the jubilee meetings was also in the Broadway Methodist Church on the night of the second, at which Bishop R. K. Hargrove read with spirit and enthusiasm a strong, pronounced and appreciative discourse on "The Work of Women in the M. E. Church, South," in which he emphatically opposed women ordinations, but commended their invaluable services in other departments of church work. Dr. H. C. Morrison followed in an off hand talk on "Foreign Missions in the Church." Dr. Morrison is no reader, nor declaimer, but a flat-footed talker, full of enthusiasm for his subject. His speech quickened the missionary pulse.

The third gathering was on Friday night, the third of May, at Broadway Methodist Church, at which Dr. Hoss, editor of the Christian Advocate (Nashville), led off with a vigorous talk on "The Church Press." Thought the multiplication of papers had gone too far, and that consolidation with allotment of territory was the remedy. W. W. Smith, LL.D., president of Randolph-Macon College, and Secretary of Education for the whole church, followed with a very able discourse on "The M. E. Church, South, in Education." Many most excellent passages occurred, and the general effect was fine.

The fourth meeting was in Library Hall, Sunday afternoon. Dr. W. D. Kirkland, Sunday-school Editor, in his speech on "Sunday-schools," made a strong plea for thorough work in Bible instruction and in work for the salvation of the scholars. Prof. Collins Denny, of Vanderbilt University, made a telling address on "The Epworth League and the Jubilee." It had the jubilee skip and ring through and through.

The closing meeting was in Library Hall on Sunday night, occupied by two able discourses on "City Church Extension"—one by the life-long church extension secretary, Dr. David Morton, and the other by that prince of platform talkers, Bishop C. B. Galloway. The matter of city church extension was brought before nearly all of the congregations of the M. E. Church, South, in the city at the eleven o'clock services, and collections and subscriptions taken amounting to $18,768. The affair closed in fine spirit, leaving this substantial reminder, beside stimulating to continued heroic effort.

Southern Students' Conference.

The horizon of religious progress bears no more hopeful sign than the deep interest in youth which Christian people everywhere are manifesting. Perhaps the most remarkable movement of the age is the enlistment in Christian work of countless thousands of young people of both sexes. History hardly furnishes a parallel, save in the case of the "children's crusade" of the thirteenth century. Young people's societies are springing up in almost every denomination. Conferences and conventions of young people are of almost weekly occurrence. In this mighty religious movement the Young Men's Christian Association is taking no unimportant part. The conferences of Christian students, which for several years have been held annually at Northfield, Mass.; Lake Geneva, Wis., and more recently at Knoxville, Tenn., under the direction of the Y. M. C. A., have resulted in immeasurable good. This year those in charge of the College Department of the Y. M. C. A. have planned to hold at Knoxville, Tenn., from June 14 to June 23, inclusive, another conference (the second) for Southern students. "The purpose of this gathering," as stated in the announcement, "is to deepen the spiritual life of college men, and to train them for leadership in organized Christian work among their fellow-students."

At the last conference there were present about 175 men from 67 institutions, every Southern State but Florida being represented. The approaching meeting gives promise of even a larger attendance and greater helpfulness. The following distinguished speakers have been engaged to deliver addresses during the session: Dr. Robt. J. McBryde, of Lexington, Va.; Mr. Frank Anderson, of Oxford University, representing the Inter-University Christian Union of Great Britain; Mr. Fred O'Neill, of Queen's College, Belfast, Ireland; Mr. L. Wilbur Messer, the leader of the great young men's movement of Chicago; Dr. James H. Brookes, of St. Louis; Bishop Chas. B. Galloway; Mr. David McConaughy, Madras, India; Dr. Walter R. Lambuth; and Mr. Robt. E. Speer, of New York. It is an education in itself just to see and to hear such men as these. Surely a rich intellectual and spiritual feast is in store for those who attend this conference. The singing will be conducted by Mr. F. L. Willis, of Alabama. How the young men do sing at these meetings!

Knoxville, on the banks of the picturesque Tennessee, in the region of the Great Smoky Mountains, is an ideal place for holding such a conference. The beautiful grounds of the University of Tennessee, with its splendid buildings, located on a commanding eminence and delightfully cool, will be at the service of those who attend. The afternoons will be devoted exclusively to recreation. Several prominent athletes from Southern colleges will be present to lead in the games and athletic exercises.

It would mean much for the cause of Christ if every male college in the South and Southwest should send a number of delegates to this Students' Conference. All men interested in Christian work among young men are cordially invited to attend this student gathering.

It was the pleasure of this writer, three Summers ago, to attend the first of these conferences, held at Knoxville under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., and he there received a physical, mental and spiritual uplift that will long be remembered. As before, twilight meetings will be held each evening out on the campus in the interest of the missionary movement. These are usually the most impressive and profitable services of all. Of the Bible class work, and of several other important features of the conference, we have not space to write. Well-equipped men, however, will have charge of each department of the conference work.

The entire expense for the conference, which includes board and lodging, together with a small registration fee, will be fifteen dollars. Those expecting to attend should write for further particulars to H. P. Anderson, Asheville, N. C. A railroad rate of one fare has been granted by the Southern Passenger Association.

Ministerial Educational Aid Association.

LOUISIANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

Last January Bro. R. H. Wynn called attention to Louisiana Ministerial Educational Aid Association of the Louisiana Annual Conference, organized at its last session in New Orleans. In his article he outlined the entire work proposed, so that I need not stop to explain its purpose. Its one object is to obtain funds with which to aid young ministers in getting an education.

We realize that the minister in and out of the pulpit ought to be a leader, and to so be he must be abreast of the times. He must also be a thinker, and one intellectually able to lead his flock.

To so be one must have had the advantages of an education. This is what we want to assist our young men in attaining.

By one of the provisions of our Constitution, men who wish assistance from the association must be recommended to said association by their District Conference, before the Executive Committee are authorized to entertain their application. Those who shall wish aid for the next term of school will please note this and act accordingly.

We want to push our work and increase our membership, that we may be enabled to help more men. The terms of membership are simple. Anyone, whether minister or lay (male or female), is eligible to membership. The ministerial, to active; the lay, to honorary membership. The annual dues are five dollars ($5), payable on or before the first day of September of every year.

I have appointed the following brethren as solicitors of membership in the several districts in our Conference. They will please present the cause to their Conferences, and try to stir up an interest, gaining as many members as possible.

New Orleans district, Rev. F. S. Parker; Opelousas district, Rev. W. W. Drake; Alexandria district, Rev. L. F. Jackson; Shreveport district, Rev. H. N. Rickey; Baton Rouge district, Rev. Wm. Schuhle; Arcadia district, Rev. Jno. F. Foster; Delhi district, Rev. Jno. F. Foster.

Brethren, do all you can, and let us roll up at least one hundred names this year. If anyone wishes information, they will please address me at Delhi, La., where I shall take pleasure in answering all questions.

JNO F. FOSTER, President.

In the Living Present.

Our jury system requires reconstruction. Affairs have changed. Of your good newspapers were a rarity. Seldom that parties summoned to serve as jurymen were familiar with the case to be tried. But now there are several mammoth dailies in every home. Only an ignoramus fails to be informed on matters of current news.

President Low has given a million dollars to Columbia College, New York, for construction of a large library building. Said college received within the last ten years donations to the amount of six million dollars. "For whosoever hath, to him shall be given."

The desirability of a general emigration of our negroes to Africa much discussed. A wastage of words. The negroes are unwilling to go. To effect their egress legislation is necessary. But most of our people believe that negroes make better citizens than Caucasian importations from the far East. This is the age of utilitarianism. Some phases of sociology are not appreciated.

Dr. Heber Newton, Episcopal minister in New York, recently declared in a sermon that the bodily resurrection of Christ was a myth. The disciples deluded. Christ had appeared after crucifix on to his acquaintances, but not in body. After the manner of spiritualism. Had himself declared not to touch him. Contradictory utterances of Christ were the outcome of the writer's error. With all this the doctor pretends to believe in Christ's divinity. A species of Briggsism.

John Wanamaker is reported to have remarked: "It is the hardest thing in the world to find a clean, strong, healthy, earnest, upright young man." Is this not a sad statement of maternal negligence? There may be exceptions, but, as a rule, it holds true that our boys are what their mothers make them. Do mothers know of Cornelia's jewels?

Dr. Balfour assures that two parts of the body, if wisely used, "largely escape senility." These are the brain and the heart. Wisely used. If the nervous system is not prematurely shattered by gluttony, intemperance, and use of narcotics. Besides, many discover at the meridian of life that disappointment attends their intellectual efforts. Further research deemed futile. Mortification, chagrin, donnée. Books nauseate. Stolidity, dotage, decay.

Many suffer from offensive breath. If not given to gluttony, it must be that the mouth harbors decayed matter. Toothpicks a necessity. As regularly as you wash your face, rinse your mouth with salt water. A tablespoonful of common table salt to a tumbler of water. IGH DIEM.

Do not consider any vice as trivial, and therefore practice it; do not consider any virtue as unimportant, and therefore neglect it.

NOT FORGOTTEN.

There are days in our lives when our hearts seemed filled
With utter confusion and pain,
And into the darkness of heavy hearts
Comes naught but the fall of rain;
And the web of our lives stretches onward
In a tangled mass of threads;
And our God has forgotten, and stoops not toward
The sad and bowed-down heads
Of his children helplessly calling, calling.

Hush! did I say forgotten—
Does the Father ever forget?
The web of our lives shall stretch onward
In perfect beauty, while yet
Sweet Faith keeps her foot on the treadle,
And Hope lifts her beautiful eyes;
For God's finger smooths out the tangles,
And, lo! aloft in the skies
The sun still cheerily shining, shining.

What Are We Saying and Doing About It?

Some ten years or more ago the New York Tribune made the following deliverance:

There is to-day in the English-speaking countries no such tremendous, far-reaching, vital question as that of drunkenness. It overshadows all else. It lies at the center of all social and political mischief. It paralyzes beneficent energies in every direction; it neutralizes education; it silences the voice of religion; it hrills penal reform; it obstructs political reform; it debauches and degrades millions, saddening them below the plane of healthy savagery.

Can the churches fold their hands and flatter themselves that their duties are fulfilled while the masses prefer the saloon to the pulpit, and while rum RULES in politics and society?

The figures do not show that the rum power has decreased any during the decade; and it is doubtless more strongly than ever entrenched in government license and protection, the two ruling political parties being its fast friends. That foremost Methodist editor, Dr. Buckley, of New York, delivered himself not long ago in most vigorous style as below:

The pulpit has signally failed to hold and transfuse with the Christ-spirit and life the economies and politics of the nation. Selfishness and greed are the inner life and moving power of our economic and political life. Competition — that anti-christ which we have made our God—has reached its certain outcome in a tyranny over us as remorseless as that of the Czar of Russia. Our great trust barons dictate to us how much we may have of staples necessary to our lives, and fix the prices. It has not needed a disappointed politician to tell us that the Decalogue and the Sermon on the Mount have no place in our politics. The bacchanalian and license-riots that have characterized the nominating conventions and inaugurations of our last two Presidents have exceeded in open shamelessness those of the worst days of the old Roman Empire. It is conceded by the most charitable and hopeful writers, both native and foreign, that our politics have reached a state of corruption scarcely equaled in the world's previous history. Meanwhile the protests and warnings of our average pulpit have been timid and impersonal and powerless. Yea, rather, the pulpit by its silence and its vote has given consent and been dragged at the chariot wheels of political parties rotten to the core.

It is acknowledged on all hands that the ministry is offering no successful resistance to the great vices that are imperiling the life of the nation—the rum traffic, gambling, Sabbath desecration, political corruption, and the increase of crime. These monster evils are steadily advancing, and year by year gathering more and more into their power and control every department of our national life; and in their aggressive plans and work they make very little account of the ministry. If they occasionally allude to us, it is in the spirit of mockery and contempt.

I am not saying that our nation is near its downfall, but I do say we are rapidly hastening in this direction. We need only to make progress. The inevitable tendency of our current economics and politics is to anarchy through tyranny, rebellion, revolution.

The ministry, as the heaven-appointed guardians of our nation's morals and life, are first and chiefly responsible.

Look along the history of the nations, and tell us when a nation has ever reached our condition of moral degradation and peril except through the unfaithfulness of its clergy. The universal historic process has been: the clergy have first yielded to the current social and political vices, then embraced them, then led them. It is the business of the ministry, as the prophets of God, to withstand and turn back the tide of popular wickedness, to redeem and save society and nations. Wesley and his coadjutors redeemed and saved England at a time when her wickedness and atheism equaled those of France just before her Revolution and Reign of Terror. Asbury and his coadjutors redeemed and saved this republic when, at the close of the Revolution, French infidelity and the general wickedness promised to sweep everything.

We come to our pulpits with sermons far away from the spiritual wants and daily lives of people. Toiling, tempted, starving for the bread of life, we give them husks. This is the complaint of the people against the pulpit as I hear it on all hands to-day.

We have not the style of preaching that saves perishing men, that the common people hear gladly, that succeeds among the sinful, that encounters hand to hand the rum traffic, that rebukes corrupt politicians and corrupt political parties, that steadfastly withstands the popular vices that are steadily creeping into our wealthy churches.

What is the conclusion of the whole matter? "Repent ye, and be converted," said Christ to his place-seeking, half-consecrated apostles. Our present spirit of divided, semi-worldly motives and aims will never save this world.

Our Conferences pass strong resolutions every session, and, where a local option or prohibition fight is on, our preachers can be counted upon to take a hand in it; yet we need to keep up a steady fire on the enemy; and, in organized and practical ways, push the battle against rum, Sabbath desecration, gambling in futures and all gambling, political corruption and crime of every sort. We should be uncompromisingly against whatever is against our Lord and his cause. The report of the Committee on Temperance at the last session of the Louisiana Conference concluded thus:

We have all observed that the liquor traffic does not fear resolutions, because, as a general thing, they are ineffective. And just so long as we continue to pass meaningless resolutions, just so long are we the object of the ridicule of those engaged in the whisky business. What we need is real, effective opposition. And to the accomplishment of that purpose some well-defined policy must be adopted: therefore, be it

Resolved, That we recommend that our preachers begin by laboring with those members of our several charges who sell or drink intoxicating liquors; and if they refuse to conform to the rules of our church, we will proceed as the Discipline directs in such cases; and be it further

Resolved, That we will preach at least one sermon during the coming year on the subject of total abstinence, and one sermon on prohibition; and be it further

Resolved, That we will use every possible effort, both in public and private, to secure prohibition in the parishes where we reside.

Now, all will allow that it was right to pass those resolutions; but is anything being said or done towards keeping them? "The pure minds" of brethren possibly need stirring up "by way of remembrance." The Methodist ministry, on fire of the Holy Ghost, and so possessed of the spirit "of power, and of love, and of a sound mind," can become "mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds." JNO. T. SAWYER.

On Missions.

There is no question of more vital importance that is before the church to-day than that of missions, and how we can best meet the demands that are upon us. I suppose this is the study of every pastor, with many of the noble laymen of our church.

I am going to make a statement that will probably be unpopular, and, doubtless, many of my brethren will disagree with me. It is this: We entertain too many side-issues, that, I believe, detract from, rather than add to, our missionary collections. Several times recently I have not encouraged agents for special work to visit my charge, lecture or preach, and take up collections. Bro. Drake says this does not interfere with the regular collections. While I have great admiration for Bro. Drake, and admire his untiring zeal for the cause of missions, and believe he would not hesitate to adopt any plan that would be most efficient in securing money for our foreign fields, I believe in this he is mistaken. This has not been my experience. I teach my people, First pay your debts. For the assessments placed upon us I consider a debt. Nor do I believe I have a right to turn money into other channels than those for which assessments are made upon us, until these obligations are met, unless I give it from my own pocket. Unless I be misunderstood (and some one will think that I am opposed to Sister Lambuth's efforts in behalf of the industrial school at Kobe), I will say: We sent to her last year (after we saw our debts would be paid) $26 for this school, besides paying $40 over assessment for foreign missions. We expect to aid in that school again this year. The point I want to make is this: If an enterprise is worthy the attention and support of the church, let it be taken under the wing of our Board of Missions, and let the assessments be made to meet the demands. The last Minutes of our Conference shows a deficit of $507.59 below the contributions for foreign missions the previous year. On the twenty-eighth page of the same Minutes you will see about $500 contributed to the Kobe school. Why not add this to the regular collections, and make up that deficit, and let the Board of Missions contribute that much? I contend they do it indirectly. We paid last year on this charge about $180 for foreign work, besides that contributed by our Woman's Missionary Society; yet the Minutes say $145. Some one will say, "Probably the Board is in debt, and can't take any additional work." But if these side issues detract from the regular collections, then why keep them seperate?

Along this line I have acted for seven years, and have met my assessments. D. P. BRADFORD.

The attempt to serve God without love is like rowing against the tide. Love makes duty sweet. The angels are swift-winged in God's service because they love him. Jacob thought seven years but little for the love he had for Rachel. Love is never weary. —Watson.

The Eliza Little Sunday-School.

I give below an interesting account of the organization and operation of a Sunday-school at Natchez in the early part of this century. The sketch was found among some papers of my late father, and was, doubtless, sent him by Dr. Abbey shortly before his death, which occurred within a short time after the date of the writing.

BEGINNING OF SUNDAY SCHOOLS IN THE SOUTHWEST.

According to the "Library of Useful Knowledge," published in New York in 1831, the first Sunday-school in the United States that had a regular succession, so as to be rated in Sunday-school history, was the Sunday-school Union in Philadelphia in 1824. The next one, so far as I am informed, was organized and set a-working in Natchez, Miss., in 1827, or possibly in 1828. The Philadelphia school did not belong to any one denomination of Christians, but was worked by a Board of Directors, consisting of members of several denominations, principally Presbyterians, Baptists, Methodists, and, perhaps, some others. The Natchez school was under Methodist control, and began on this wise:

Mrs. Eliza Little, wife of Mr. Peter Little, then a well-known old citizen of wealth and high position of that city, was one of the most efficient female members of the Methodist Church. She, with such assistance as she could find at hand, set up a Sunday-school in the Methodist Church. The school convened at the church regularly at nine o'clock A. M., two hours before preaching time. Mrs. Little used her own plans in gathering the children, appointing the teachers, fixing the classes, and managing the school. She had a most remarkable social influence over such young men and women of the city as she chose to enstrole. Her queenly presence and affectionate, winning ways made us young folks feel it an honor to do her wishes. She was by no means unmindful of the poor children, but gathered them up wherever they could be found.

Of course, in those days there were no Sunday-school books, nor printed literature of any kind. Mrs. Little supplied her own books in her own way. They consisted of the Bible—perhaps the New Testament alone—catechisms, primers, spelling-books, etc. She made her own rules, and caused them to be strictly observed. She was a woman of precise order and regularity. How far she was assisted in this enterprise by the counsels of other godly women, of whom there were quite a number then in the church, or other persons, of course I have no means of knowing. As well as my memory serves me, the church as such, either the preacher or the Quarterly Conference, had nothing to do with this Sunday-school for some time—maybe a year or more. It seemed to grow and acquire the overaight and patronage of the church gradually.

As well as I remember, Mrs. Little divided the school into small classes. There were about ten or twelve classes at the first, but usually maybe not over five or six children in a class; and as now remembered, the teachers were mostly, if not all, young persons.

This, I believe, is the origin of Sunday-schools in this country. These things so briefly outlined, though they occurred over sixty years ago, are, in the main, very distinctly remembered to this day. R. ABBEY.

Yazoo City, Miss., Jan. 9, 1891.

You will permit me to say that the above-mentioned school is still carefully organized and working effectively. Is it true that this Sunday-school is second as to date of organization in this country? RICHARD F. REED.

The Initiative.

In many matters the first step is half the race; you would run well if you could get started. You do not know where to begin, or what to do first. There are people who would like to be Christians, but they can not make up their minds to begin. There are good Christians who would like to aid in promoting the work in the church, but they do not see where to begin. The best advice we can give is to begin right where you may happen to be this very moment. Enter the first open door, large or small, and other doors will swing aside. God opens the door, but you must enter it. The door will unclose where you have gifts. Be not concerned about the opening, but be eager to enter the moment it moves on its hinges. There is a duty next to you; that is the duty to be instantly performed. Do not look far off—the duty is close to you; the near task performed may open the way for the distant duty. But the question about the far duty is for the future; the present call is to duty close by. You are in touch with some one; there is the demand for your first service.

You can put into a minute of time only just so much manual labor; but you can add to the same minute thought and love. It is the action of the higher human powers which lengthens life, which turns an hour into a day and one year into ten. Some of the greatest souls who have lighted up the earth have had a short life, if measured by years, but how long, if we consider the number of their great endeavors and accomplishments. Not only genius, but goodness, lengthens our days. How long are the lives of those generous souls who live for others! Most of us each day think of what we can get or do for ourselves; but there are those who acquire the habit of helping others, of comforting, of adding cheerfulness and strength, wherever they go. To those who thus give, much is given in return—contentment, trust in God, confidence in their fellowmen, sweet hopes, peaceful memories.

To fill life full, you must open it upwards toward truth, beauty, goodness. Mere excitement is not life; for all excitements weary, and are succeeded by depression. The hard routine of work into which no love and no thought enter, and which is done from necessity, not duty, leaves us in a lethargy. In order to "redeem time," we must look up, and not down. Seeking things below takes our strength out of us: waiting on the Lord for his higher gifts renews our strength day by day. —James Freeman Clarke.

Get near Jesus Christ, and you will catch his manner. Dwell in fellowship with him, and whether you are thinking about it or not, there will come some faint resemblance to that Lord into your characters and your way of doing things, so that men "will take knowledge of you that you have been with Jesus." The poor bit of cloth which has held some precious piece of solid perfume will retain fragrance for many a day afterwards, and will bless the scentless air by giving it forth. The man that keeps close to Christ, and has folded him in his heart, will, like the poor cloth, give forth a sweetness not his own that will gladden and refresh many nostrils. Lie in the light, and you will become light. Keep near Christ, and you will be Christ-like. Love him, and love will do to you what it does to many a wedded pair, and to many kindred hearts: it will transfuse into you something of the characteristics of the object of your love. It is impossible to trust Christ, to obey Christ, to hold communion with him, and to live beside him, without becoming like him. And if such be our inward experience, so will be our outward appearance.—Alexander Maclaren, D. D.

Time brings danger to the Christian life because we grow older. The freshness of youth passes, and eagerness and enthusiasm are moderated, and then comes the temptation to think that we are losing faith and zeal. Many Christians think that they are losing piety when they are simply losing the enthusiasm of youth. What is needed is a readjustment of methods and views to the working forces and principles of action belonging to their time of life. They need to learn that as we grow older, deeper principle should take the place of youthful enthusiasm.—The Advance.

Phillips Brooks, in one of his greatest sermons, deals with the irreligious man who makes excuse for himself with the plea that his life is too busy to attend to religion, and who asks, "What room is there for Christianity in such a crowded life as mine?" The preacher replies: "This is as if the engine had said it had no room for the steam. It is as if the tree had said it had no room for the sap. It is as if the ocean had said it had no room for the tide. It is as if the man had said that he had no room for his soul."

Prayer should be just what one feels, just what one thinks, just what one needs; and it should stop the moment it ceases to be the real expression of the need, the thought and the feeling. —Beecher.

We shall never acquire any great capacity for joy, the blessed peace of God will never possess our mind and heart, as long as we shrink from self-denial.—A. March.

There is something wrong with the religion of the man who walks with a lighter step toward the theater than he does toward the church.—Ram's Horn.

According to the latest definition, a reformer is one who is more troubled about the sins of other people than he is about his own.—Baltimore Advocate.

Look upon the bright side of your condition, then your discontents will disperse. Pore not upon your losses, but recount your mercies.—Watson.

There is as much difference between reading the Bible and reading about it as there is between eating dinner and reading the bill-of-fare.

Have something to do, something to love, and something to hope for.—Dr. Chalmers.

A sensible young man gave as one reason for liking the business he had chosen that it obliged him to be cheerful. A gloomy, ill-natured man could not succeed in it. He was naturally despondent, and needed the spur of necessity to keep him in good spirits. Cheerfulness is capital in almost every business. So it is in religious activity.—Herald and Presbyter.

In life's battles he wins who keeps an abundance of ammunition on hand, in the shape of good health, Christian principles, wise economy, virtuous habit, thorough training, adequate knowledge and prompt execution.

Rev. G. R. Loehr's appeal in the Woman's Missionary Advocate for extension of work in Shanghai by our Woman's Board proves how nearly related is the work of the two Boards. A church is firmly anchored by woman's work in schools, etc. Our ministers, especially the presiding elders, would give great impetus to the work by earnest efforts at the Quarterly and District Conferences. After a good talk, at a Quarterly Conference, by Bro. Weems, a sister said, "I will go to the next meeting if I have to walk." She lived only four miles from the church. At another place, on a similar occasion, after a missionary talk by him and the presentation of a "special" in our Conference work, a few friends were approached privately, and $10 80 was obtained. An interest was aroused in one person, who gave joyfully $10 of the above, and a year hence (recently) ten dollars more.

The leaflet, "Yes, You Do, Lucinda," by Mrs. Alice L. Armor (Woman's Work for Woman), suggests to us that many truly missionary spirits might be secured to aid us had we the gift of understanding how to present the work. We can not afford to follow Christ at a distance. The imperishable monument, that lives in the hearts of all followers of the meek and lowly Jesus, was erected by Mary at the feet of the Master. We need to be perfected in love, to be guided step by step by the Holy Spirit. Let us observe the holy teaching: "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." We must divide our sheaves with as many as we can, remembering "sorrows are halved and blessings are doubled by sharing them with others." We should labor to resurrect buried talents, and those in even worse condition, that are used so industriously for Satan, for the time is ripe for an abundant harvest.

"Who Gives in Proportion" (Missionary Link, in Methodist Review) ends with: Mrs. Isabella Bird Bishop closed a thrilling address thus: "There can be no arbitrary law about giving. Let us be honest in our self-denial, and not think that we are carrying the burdens of this great, perishing heathen world by touching them lightly with our fingers, but let us bear them till they eat into the shrinking flesh, and so let us fulfill the law of Christ. Let us entreat him, even with strong crying and tears, to have mercy, not on the Christless heathen, but on the Christlessness within our own hearts; on our shallow sympathies and hollow self-denials, and on our infinite callousness to the woes of this perishing world, which God so loved that he gave his only Son for its redemption. . . . Let each of us do our utmost by any amount of self-sacrifice. . . . May he touch all our hearts with the spirit of self-sacrifice, and with the inspiration of that love of his which, when he came to redeem the world, kept nothing back!"

"Work of the Board and Women of Means" (Life and Light, in Woman's Missionary Advocate) contains wholesome lessons. We have space for only the closing: "A beautiful sentence from Drummond's Ascent of Man: 'Each worker toiled in his own little place. . . . Suddenly these workers looked up; they spoke to one another. . . . Henceforth their work was one, the world was one, and mind, which had discovered the oneness, was one.' The thought is inspiring. It points to a time when all workers for better things will know themselves and each other as working for a common object. Intensity will no more take on forms of narrowness; ignorance will disappear in the light of a larger knowledge. Then our beloved work will make its irresistible appeal to those who can respond with the gold of Sheba as well as with the widow's mite. Remember, gold is mentioned in the prophecy before prayer, which will surely follow: 'To Him shall be given the gold; prayer also shall be made continually.'"

The Need Near Asheville, N. C.

Mrs. L. M. Pease, of Asheville, in a letter to the General Secretary, says:

We had not been long in Asheville before we became impressed with the hopeless ignorance of the country people who came with produce to sell. One woman in great poverty asked us to supply her food, and she would send her daughter to work in payment. Soon after, being in need of help, we tried the young woman; and, though she knew nothing about cooking at first, she learned rapidly and soon became quite an expert. This was our first experience with the poor white class, and we soon became interested in them, and found that they had excellent natural abilities, and only lacked education and opportunity. We were importuned to take children, both orphan and illegitimate, and, though our accommodations were limited, received quite a number, having a small school and instructing them in industrial matters. This experiment on a small scale was so successful that we became anxious that large numbers should have like opportunities, and offered to furnish land and buildings to any church or society which would establish an industrial school. The Presbyterians were already in the field, and gladly accepted the offer, and their school has been successful beyond our expectations.

All through this mountain region the need is great of industrial, boarding, and day-schools. The Presbyterians are now establishing many of the latter, and from the pupils of these they will select the best material for the boarding-schools, and in time train girls for teachers and missionaries in the neighborhoods. We are gratified to hear that the Home Mission Society has begun a similar work, and contemplates establishing schools similar to our Home Industrial.

When we decided that it would be impossible to establish a School of Methods for the W. C. T. U., which a fine site was donated in Waynesville, it occurred to me that it would be an excellent location for an industrial Home and School for mountain children. There are numbers of these mountain whites in the vicinity of Waynesville and on the western border of the State. The Waynesville people are religious, cultured, and benevolent, and would give cordial welcome and aid to such an enterprise. The town is picturesque, a popular Summer resort, and has a large hotel at the White Sulphur Springs.

There is an excellent stone foundation already laid for the building which the W. C. T. U. propose to erect, which could probably be used as it is, or with some alteration, and there is lumber on hand sufficient for a good superstructure. It seems to the ladies chiefly interested in trying to establish the School of Methods that the property could be turned over to the Home Mission Society, reserving, perhaps, the privilege of holding a few days' School of Methods in the assembly hall of the school during the summer vacation. Our Legislature is now in session, and could make the changes necessary in the Act of Incorporation.

The site donated for the School of Methods is only four acres, but the abundance of land near at hand could be cheaply purchased should it be desirable to have a farm. Should you think favorably of the location described, and wish to take steps to secure it, address Mrs. M. J. Brown, Asheville, who was one of the donors of the lot and is a manager of the School of Methods.—Our Homes.

Encouraging Notes from the Cuba Mission.

Rev. C. A. Fulwood, writing from Key West, Fla., gives in a recent letter the following items concerning this interesting work.

"The mission parsonage is far advanced toward completion; will be finished in two or three weeks. Brother Akin, in charge of Memorial Church and Cuban Mission, Key West, has made a fine impression, and is doing splendid work. His assistant, Brother Delofeu, is expected to arrive in Havana next week."

In a late letter written from Havana he says: "God is with us. His hand is guiding. The mission here is not to be abandoned. Through the timely arrival of Sister Wolff, I can, under God, gather our people together, maintain the Sunday-school and regular public worship. Brother Barredo, a local preacher of four years' standing, is appointed to supply the mission. He is regarded here as a very devout and consecrated man."—The World for Christ.

The Mississippi W. C. T. U. Convention.

The twelfth Annual Convention of Mississippi Woman's Christian emperance Union closed in Natchez, ednesday, May 8. The sessions ronghout were harmonious. Large d enthusiastic audiences filled the ll each night. Mrs. Katharine L. evenson, of Chicago, Ill., corresponding secretary of the National W. T. U., and Mrs. Lide Merriwether, Memphis, president of the Tennes- W. C. T. U., were present and added incalculably to the interest of the ventioo.

Saturday evening addresses of welcome were given on behalf of the city, ministry and local union, which were appropriately responded to; and speech on prohibition was delivered Miss Belle Kearney.

Sunday afternoon the annual sermon was preached by Mrs. Stevenson, who graduate of a theological school in ston, Mass., and a minister to every ape, save in the laying on of hands the possession of an ecclesiastical ense. In the evening of the same Mr. Merriwether spoke on perial Liberty.

Tuesday night Mrs. Merriwether ke on woman's progress, and, made trong plea for the political enfranchisement of her sex.

Mrs. Nellie Nugent Somerville, of Greenville, was unanimously elected corresponding secretary, and s. Curlee, of Corinth, was made e-president at large.

An admirable set of resolutions and on of work was adopted by the conntion. During the coming year organization will be more energetically systematically pushed, and an effort made to prepare the minds of the ple to demand constitutional prohibition of the next Legislature. It s decided to issue a White Ribbon bulletin once a month, as soon as the cessary funds can be raised, and s. Lulie Luckie, of Holly Springs, elected editor of the same.

Among the other State officers who re elected were: Mrs. M. M. Snell, vangelist; Mrs. Mary Ervin, W. C. T. organizer and superintendent of al Purity, and Miss Anna Simonorganizer of Loyal Temperance ons and superintendent of Demot Medal Contest Work.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. Wm. G. Evans, West Monroe, La., May 8: "On Sunday, May 5, I closed a four-weeks' meeting at this place, which resulted in much good to our church. It is said to have been the best meeting that ever blessed this place. Quite a number of family altars were erected, and quite a number of persons took up the cross of public prayer. I was assisted the first week by Bros. Reames and B. F. White; the second week by Rev. L. P. Bower, of the Presbyterian Church, and Rev. R. S. Isbell; the next week by Bro. E. E. Riggs, an exhorter of Monroe, and Rev. H. W. May; and the last week Bro. Riggs was the wheel-horse. The blessings of God were bestowed bountifully upon our church. The ladies have started a prayer meeting, to continue indefinitely, at which their children, husbands and parents are laid before the Lord, and his blessings besought for them. The revival is not over yet, but just begun. We begin again soon. We are well up along all lines."

Rev. M. M. Black, Wesley Chapel, Natchez May 7: "During the latter part of April we held a meeting at the Chapel, which resulted in twelve accessions to the church, twenty or more conversions, and the reclamation of quite a number of backsliders. Bro. L. S. Jones, our wide-awake presiding elder, was with us one week, and did valiant service. The people of our city were much delighted with his preaching, and it was greatly regretted that he could not remain longer with us. Bros. W. B. Lewis and V. V. Boone were also present part of the time, and rendered valuable assistance. The brethren emphasized the teaching of the Word concerning a full and a conscious salvation, and the Lord honored their declaration of the truth. Not the least part of the good done was the quickening of the spiritual life of the membership generally. The last night of the meeting, in response to a proposition made by the pastor, fully half of the congregation present (the house being filled to overflowing) stood up to testify to having been renewed and blessed. The power of the Lord is still with us. Last week a young lady was converted while about her ordinary duties, and on Sunday, the fifth instant, she and one other were received into the church. Several such conversions have taken place recently."

Rev. B. F. Phillips, Shuqualak circuit, Columbus district, North Mississippi Conference: "Shuqualak is on the M. and O. R. R., nearly 200 miles north of Mobile. There is no prettier location for a town in the State of Mississippi. We have about 700 inhabitants. Shuqualak has long been noted for its schools. The Shuqualak Female College, under the able management of that scholarly Christian, Rev. L. M. Stone, was quite an attraction for those who had educable daughters, and proved to be a blessing to the town for years. Mr. Stone, wishing a larger field of usefulness, removed to Meridian, and we have now the Shuqualak College for Young Men, as well as ladies, under the able management of Prof. W. T. Foster, whose whole life is warped into that which pertains to the interest of his school and the pupils intrusted to his care. He is a Christian educator; and, I dare say, no school in our State can boast of a more dignified and ladylike teacher than Bro. Foster's principal teacher in primary department, Miss Lucie Harper. The school is doing well, and everything is astir preparing for commencement. Shuqualak is a Baptist community, but you have no idea how kind some of the Baptists are to the Methodist preacher and his family. One Baptist brother sent a barrel of flour and several packages of sugar and a nice ham to the parsonage, with his compliments. The Methodist Church on this work is weak, numerically, but we are on rising ground, and, by the grace of God, we will try and advance in all church work. Ours is a prohibition county (Noxubee), and we intend to hold the fort. We had Luther Benson, of Indiana, to lecture for us last night and the night before. His theme was temperance. He will be remembered by the people of this town for many days to come. I am getting along well with my work. My congregations are growing all the time. I closed a meeting of two weeks only a short while back. We had a good time, and some accessions to our church. Up to date I have received into the church since Conference nine, and have lost three dismissed by certificate. I have my collections under way, and hope to report all in full at Conference. As for the support of the presiding elder and preacher in charge, we have plenty to eat and wear."

MINISTERS' INSTITUTE, COLUMBUS DISTRICT.

The Ministers' Institute for the Columbus district, of North Mississippi Conference, met in Artesia, April 22, 1895. Most of the members were present at the opening session, and remained to the close. From first to last the session was very interesting. The subjects were well presented in papers and speeches. The preaching was able, earnest, and religious. It has not been my privilege to attend a better meeting of the sort than this was.

The next session will convene in Shuqualak, in September next. Come up. J. W. DORMAN, Sec.

Starkville, Miss.

The following resolutions were passed:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this Preachers' Institute that each preacher in this district preach at least once during this Conference year in each of his congregations on the subject of "Christian Giving."

J. A. BOWEN,
B. F. PHILLIPS,
N. G. AUGUSTUS.

Resolved, That Bro. W. S. Harrison be requested to write out and publish a list of books a young preacher should read, B. F. PHILLIPS,
N. G. AUGUSTUS.

Resolved, That the thanks of the pastors of the Columbus district are cordially extended to Rev. T. C. Wier, our presiding elder, who has served us so faithfully and successfully for the past four years. We pray that the head of the church may bless him wherever he goes.

J. A. BOWEN,
R. M. STANDEFER.

The thanks of this Preachers' Institute are due, and are hereby tendered, to the pastor and the people of Artesia for their Christian hospitality extended to us so cordially during our stay among them. We pray the blessings of God upon them. We also remember the kindness of "Uncle Tom," the sexton. J. W. DORMAN,
J. A. BOWEN.

PORTERVILLE CHARGE.

We are making haste—slowly on the Porterville circuit. Our second Quarterly Conference is a thing of the past. Bro. Jones, P. E., was on hand, and preached us five soul-stirring sermons. We have some opposition known as come-outers, who are opposed to the church. They have actually found out that the church will not save them. How wise some folks are! Our blessed Zion moves on just the same. "On this rock I will build my church." Our people are, as a rule, not well up on the doctrines of our church. I find but few ADVOCATES, and a number who have no Discipline, and still others who have no Bible. In the face of all this, and any amount of snuff and tobacco, and with a little whisky mixed with it (moonshine), we are making some progress. We are planning for our Summer campaign. We have had quite a revival already—one that was very much needed. Our net increase was a decrease of twelve, with more to follow. I think it is time we were unloading a few deadheads. We are not praying for a larger membership, but a membership baptized with the Holy Ghost. We have had some conversions of the get-up-and-tell-it kind. May the Lord give us a revival of Holy Ghost religion, which takes all self out and fills with all the fullness of God. We are expecting the victory. "Ask and it shall be given you."

Were the scrofula sores on my poor little boy. They were especially severe on his legs, back of his ears and on his head. His hair was so matted that combing was sometimes impossible. His legs were so bad that sometimes he could not sit down, and when he tried to walk his legs would crack open and the blood start. Physicians did not cure. I decided to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla. In two weeks the sores began to heal up; the scales came off and all over his body new and healthy flesh and skin formed. When he had taken two bottles of Ballot Reform in Louisiana.

A mass meeting in the interest of ballot reform was held in this city on Monday night, the thirteenth. The immense auditorium (the Academy of Music) was crowded, and much enthusiasm was manifested. There was remarkable unanimity of sentiment among the speakers, the chief of whom were Rabbi Heller, Prof. Henry Chambers and Dr. B. M. Palmer. The platform of principles adopted embraced the following features: Uncompromising opposition to the proposed constitutional amendment requiring the holding of parochial and general elections on the same day; acceptance of the proposed amendment restricting suffrage; such changes in existing registration laws as will prevent fraudulent registration; the election of legislators who are in hearty sympathy with the ballot-reform movement; the subordination of all other political issues to this one of ballot reform; active participation in local elections for the purpose of securing clean, efficient, economical administration of local affairs. Steps were taken to secure the organization of ballot reform leagues in every parish in the State. All the committees needed for carrying on the work were appointed. A State Ballot Reform Convention was appointed to be held in this city on the fourth of July, at which all the parishes are to be represented. A wise and most timely move this is. A crime against suffrage is the greatest of all crimes. It saps the foundations of society itself, and is the precursor of war or anarchy, or both. It is high time that the good citizenship of Louisiana should arise in the majesty of a righteous indignation and put an end to the infamous iniquities that have so long disgraced the State.

All the work of this mass meeting would have counted for very little if it had failed to pass the resolution to subordinate all other political issues to this. That means that Democracy, Republicanism, Populism, and all other ism, must stand out of the way. Party lines are to be ignored altogether until this reform is accomplished. The resolution to participate in local elections is also a wise one. In many localities good citizens have only themselves to blame for the crookedness and inefficiency of their local governments. What else can they expect when they hold their hands and look on with apparent unconcern while toughs and hoodlums manipulate the political machine?

Ecclesiastical Suicide.

In a recent issue we called attention to one of the numerous iniquities of the Romish Church, viz., her system of raising money by Sunday festivals, the attractions of which are dancing and other revelry, raffling, athletic contests, bicycle races, horse races, with the usual concomitants of gambling and boisterous excitement, and the sale of wine, beer, whisky and other intoxicants. We shall have more to say of these festivals at another time.

What we wish to do in this article is to direct attention to another source from which Rome derives large revenues, viz., the contributions of Protestants. Here in this city tickets to some performance for the benefit of the Romish Church are hawked on the streets continually. These performances are of various descriptions. Raffling is one of the most common. The number of these ticket venders and their industry and pertinacity, if accurately described, would almost tax the credulity of many of our readers. One secret of their numerosity and persistency is that in many cases they have something at stake. Teachers in the public schools put tickets into the hands of their pupils, and offer prizes to those who make the largest sales. Now, who are the purchasers of these tickets? Catholics alone? Nay, verily. Large revenues are derived from sales to Protestants. The number of non-Catholics who make contributions in this way for the support of the various institutions of the Romish Church is almost incredibly prodigious. But this ticket selling is only one of a number of ways in which Rome levies a tax upon Protestantism. Peddling is resorted to. Not only in this city, but in various railroad towns Rome's emissaries may be seen hawking little, trivial articles of merchandise at a price far above their intrinsic value; and a large percentage of these purchases are made by Protestants who do not need these wares at all. They buy either to get rid of an agent whose pertinacity makes her a nuisance, or in the belief that they are helping a good cause. Though this may seem a trivial matter, Rome's revenues are considerably swelled thereby.

But not only do Protestants give in these indirect ways for the maintenance and propagation of Catholicism; they also make direct contributions. In Mississippi, for example, Rome sends out agents periodically to solicit funds for her orphanages. They visit every town of any importance in the State. They go into every store, office, shop and business house, and into private residences as well; and they plead their cause so artfully that they are usually not turned away empty handed. A very large percentage of those who thus contribute are Protestants. If the amount of money which Rome thus obtains regularly from Protestant sources could be published, Protestantism would be astonished at herself. If the Methodists and Baptists of Mississippi and Louisiana had at their command the money which they have given in the last fifty years for the maintenance of Romish institutions, they could each start a magnificently equipped orphanage of their own.

Now, we feel it to be a duty incumbent upon us as a Protestant journalist to lift up our voice in emphatic protest against such a policy on the part of Protestants. It is folly. Yea, more; it is suicide. Rome is a huge system of error; and her errors are not merely of the doctrinal sort. She is the deadliest foe of true Christianity. She stands in the way of almost every moral reform. She is the bulwark of the liquor traffic. She not only tolerates it, but she engages in it herself. Her authorized agents sell intoxicants on the Lord's day to raise money for the church; and that, too, to men who have already imbibed far beyond the line of sobriety. In politics the saloon keeper knows full well where his tower of strength is. She also throws the weight of her tremendous influence on the side of that crying iniquity of our age, gambling. The raffle, which is but one of the multitudinous forms of the gambler's art, is one of her regular sources of revenue. Then, too, as we have already shown, she has festivals, one of the chief attractions of which is horse racing, bicycle racing, etc., with unconcealed gambling as one of its inseparable concomitants; and that, too, on the Lord's day to raise money for carrying on the Lord's work (?). Let any unbiased man ask himself the question, What chance is there for successful warfare upon the liquor traffic, Sabbath desecration, or the gambling evil in any region where Catholicism is the dominant religious force.

In view of these facts, which are undenied and undeniable, the Protestant who puts his earnings into the coffers of Rome is simply helping to sap the foundations of his own church and of the lofty type of civilization which his church is seeking to create. With the left hand we put money into the Lord's treasury to make war upon Catholicism in Mexico and Brazil, and then with our right hand we put a much larger sum into Rome's hands to aid her in her work of gathering up the destitute orphans of our own heaven favored land (Protestant orphans at that) to train them up in that heinous system of iniquity which we have already outlined. If this is not ecclesiastical suicide, what is it? We appeal to the readers of the ADVOCATE to put a stop to this unparalleled folly. When one of Rome's smooth-tongued emissaries comes around with her subscription list, or her high-priced wares, or her tickets to a raffle or entertainment, ask her for a contribution for some Protestant orphan asylum or other charitable institution. Her quick response will be: "I can't. I am a Catholic." A similar reply ought to be on the tongue of every Protestant: "I can't. I am a Protestant."

The Second-Blessing Controversy.

A new stage has been reached in the second-blessing controversy. "Gilderoy" has raised a new issue. His argument militates not only against the theory of the "second-blessingists," but with equal force against that of many of their antagonists. Many of those who oppose the second-blessing theory claim as much for the first blessing as Dr. Carradine does for the second. Now, "Gilderoy's" position is that neither the first blessing, nor the second, nor any other attainment in grace possible in this life, rids a man of "original sin," "inbred sin," or whatever you may please to call it. Not only does he claim this as the teaching of the Scriptures; he asserts that it is one of the fundamental doctrines of Methodism. He declares that all our standards from Arminius, Wesley and Watson down to our present Book Editor teach this doctrine in the most unequivocal manner.

Now, if "Gilderoy" is wrong, it will be an exceedingly easy task for his antagonists, whether "first-blessingists" or "second-blessingists," to demolish him completely. Let the brethren brush the dust from the ponderous theological tomes in their libraries, and search until they find teaching contrary to this; then let them copy this teaching and send it to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. We will promise to make room for it in the very first issue, even if we have to leave out an editorial. Will they do so? Certain it is that Dr. Palmore has not done so, although challenged by name to do so some weeks since. Dr. Palmore owes it to himself and to the church to accept "Gilderoy's" challenge, or to confess that he was guilty of an egregious blunder in his editorial of April 24. Further silence on his part is simply a confession of his inability to meet the issue. We say this much without any intention of engaging in a controversy with Dr. Palmore or anyone else.

BOOKS.

THE MONK AND THE PRINCE. By Atticus G. Haygood, Sr. The Foote and Davies Co., Atlanta, Ga. Price, $1.

The above is the title of Bishop Haygood's latest venture in authorship. The work is a 12 mo. of 371 pages. It is printed on good paper, and neatly and substantially bound. The typography is superb. The octogenarian, as his eyes run rapidly over the large, clear, beautiful type, will bless the author for his kind consideration. As to style, the work is written in genuine "Haygoodese"—so genuine that if it had been published anonymously, there would have been no doubt in the public mind as to the authorship. The work is historical, the scene being laid in Florence, Italy, four hundred years ago. "The monk" is the celebrated reformer, Savonarola; "the prince," his great antagonist, Lorenzo Medici, frequently called "Lorenzo the Magnificent." The part played by each of these celebrated personages is most charmingly told; and the character of each is drawn with the hand of a master. While the author acknowledges his indebtedness to cyclopedias for many of his facts, it is apparent on almost every page that he has not followed the cyclopedias in his analysis of character. He paints with a discrimination as refreshing as it is rare. He refuses to unite with the Protestant world in the canonization of Savonarola. He weighs the martyr monk in the scales of reason and revelation, and finds him not a saint, but a crank of the first water—virtually a lunatic.

But while the work is historical, the reader does not go very far before he perceives that the author does not deal in history for its own sake alone. He is writing fifteenth century history for the benefit of nineteenth century readers, and he makes his historic facts and his character sketches eloquent with truth which concerns the men of the present generation no less than those of the distant past. In saying this we do not mean that all the author's moralizing will be universally accepted as gospel truth. Cavils and criticisms there will be, no doubt; but the book is going to be read, preachments and all.

We read it through at two sittings, and would have finished in one had not pressing engagements prevented. Those who wish to procure the work should write to Mrs. A. G. Haygood, Oxford, Ga.

THE CRUSADE OF THE CHILDREN: Its Causes and Results. By Sarah Stringfield Butler. 16 mo. 152 pages. 1895. Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn.

Strange to say, historians make but little mention of the remarkable crusades undertaken about the year 1212 A. D. by the children of France and Germany. Says the author in the opening chapter: "The story of the crusade of the children is one of the most remarkable and most pathetic ever written. The uprising of ninety thousand children from eight to fourteen years of age, imbued with the same purpose, and an unswerving determination to carry out that purpose regardless of the authority of parents, the persuasion of friends, the fear of danger, or of the laws of the land in which they lived, stands out in history without a parallel."

The volume at hand evinces research and considerable literary ability, and will interest young and old alike. The style of the author is pleasing, while the novelty of the subject treated lends additional charm to the book. The recital of examples of heroic faith, burning enthusiasm, and unflinching courage, such as this volume contains, can not fail to inspire the young people of the church to nobler, more determined effort for the cause of Christ. THE PASTOR'S BOOK. Compiled by Rev. J. T. L. Annis, of the Northwest Texas Conference. Fifty cents, net. Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn.

This pocket memorandum book supplies a long-felt want, and should be in the hands of every preacher in the connection. There are many facts connected with church work of which a minister ought to keep a private record, as, for instance, pastoral visits made, marriages solemnized, infants and adults baptized, burials attended; date, place, and subject of sermons preached, etc. The book before us contains blanks for recording just such facts, as well as others of less importance. Pastors will appreciate the advantage of having in one book a directory of the church membership, a list of the subscribers to church periodicals, and of subscriptions to the various Conference claims.

The Advocate for Seventy Cents.

We are now offering the ADVOCATE for seventy cents a year in connection with Holman's Self-Pronouncing Bible. Figure it this way: The publisher's price of the Bible we offer is $3 15, and it is very cheap at that. Many Bibles inferior to it are selling at from four to five dollars. We give this $3.15 Bible and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE for one year for $3 85. A person who is not a subscriber can not get it for a cent less than $3.15. Is this not putting the ADVOCATE at seventy cents? This Bible has the helps contained in the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the most valuable Bible on the market. Our subscribers who have procured it are enthusiastic in its praise. If you want it, don't delay; otherwise, you may do as some of our subscribers have done in regard to other premiums—get left. See description of it on another page. Everybody ought to have it.

N. B.—Subscribers, new or old, who send us seventy cents, thinking this will pay for a year's subscription, are simply wasting stamps. Our seventy cents' offer is made only in connection with the Holman Bible.

NOTES.

Rev. J. G. Sibley writes: "My work is on a boom. The prospects for a great revival are bright and brightening."

Sister Jones, wife of Rev. L. J. Jones, of the Mississippi Conference, has been seriously ill for about eight or nine weeks. She is now thought to be convalescing.

The New Orleans Church Extension Society organized last week with J. T. Sawyer as president; J. W. Adams, vice-president; S. H. Meyer, secretary, and W. B. Thomson, treasurer.

The monthly Carondelet sociable was held last week at the residence of Mrs. D. J. Wasson. Well-rendered recitations, elegant music, toothsome refreshments, in addition to the "feast of reason and the flow of soul," constituted the programme.

Hon. J. S. Carr, of North Carolina, has given $10,000 to the American University. It is the first subscription given by a Southern man for a college north of the Potomac since the war. This money is to be used in building the "Hall of History." Already there is an endowment for the chair.—Zion's Herald.

We begin in this issue a series of articles on the great Protestant Reformation, by a diligent student of the Papacy. Dr. Hershey has been a specialist in this field for years; and in the libraries of this country and Europe he has gathered an immense fund of testimony bearing upon Romanism. He is a constant lecturer on canon law. We call attention to the introductory article.

A Summer Normal School will be held at Oxford, Miss., commencing June 6, and continuing four weeks. There will be four courses, viz., Chemistry, Physics, Geometry, Botany, each under the management of a member of the faculty of the Mississippi State University.

The Pan-American Congress of Religion and Education will be held at Toronto, Canada, July 18 to 25, 1895. The Congress will be composed of representative laymen and clergymen from every country, province and state of North and South America, and from county and state governments, as well as churches, educational and charitable institutions.

The last of Julian Ralph's series of articles on the New South appears in the May Harper's under the title "In Sunny Mississippi." It treats less of the industrial situation than some of its predecessors, and dwells upon the natural attractions of the State. A description of Jefferson Davis' home at Beauvoir is an interesting feature of the article, which is illustrated.

Dr. Hoss, of the Nashville, offers congratulations to certain Methodist preachers for having quit the use of tobacco, and says that he has congratulated the same men for the same thing more than a half-dozen times before. These brethren are like a reformed inebriate of our acquaintance, who said he knew that a man could quit drinking whisky, for he had quit fifty times.

The loan bureau started last year by Saint Bartholomew's Church, in New York City, has done a noble work in loaning small sums secured by chattel mortgages. Since last May it has loaned $40 000. That its work is appreciated is shown by the fact that it has not been compelled to foreclose a single mortgage. This bureau is certainly a form of applied Christianity. The example here set might be followed with profit in every city in the country.

The Rev. F. B. Meyer, of London, tells of one whose income is $10 000 per annum, who lives on $1 000 and gives the remaining $9,000 to the cause of foreign missions. Another, whose income is $10 000, lives on $1,500 and gives away the remainder. A governess who earns $500 gives $450. Another, who has a comfortable competence, remains in business, all the profits of which he gives. This is truly laying up treasure in heaven, and although their earthly wealth may not amount to much, they shall be rich as princes when they have gone to the "great beyond."

Seth Low, president of Columbia College, New York, announced the other day that he would at once erect a new library building for the institution, to cost one million dollars, in memory of his father, the late Abiel Abbott Low. At the same meeting in which the benefaction was announced it was made known that the president of the Board of Trustees, Mr. Wm. C. Schermerhorn, would erect a hall of natural science at a cost of $300,000. The influence of these gifts ought to be felt in all sections of the country. They ought to prompt other men of means to make beneficent use of their wealth.—Exchange.

On going out of office Gov. Northen, of Georgia, placed himself at the head of a movement to build up the waste places of that great commonwealth by securing immigration of a desirable sort from the great West. As a result of his efforts, a tract of land comprising a hundred thousand acres has been secured in Montgomery and Wilcox counties, and a colony forty thousand strong is to settle upon it. A town will be laid out near the center of the tract, and the rest of it will be laid out in farms of from five to a hundred acres. This is the sort of immigration the South needs—industrious farmers, not paupers, criminals, saloon-keepers and dead-beats from Catholic Europe.

Rev. J. J. Smylie, of the Louisiana Conference, was recently the victim of a personal assault. He was carrying on a revival meeting at Tangipahoa, the services being held in a tent. On Sunday night, the twelfth, just as he left the tent at the close of the service, having his wife's sister, Miss Kihlinger, on his arm, he was savagely attacked by several "lewd fellows of the baser sort," one of whom dealt him a stunning blow on the head with a loaded cane. Others, with pistol in hand, cried out, "Kill him; kill him." Miss Kihlinger fainted, and was picked up by friends and carried back into the tent. Bro. Smylie accompanying her, and the mob following with drawn weapons. The next night the house at which Bro. Smylie was stopping was brickbatted at a late hour. The citizens of Tangipahoa held a mass meeting, denounced the outrage in unmeasured terms and urged Bro. Smylie to go on with his meeting, pledging themselves to protect him. The chief participants in the outrage are now in the clutches of the law.

Mississippi Headquarters.

To the Epworth Leagues of Mississippi—

We have succeeded in arranging for our State headquarters during the International Conference. The prospect is that there will be ten or fifteen thousand people present on that occasion. Let us put Mississippi in the forefront. It is of the highest importance to all who contemplate going to send on their names at once, so as to secure homes. Arrangements are being perfected with the railroads to get the very lowest possible rate. Send orders at once for the souvenir program, which will give full information about the Conference and Chattanooga.

An Appeal.

It is a well-known fact that the labor and sacrifice involved in the travel of the Shreveport district is greater than that of any other district in the Louisiana Conference, and that the support is insufficient is conceded by all my predecessors. To lessen the labor and expense necessary to efficiently do the work assigned me, I have supplied myself with horse and buggy, and have rented a house at Pelican, on the T. and P. railroad, so as to be convenient to those circuits that must be reached by private conveyance. We wish to begin housekeeping by the twentieth of June.

I, therefore, appeal to the pastors of the district, and those appointed to look after this matter, to raise and forward to S. B. McCutchen, Shreveport, La., a sufficient amount to, at least, furnish the house. Let those who feel so disposed send articles of furniture to me at Pelican, La.

Signal Triumphs Won

BY DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER.

Two signal triumphs have been achieved by Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder. First it received Highest Award and Diploma at the World's Columbian Exposition of 1893. Next it secured Highest Award and Gold Medal at the California Midwinter Fair of 1894. At both Fairs it surpassed all competitors in every respect. The award, in each instance was for strongest leavening power, perfect purity and general excellence. It was sustained by the unanimous vote of the judges.

The victory at Chicago establishes the supremacy of Dr. Price's as "The Foremost Baking Powder in the World." The triumph at San Francisco confirms and emphasizes it.

A Word from the Church Extension Board.

To Presiding Elders and Pastors—

DEAR BRETHREN: At the recent session of the Board of Church Extension the following was adopted:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this Board and their earnest request that presiding elders and pastors do all in their power early in the Conference year to secure the full amount of assessments for church extension, and forward the same to the treasurers of their Conference Boards.

I write this to say that we have on hand a large quantity of maps, bulletins, reports, and other church extension literature, which we will furnish free of charge to all presiding elders and pastors who will write us for them, giving their addresses, when they will need them, and how many members are to be supplied. There is no better means of stimulating your people to liberal contributions than to "row down" your congregation with the literature about a week before you take the collection. If the preachers do not bestir themselves in this matter, we would be exceedingly glad to have active laymen take hold and let us know what they want.

Do not order literature unless you intend to use it.

The Methodist Review of Missions.

The Methodist Review of Missions is one of the most interesting and important publications sent out by our church. It is ably edited by Drs. I. G. John, H. C. Morrison, and W. R. Lambuth. It ought to be read by all our preachers, both traveling and local, and by all our leading laymen (both male and female). This monthly magazine is gotten up and sent out in the best style of work done by our Publishing House. It has ten or twelve departments, covering the whole ground of our missionary operations, and each department is filled with the latest, freshest, and best information from the front of our aggressive army for the conquest of the world. The May number is unusually rich and full. Dr. I. G. John leads off with a condensed, but very comprehensive, statement of the "Missionary Operations of the M. E. Church, South," from the beginning. Dr. Young J. Allen furnishes a very thoughtful and suggestive paper on the present pressing need for a "Society for the Diffusion of Christian and General Knowledge among the Chinese." It seems the times are ripe now for spreading knowledge of all kinds in the Celestial Empire. "Three Missionary Ambitions: I. The Field, II. The Work, and III. Our Reward," by A. J. Gordon, D. D., contains suggestions enough for two or three strong sermons. Here is a high and holy ambition.

The other articles in this number and the eleven editorial departments are loaded with good things.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

SOLILOQUY ON INTEGRITY.

(Job xxvii, 1-6.)

Old age delights in retrospection; youth, on the other hand, in prospection. Old and young are wise if they also frequently engage in introspection. Yea, frequently take an inventory of your moral belongings. Job, after individual inspection, soliloquizes about his purposes and designs.

1. He would bridle his tongue. Wickedness and deceit should not emanate from his lips.

(1) Alas! Equivocation and prevarication in business and social life abound in our day.

(2) If we do not originate, we repeat base slander of associates. The tongue steals more than the hand; murders more than the dagger and sword.

(3) Some even sink so deep as to tell barefaced falsehoods to the injury of others, or for their personal benefit.

2. Job declares he would hold fast his integrity and righteousness. These and himself would be one and inseparable for all time.

(1) There are things more valuable than life. Among those our integrity, our honor. Ten millions of the opulent are bagatelle compared to the wealth of a good name. In this respect the poor may be rich and the rich poor.

(2) Holding fast our integrity and righteousness implies danger of losing them. Danger? Is not the tourist in Switzerland in danger of falling into deep ravines? The mariner in danger of shipwreck? The miner in danger of suffocation? Watch and pray.

(3) Then, bold fast. Hold fast as the standard-bearer the colors of his country during bloody encounter; as the helmsman the helm of the ship during the fury of a hurricane.

3. Job was determined to evade compunctions of conscience. In the Hebrew tongue there is but one word for heart and conscience. Here conscience is meant.

(1) Conscience is an intimate associate. As it were, an extraneous observer, a correct witness of all we say and do, who constitutes, nevertheless, an integral part of ourselves. But, all the same, independently sovereign.

(2) Reproaches of conscience, remorse, are the inevitable shadow of sin. Should lead to repentance. No matter how desperate our case, so long as the dying thief found forgiveness, there is hope for us.

(3) Remorse, if not neutralized by forgiveness, makes life inexpressibly miserable, death fearful, eternity disastrous. In hell remorse, the worm, dieth not. According to Pollock, in his "Course of Time," the devils eternally tantalize earth's outcasts, the damned, with, "You knew your duty, but you did it not."

Buckingham's Dye for the Whiskers does its work thoroughly, coloring a uniform brown or black, which, when dry, will neither rub, wash off, nor soil linen.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-fourth Annual Camp Meeting will be opened on Wednesday evening, July 10, next, and continue for eight or ten days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates have been obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. and N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the Camp Meeting to begin their journey on July 1, and remain on the grounds until the end of August. Tickets on sale from July 1 to 27, inclusive. All trains to stop at Camp Ground station from July 8 to 29, inclusive.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The Camp Ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of nearly 1,400 feet, and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds, and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the grounds is unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations, before the rush at the opening of the Camp Meeting, should address communications to Dr. M. F. Tucker, chairman Tent and Lodging Committee, Mobile, Ala. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to E. P. Mackie, chairman, New Orleans, La.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations, free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E. Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Lodging Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution toward defraying the expense of the Camp Meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. No gate fee will be exacted on the Sunday of the Camp Meeting. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees in gratuitous, and in the interest of the salvation of souls. A cordial invitation is extended to all who would like to visit the Camp Meeting.

HOME CIRCLE.

NOW I LAY ME DOWN TO SLEEP.

BY EUGENE FIELD.

The fire upon the hearth is low.
And there is stillness everywhere;
Like troubled spirits, here and there
The firelight shadows flutter go.
And as the shadows round me creep,
A childish treble breaks the gloom
And softly from a farther room
Comes: "Now I lay me down to sleep."

And, somehow, with that little prayer
And that sweet treble in my ears,
My thought goes back to distant years,
And lingers with a dear one there;
And, as I hear the child's amen,
My mother's faith comes back to me,
Couched at her side I seem to be,
And mother holds my hands again.

Oh! for an hour in that dear place!
Oh! for the peace of that dear time!
Oh! for that childish trust sublime!
Oh! for a glimpse of mother's face!
Yet, as the shadows round me creep,
I do not seem to be alone,
Sweet magic of that treble tone—
And now I lay me down to sleep."

Home's Far Reaching Influence.

A bank official in speaking of the defalcation of one of his clerks recently made this suggestive remark: "Had I known he had not a happy home, I would not have kept him in so responsible a position." There is involved in the remark a truth of widest application. The home life is the basis of all life. A happy home is essential to safety and success in every department of life. Occasionally a man or woman is strong enough to endure discord at home without flinching at any point of duty. But the majority are not so; they become discouraged, lose heart, and at last break down. Many of the sudden and surprising lapses are to be traced to this cause. When one feels himself tied for life to a home, and has become convinced that there is no rest or happiness in it for him, it is not surprising that he becomes discouraged and gives up to some sudden temptation.

On the other hand, a man is prepared to stand almost any storm if he has a happy home, full of sympathy and love, into which he may retreat. He has something to fight for. The thought of his dear ones, in his absent hours, is an invisible yet ever present force, helping to win his battles, adding strength to his arm, steadiness to nerve, and fortitude to heart. Many a man's success is due largely to his happy home. How much happier the world might be; how much better, how much more of success and virtue, if, with a little thoughtfulness and effort, the homes were made what they should be—centers of joy and loving confidence! How bitterly Carlyle bewailed his past thoughtlessness and want of delicate tenderness toward his wife. "God reward thee, dear one! now that I can not even own my debt! Oh, why do we delay so much till death makes it impossible? Fools! Fools! we forget that it has an end. Blind and deaf that we are! Oh, think, if thou yet love anybody living, wait not till death sweep down the paltry little dust clouds and idle dissonances of the moment, and all be at last so mournfully clear and beautiful when it is too late!" Let us take the sad lesson to heart; for it is one that we all need. We have the power, by a little sympathy and forethought, to make the home the center of every radiant influence which is to sweeten the whole social lump. We can fill our homes with the warmth and sunshine of a strong and healthy affection, that shall make this one spot a bit of heaven on earth.—Selected.

Bible Study in the Home.

In some churches the plan of studying the Sunday-school Lesson in the home, as well as by the scholars in the school, has been adopted. We do not know to what extent this is done; but we are convinced that if generally adopted, it would tell powerfully on the religious life of our people. It will hardly be denied that there is great need of a more thorough knowledge of the Holy Scriptures among the people; because there is a want of systematic Bible study. Most people depend for their knowledge of the Bible on casual, desultory reading. Very few can give a correct outline of the contents of a book in the Bible. Ask the first church member you meet to give a rough sketch of the contents of Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel or Zechariah, and he will probably be puzzled. This ought not so to be. One can never get a right idea of any book without reading it in a systematic way. Now, if the parents in the home would study the Scripture lessons along with the young folks, it would do both good. The children would get a higher idea of the importance of what they were studying, by seeing the parents taking an interest in it. The parents would learn much about the Bible of which they are now ignorant; and would thus become better prepared to help and inspire the children. Christian life is nourished by the study of the Scriptures. The more fully anyone is grounded in the truth, the less likely is he to be carried away by current heresies. But this home study of the Bible, in which parents and children unite, will create in the home a wholesome mental and religious atmosphere. The pursuit of such studies will open rich treasures of truth to the mind, and lift the family life above the plan of foolish and frivolous forms of amusement. Try the study of the Bible lesson in the home circle for the next quarter.

The Difference.

The following supposed incident will serve to illustrate the truth that a truly honest man will not take a larger sum for property than its just value, even if he is offered more. A certain man named George Smith came one day to a farmer named Daniel Jones, wishing to buy a pair of oxen, and said: "Those red oxen of yours suit me, and I will pay $120 for them." Daniel Jones replied: "That is $30 more than they are worth." George Smith looked wonder-struck at this remark. The farmer said: "I know the value of those oxen better than you do. One of them is little 'breachy,' and the other one can not bear the heat so well as some oxen, and yet there are many good qualities in them; but, all things considered, $90 is all they are worth, and you may have them for that price." George Smith gladly took the oxen, and said to a man on his way home: "It beats all what a difference there is in the religion of men. Now, there is old James Clark, my near neighbor; I have heard him make many a long prayer. If he had owned these beautiful oxen, he would have asked me $130 or more for them, and he would have called them a great bargain at that price, and he would not have said a word about one of the oxen being inclined to be breachy, and the other not very tough in hot weather. I do not know anything about religion myself, but one thing I know as well as I know where the sun shines on a bright day, and that is, there is a mighty big difference between Daniel Jones' religion and James Clark's religion."—Messenger of Peace.

Why Is It?

The fact is, this Book has come into the world, and it seems to have come to stay. It is in the world, and I do not know how you are to get it out. One hundred years ago you might have found that book in twenty or thirty translations; but now you can find it in between two and three hundred different versions, most of which have been made in this last progressive, intellectual nineteenth century. All over the globe it goes; touch any shore and you will find that Book there before you.

And it is a curious fact that most of our skeptical friends contrive to keep very, very close to where its shadow falls. It does not take a great while to get out of sight of the Bible. You can go, in a very few days, where there are no churches, Sunday-schools, Young Men's Christian Associations, preachers, deacons, or anything else of the kind—you can "go West." There is little difficulty in getting beyond the reach of the Bible. Your scalp might not be very safe, but you can easily get away from the reach of the Bible. But the infidel, while finding fault with the Bible, takes good care to stay where the Bible is. Why is this?—Hastings.

Pleasant People.

Some men move through life as a band of music moves down the street, flinging out pleasure on every side through the air, to everyone far and near who can listen. Some men fill the air with their presence and sweetness, as orchards in October days fill the air with perfume of ripe fruit. Some women cling to their own houses like the honeysuckle over the door, yet, like it, sweeten all the region with the subtle fragrance of their goodness. They are trees of righteousness which are ever dropping precious fruits around them. They are lives, which shine like starbeams, or charm the heart like songs sung upon a holy day.

How great a bounty and a blessing it is to hold the royal gifts of the soul so that they shall be music to some, and fragrance to others, and life to all! It would be no unworthy thing to live for—to make the power which we have within us the breath of other men's joy; to scatter sunshine where only clouds and shadows reign; to fill the atmosphere where earth's weary toilers must stand with a brightness which they can not create for themselves, and which they long to enjoy and appreciate.—Exchange.

Keep a Clean Mouth.

A distinguished author says: "I resolved, when I was a child never to use a word which I could not pronounce before my mother." He kept his resolution, and became a pure-minded, noble, honored gentleman. His rule and example are worthy of imitation.

Boys readily learn a class of low, vulgar words and expressions, which are never heard in respectable circles. Of course, we can not think of girls as being so much exposed to this peril. We can not imagine a decent girl using words she would not utter before her father or mother.

Such vulgarity is though by some boys to be "smart," the "next thing to swearing," and yet "not so wicked;" but it is a habit which leads to profanity, and fills the mind with evil thoughts. It vulgarizes and degrades the soul, and prepares the way for many of the gross and fearful sins which now corrupt society.

Young readers, keep your mouths free from all impurity, and your "tongue from evil;" but in order to do this, ask Jesus to cleanse your heart and keep it clean, for "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."—Selected.

Losing Temper.

Losing the temper takes all the sweet, pure feeling out of life. You may get up in the morning with a clean heart, full of song, and start out as happy as a bird, and the moment you are crossed and give way to your temper, the clean feeling vanishes and a load as heavy as lead is rolled upon the heart, and you go through the rest of the day feeling like a culprit. And anyone who has experienced this feeling knows that it can not be shaken off, but must be prayed off.—Selected.

Uselessness of Alcoholic Drinks.

The amount of time and labor devoted to the production and sale of alcoholic drinks is large, and when we see its worse than uselessness, the conviction is forced upon us that this wasted effort ought to be utilized for good rather than for injury. So strong, however, has the taste for drink become ingrained into our nature that it is porbable we shall have to travel through the wilderness full forty years before reaching the promised land of temperance. We may be thankful, if it is true as claimed, that crime has decreased in proportion as beer and wine have taken the place of whisky and brandy. The change from the use of a strong drink to a weaker is an improvement, but by no means should we stop with it. Whisky and brandy are more injurious only because of the greater proportion of alcohol they contain. No one knowing the nature of alcohol would think that even in a mild form it could be taken into the human stomach without producing bad effects. Beer contains about six per cent. of alcohol and wine from five to twenty-five. The effect of bathing one's internal organs with diluted alcohol is too often apparent in the many symptoms that go to make up a large proportion of the maladies of the race. There is no doubt that excess in eating has produced more illness than excess in drinking, but one reacts upon the other. The man who uses beer or claret with his meals may be apparently as clear headed after his dinner as he was before it, but his head is not so clear as it would be without the stimulant, and a tendency to over-eat is greater. No one would prefer a doctor, a lawyer, or any professional man who had just risen from a full meal with wine, and a total abstinent railroad engineer is a safer one to entrust with a train than one who drinks even moderately. His judgment is clearer and sounder.

Alcohol contains no substance which nourishes the body of any of its parts, nor does it replace waste tissue. It is always alcohol, and is excreted as such. As stated in the Dictionary of Medical Science, "The alimentary role of alcohol has no other pretense to a scientific basis than that of an experimental error." Liebig, who started the theory that alcohol is a food, made this admission, "If a man drinks daily eight or ten quarts of Bavarian beer, in twelve months he will have taken into his system the nutritive constituents contained in a five-pound loaf of bread." Sir Lyon Playfair stated that, "One hundred parts of ordinary beer or porter contain nine and a quarter parts of solid matter. To drink beer or porter to nourish us, is tantamount to swallowing a sack of chaff for a grain of wheat." Everyone can trust his better self, and even when the senses are dulled by any dilution of alcohol, there are danger signals continually sounding in his ears if he will but hear them, though the action of alcohol constantly tends to destroy the natural safeguards. It is the moderate drinker who is constantly preparing himself, and his progeny, if perchance he have any, for future disease. True temperance will come through a greater knowledge of the use and abuse of alcohol. Whoever can look back fifty years may see a great advance in the sentiment regarding the use of alcohol and in the higher standard demanded of all our social teachers. When physicians cease to prescribe alcohol in any form the cause of temperance will have reached a still higher position. All improvement must come gradually, but it will come surely.

A man can not use what is called the best of wine, daily, for ten years, and be free from disease. Whatever is in the least harmful to the human economy, when taken internally, whether it irritates the nerves, or only renders them more sensitive to external impressions, accelerates the degeneration of cell tissue, is incompatible with healthy growth, and therefore its use is abuse. There is abundant authority to confirm all and even more than has been written.—Journal of Hygiene.

Eat not for the pleasure thou mayest find therein; eat to increase thy strength; eat to preserve the life which thou hast received from heaven.—Confucius.

OBITUARIES.

GEORGE—The subject of this memoir, Mrs. ELIZA B GEORGE (nee West), was born in the city of Nashville, Tenn., 1816, and died in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ann Killian, Jan. 15, 1895. At the age of fifteen, under the ministry of Rev. J. G. Jones, she joined the M. E. Church, South, in which she died. In 1837 she was united by marriage to N. I. George, with whom she spent over fifty-nine years of her precious life, administering to his comforts and to those of the five sons and five daughters given them of the Lord.

The writer, having been joined to the family in 1867 by marriage, and to whom all differences were made known, testifies that in every affliction or trial of whatever nature she sought and found comfort in the ever-present and sustaining Spirit of God. Through her long affliction (nerve exhaustion) there was ever a patient and submissive spirit shown. As an actress in society, she played the part of a faithful conservator of truth and right. In the church she maintained a propriety which evinced to all a close and constant walk with God. In this vineyard of the Lord no greater joy was found than that of visiting the sick and pouring upon them rich and dainty viands, and into the soul the consolations of a higher joy.

Being possessed with a fine voice, she became a sweet singer. Often was the home made happy by melodies poured out to God in grateful song. In her own province, home, where nestled the dearest interests of earth, she swayed with gentleness and love.

As her sun declined and threw its lengthened shadow across the mead of life, and as her neighbors and children gathered about her a closer communion with the Divine was sought, as these words were overheard: "Jesus, come closer still." In the last extremity, while loving children profusely wept, the gentle voice of mother, so assuring, so satisfying in the past, was heard once more in tenderest tones: "Don't grieve; I am going to rest." Thus, with the Christian's reward in view, she left the long embrace of earthly ties for her home in heaven. The aged husband still lingers. May he, too, be ready! The faithfulness of the dear ones, in whose home our mother died, can be rewarded fully only in heaven. C. W. REAMES, M. D.

SIMMONS—MARY ANN SIMMONS was born Feb 19, 1822, and died May 2, 1895, near Lake Como, Miss.

Reuben Simmons, her husband, died Dec. 1, 1862—during the great Civil War—the time of strife, toil and struggle, and left her with eight little children to care for, two of whom have gone before.

She was a member of the M. E. Church, and dated her conversion back to her youth. She was a true Christian, and loved and served her God. She was always on time for worship. She was a mother to her neighbors, especially in time of need. To know her was to love her. Amid her last hours of pain she often sang and prayed. "Dear children, meet me in heaven. My way is clear before me," were among her last words. Though she is gone before, her good, tender and Christian influence is with us. She leaves to bereave her death six children, fourteen grandchildren and a host of friends.

May God bless the bereaved ones, and direct them aright, that they may fulfill the request and meet her in heaven, where there will be no more sorrow, pain nor parting.

ATCHISON—Sister ATCHISON was born Sept. 6, 1833; joined the M. E. Church, South, in childhood, and died at Delhi, La., April 10, 1895.

Her parents, Bro. and Sister Wm. E. and Lucinda Hall, of Natchez, and afterward of Tensas parish, were staunch members of the M. E. Church, South, and their home before the war was the home of the Methodist minister. When blessed of God with children, they received them as a trust, which they were to train for his kingdom. They tried to train their little ones in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Thus our sister was brought up under good Christian influences, her feet being early taught to tread the path of peace.

In 1849 Sister Atchison was married to James T. Wynne. He dying in after years, she was married to her second husband, W. E. Atchison, in June, 1878. While living at Waterproof, La., she was noted for her devotion to the work of her church, her whole soul being given thereto. Her latter days spent near our little town of Delhi were not so actively given to the church; but her faith in her Lord was always bright, and we feel assured that when she fell on death, she but opened her eyes to a brighter existence beyond.

OWENS—HENRY H. OWENS was born in Georgia, Jan. 7, 1814; moved with his parents to Chickasaw county, Miss., when he was about eleven years old; professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, when about fifteen years old. He was married to Mary J. Foster in 1837. He was a steward in the church for fifteen years, and a member of the Sunday-school for about thirty years. No one was ever more true to his pastor and to all the interests of the church. He was always ready to abide by the Discipline of the church, to attend upon its ordinances and to support its institutions. He was always at his place in his class at the Sunday-school if possible to get there, ready to receive or give instructions on God's Word.

He was a kind husband, an affectionate father and a good neighbor. His place will be hard to fill in the church and in the community in which he lived, and there is a vacancy in his home that can never be filled. He died April 27, 1895. He leaves a wife and eleven children. All of his children, but one, that are old enough belong to the church. His throat being affected so he could not talk, kept him from saying anything about dying. But the life that he has lived is evidence sufficient that he has gone to heaven.

His funeral sermon was preached by the writer to a large congregation of weeping friends. We laid his body in the cemetery of old Friendship Church, where he had served God so faithfully, to await the resurrection morn. May God bless his family and save them all in heaven! A. P. LEECH.

ROWLAND—Died, at Round Lake, Bolivar county, Miss., Dr. M. ROWLAND and his wife, M. BERNICE ROWLAND. Sister Bernice died on Jan. 24, and the Doctor on Jan. 27, 1895.

Mrs. Rowland was a Stamply, born near Fayette, Jefferson county, Miss.; was about sixty years old. Doctor was a native Mississippian, born somewhere in the Walnut Hills of Mississippi. I can not give the date of their marriage. Life with them has been a checkered one—sunshine and cloud. Started out early; surroundings cheerful, and the future full of promise. Alas! "The fairest things beneath the sun give but a flattering light." "Grim-visaged war" strode through the land, and left desolation in his track. The "silver lining" behind the clouds about these times was hardly perceptible with a good telescope. During the dark days of reconstruction the Doctor seemed to join with the multitude who go back on the "prayers of their mothers." After the war was over we parted. They went back to Mississippi; and our house toward the setting sun. For years I heard no tidings from them. At length a letter came and told us that the Doctor had sought reconciliation with his mother's God, was powerfully converted, and, like Saul of Tarsus, began to proclaim the "glad tidings of salvation." This great change in the Doctor brought joy and gladness to the heart of Mrs. Rowland. Afterward the Doctor wrote frequently to me, or, rather, they both wrote, and every letter breathed the spirit of humility and gratitude to God. H. H. BAIRD.

Pilcee, Texas.

DANTZLER—Mrs. JULIA DANTZLER, daughter of Neely and Eliza Drake, was born in Noxubee county, Miss., near Cliftonville, April 2, 1849. She was married to Mr. F. H. Dantzler, Dec. 4, 1872. Two years of their married life were spent near Center Point; then they moved to the Cliftonville neighborhood, where she lived until her death, March 28, 1895.

She was left with a mother when quite young, and at the age of six years, with her sister (who was eight), was placed in a boarding school in Pickensville, Ala.

While young she professed religion, but did not join the church until 1875, when she connected herself with the M. E. Church, South. She was a worker in the church when the P. and H. M. Society was organized. She was selected its president.

The last eight months of her earthly existence were times in which she was exceedingly happy. She told her husband that she had not seen a time when she did not feel like praising God aloud. She talked to her husband, children and friends, when able to do so, of her hopes of heaven. To her husband she said: "It is all right; God will take care of you and the children."

May God bless husband, daughter and the four sons, who are left to follow!

D. L. COGBILL.

HOWIE—JOHN HOUSTON HOWIE was born in Panola county, Miss., in 1828. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1846, and has lived a consistent member of the same until death, which occurred May 10, 1895. He was married to Caroline Luoretia Thomas, Dec. 23, 1857. Their union was one of pleasure, until separated by death.

While the outstretched pinions of the sable messenger seemed hovering near, and giving intimations of a speedy departure, Bro Howie, with characteristic calmness, expressed a loving resignation to divine will; yet how fondly did his heart cling to his wife and children, to whom he gave a tender message of love before his departure.

Dear ones, bereft of a loving husband and father, follow him as he followed Jesus, and you will meet him beyond the river, in the bright beyond, to live with God and the holy angels forever. R. H. BAIN, P. C.

'Taking

it for granted that you want to get the best results in painting, you will have to use Pure White Lead to obtain them. There are many mixtures branded "White Lead," "Pure White Lead," etc., which contain little, if any, White Lead, but are principally barytes, which is of little value, if not worth less. To be sure, accept only a genuine brand (see list).

If you want any shade of color, tint the White Lead with National Lead Co.'s tinting colors, prepared expressly for this purpose. A feature of these colors is the ease with which they are used and the exactness with which the desired shade is obtained. For particulars send for pamphlet, free.

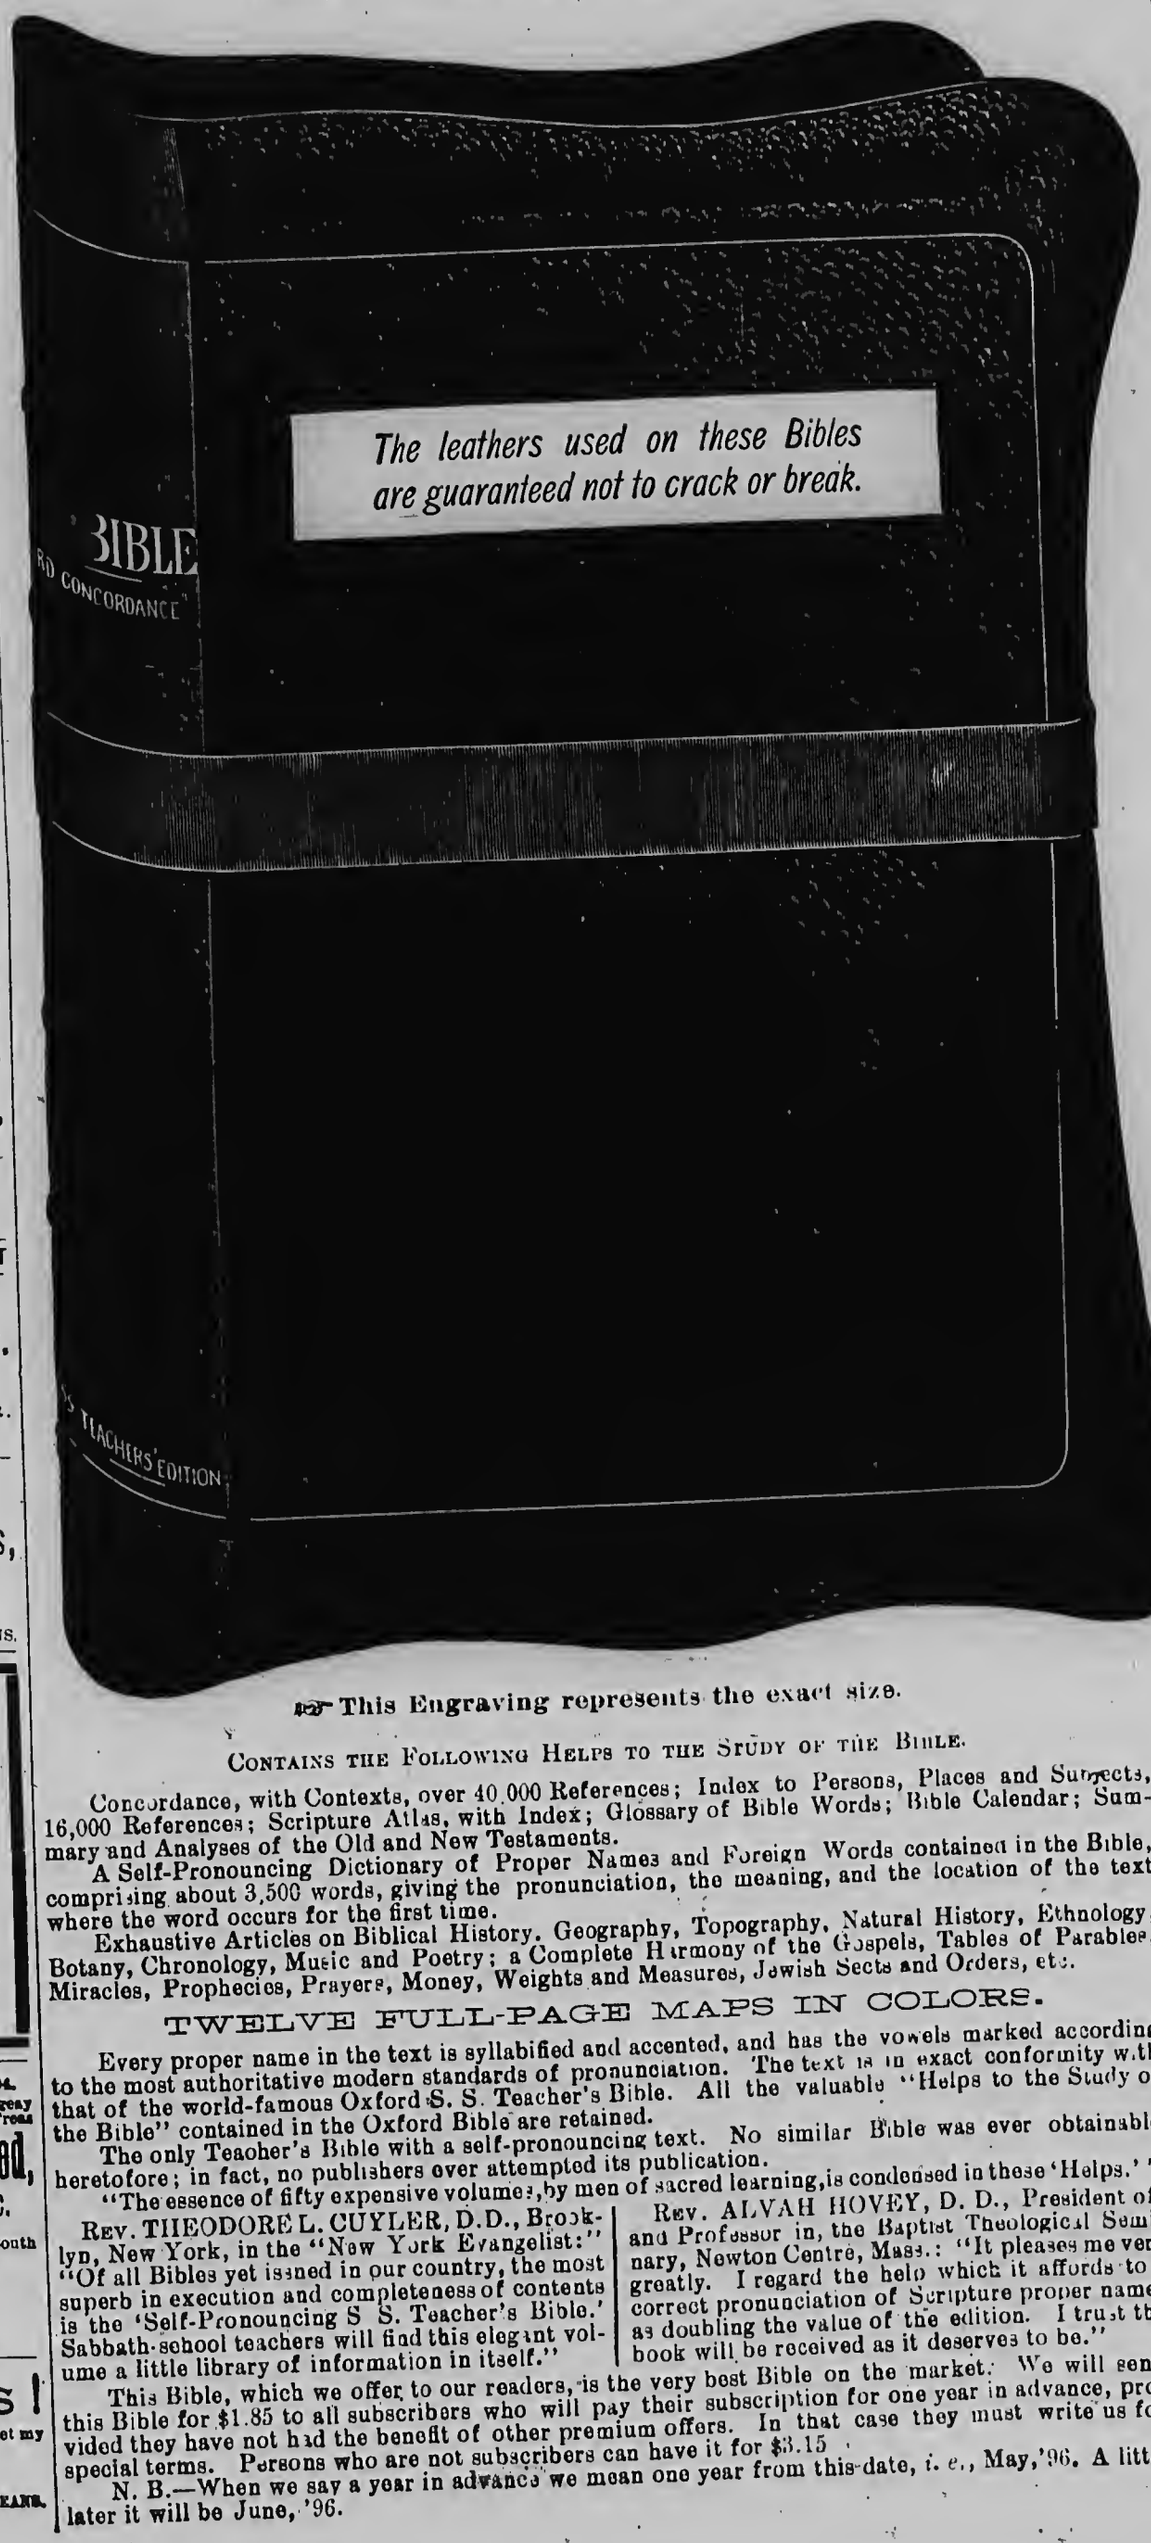
The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.

Minion, 8vo. Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.



☞ This Engraving represents the exact size.

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING HELPS TO THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Calendar; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

This Bible, which we offer to our readers, is the very best Bible on the market. We will send this Bible for $1.85 to all subscribers who will pay their subscription for one year in advance, provided they have not had the benefit of other premium offers. In that case they must write us for special terms. Persons who are not subscribers can have it for $3.15.

N. B.—When we say a year in advance we mean one year from this date, i. e., May, '96. A little later it will be June, '96.

New York City is still hard at work getting rid of the overhead wires which disfigure the city and are a constant menace to the lives and property of the citizens.

The General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church convened in Dallas, Texas, on May 16. The Northern Presbyterians met on the same day in Pittsburg, Pa.

A meeting of the representatives of all Southern industries will be held in Chicago on May 23. The object of the meeting will be to organize an association that will constantly keep the advantages of the South before colonists and capitalists.

Gov. Evans, of South Carolina, has issued an address to the citizens of the State denouncing Judge Goff's Dispensary decision. He calls the judge "a politican who disgraces the judicial ermine of the United States Court and masquerades as a judge."

New York has been very interested in the trial of the Police Inspector William McLaughlin for bribery and extortion. He was accused of taking $50 from a contractor. It is said that Gen. Campos proposes to conquer the Cubans by promising important reforms rather than by force of arms.

It is said that a crisis is approaching in the Hawaiian Islands, and the end can only be the restoration of the monarchial form of government.

No reliable war news can be obtained from Cuba, the so-called news published in the papers being mostly manufactured by the Spanish Government.

Gen. Lord Wolseley is greatly interested in the temperance movement in the British army. It is said that there never was less drinking in the army than now.

The recent by-elections in England, as well as utterances by the British press and in the House of Commons, indicate clearly that the dissolution of the present Parliament is rapidly approaching.

It has hitherto been the custom of the children attending the public schools in Austria and Hungary to kiss the hands of their teachers on arrival and departure. This has now been forbidden by a ukase just issued by the Imperial Board of Education.

It is reported from England that Lord Rosebery is in danger of complete nervous prostration. He looks ten years older than he did six months ago, and the other night, while making a speech at the reception of the National Liberal Club, he broke down completely.

A new phase has been given to the agitation over the position of the House of Lords in British politics by the efforts made, a few days ago, in the House of Commons, by the Earl of Selbourne, to retain his seat in that body. The Earl had been elected to Parliament prior to his accession to the peerage through the death of his father, and desires to retain his right to sit for the district for which he was elected, surrendering, in the meantime, his inherited right to a seat in the Upper House.

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound, or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result; and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The note by the representatives of the powers, respecting reforms in Armenia, has been handed to the Sultan of Turkey. Among the measures preliminary to reforms the note demands the appointment of a high commissioner, general amnesty and release of all political prisoners, the revision of certain judgments and the appointment of a commission, to sit at Constantinople, charged with the surveillance and application of reforms, and working in concert with the high commissioner. The principal reforms demanded are that the governors and vice-governors of Van, Erzeroum, Siva, Bitlis, Kharput and Trebizond be Christian or Mussulman, according to how the population of the places be divided. In any case, the governor or the vice-governor is to be a Christian.

LIFE IS TOO SHORT.

Life is too short for any vain regretting;
Let dead delight bury its dead, I say,
And let us go upon our way forgetting
The joys and sorrows of each yesterday.
Between the swift sun's rising and its setting
We have no time for useless tears or fretting;
Life is too short.

Life is too short for any bitter feelings;
Time is the best avenger, if we wait;
The years speed by, and on their wings bear healing;
We have no room for anything like hate.
This solemn truth the low mounds seem revealing,
That thick and fast about our feet are stealing.
Life is too short.

Life is too short for aught but high endeavor—
Too short for spite, but long enough for love;
And love lives on forever and forever—
It links the worlds that circle on above;
'Tis God's first law, the universe's lever;
In his vast realm the radiant souls sigh never;
"Life is too short."

Piedmont and the Papacy.

BY SCOTT F. HERSHEY, PH.D.

II.

The struggle for civil and religious liberty, under the charter of the New Testament teachings, began early in the centuries. The Pagan Empire of Rome persecuted the Christians up to the downfall of imperial Paganism, and the Papal persecutions began in the very first century of the attempted supremacy of the Bishopric at Rome. As Papal Rome began to rise, through the ambition of the local Bishop at Rome, she sought to force submission to her will in an ever-widening circle. Then (and here is an established fact) the Bishopric of Rome—there was no Popes yet—incorporated, as a part of its ecclesiastical machinery, the same persecution practiced up to that time by Paganism alone.

This persecution early reaches the little garden valleys of the Italian Alps, whose soil for thirteen centuries was to be saturated with the blood of those who loved the Lord. In the course of the church at Rome towards these believers in the Piedmont valleys, we shall see how, at its very dawn, Romanism adopted a policy which, by natural sequence, made it the unchangeable foe of civil and religious liberty. From its earliest existence Christianity maintained in these valleys an independence of the Papal rule, preserved a similarity to the apostolic church in faith, and kept up a continuity of the Christian virtues.

In the fourth century the Bishop of Milan presided over these churches. He denied any succession from Peter, held to justification by faith, practiced two sacraments instead of seven, knew nothing of the mass or extreme unction, while he declared that to adore images was pure Paganism. The evidence is perfectly clear that in the second, seventh, ninth, and in the eleventh centuries the Piedmont Christians had the pure Word of God, and had pastors learned, devout, and married. In faith, morals and government it was a Protestant Christianity we behold in the Piedmont country. The persecutions of Pagan Rome had driven many of the Christians to these mountain fastnesses, and Papal Rome pursued them into their exile, and visited upon them more hateful persecutions.

The twelfth and thirteenth centuries form the great divide between the dark ages and the modern Protestant centuries. The light is beginning to show signs of breaking over Europe. The Popes prohibited the Bible in Italy, and conduct a crusade against the Piedmont Christians. During this period lived Dominic, the founder of the Dominican order of monks. Through him the Pope organized the Tribunal of the Inquisition to oppose heresy, and made him the first Inquisitor General. This Pope was Gregory IX. The Piedmontese had already passed through ten persecutions, and were now to suffer the Tribunal of the Inquisition. The story is one of harrowing feelings, and truly sad to relate. Here is a picture of the persecution of the Tribunal of the Inquisition in the Piedmont: Children were torn away from their parents; pastors slain and kidnapped, people covered with pitch and set on fire, the flesh beaten off with heavy chains, the shoulders beaten with burning hands, flayed alive, thrown from tops of precipices, sawn asunder, impaneled on iron spikes, buried alive, fastened down in the furrows of their own fields and plowed into jelly, blown up with gunpowder shot into the mouth after the tongue had been cut out, limbs chopped off slowly with a hatchet, tied up to trees and the hearts and lungs hacked out, fathers walking to their death with the heads of their sons hanging about their necks, infants dashed against the rocks, breasts of women torn out, quick-lime put into bleeding wounds, nails torn out by the roots, tight cords drawn round the limbs and drawn a little tighter each day for weeks, crushed under massive slabs, lowered by machinery. This is the record. How diabolical it all seems!

Wasted in numbers by the destructive persecution, they appealed to Francis I. of France for simple toleration. He replied that, as he was busy burning heretics in Paris, he was not likely to spare them in the Alps. The darkest hour of the night has now come. Pope Innocent VIII. undertook to utterly exterminate them. He promised forgiveness of sin to all who would engage in the work of extermination. The Pope's legate strangled eighteen. The people fled in terror to high caverns among the upper Alps. Here, with their cattle and provisioned for two years, they sought asylum. The legate ordered immense fires at the cavern entrances, and as the people were driven out by the smoke, they perished in the flames, or were cut down by the sword. So fell three thousand.

By 1685 a handful only were left. Terrific and sudden came the edict for their exile in midwinter. This was done to make their suffering as intense as possible. They crossed the Alps, leaving their course strewn with their dead. Weak and exhausted, they found a welcome on the shores of the blue lake of Geneva.

In four years a remnant of eight hundred started to return to their native land. It took them weeks to cross the Alps, but at last they stood within the Piedmont valleys. They entered solemnly into a covenant, involving the principles of brotherly attachment, Christian equality, justice and forbearance to enemies in war, and personal responsibility to the right.

But the end was not yet. It has been but one short century ago that it was determined by the Papacy to destroy the Protestants of the Piedmont. All the able-bodied men were on the frontier defending their country against France. The old and the young were alone with the women. The friendly message came to them that they were to be massacred that evening as the convent bells rung. Hurriedly the doors and windows were barricaded, and a messenger was sent to the nearest post for their husbands and fathers. The commanding general hastened forward with a small troop. They arrived just in time to prevent a terrible tragedy. But these noble Piedmont Protestant soldiers did not shed a drop of blood. They only turned the leaders over to the authorities. But, alas! the authorities were Papal, and they liberated them, and caused the general to be dismissed who was guilty of defending his own home and those of his soldiers. A Roman Catholic officer was given his place. The only objections Rome ever filed against the Piedmontese were that they read the Bible, had married pastors, and acted upon their own consciences.

A Notable Gathering.

The delegates to the first Mississippi State Epworth League Conference assembled in the Methodist Church, Grenada, Miss., Friday morning, May 10, 1895. The Conference was called to order by Rev. R. W. Bailey, of Hazlehurst; and after religious services, conducted by Rev. H. Walter Featherstun, D. D., of Yazoo City, Rev. R. W. Bailey was elected temporary chairman, and Rev. B. P. Jaco temporary secretary. A Committee on Permanent Organization was appointed, which made the following nominations: For president, Dr. R. W. Jones; for first vice-president, Rev. J. A. Randolph; for second vice-president, Dr. J. C. Ballard; for third vice-president, Miss Mattie Barrington; for recording secretary, Rev. T. B. Clifford; for corresponding secretary and treasurer, Rev. R. W. Bailey. The report was adopted. The president, Dr. R. W. Jones, then took the chair, and in a few well-chosen words emphasized the importance of the great work before us, and called attention to the need of a baptism of power from on high as a preparation for the work. After engaging in silent prayer for two minutes, the Conference was led in prayer by Rev. H. C. Morehead. All preachers in the two Conferences in Mississippi were constituted ex-officio members of the State League Conference. Rev. E. S. Lewis, chairman of Committee on Credentials, made report, and read list of delegates and Leagues from which they came. A Committee on Finance was appointed. Hon. J. C. Longstreet, one of the most talented young lawyers in the State, and a member of the Grenada League, delivered a very eloquent address of welcome. Rev. R. W. Bailey, of Hazlehurst, in fitting words, responded. The program was then continued in regular order as follows: "A Model Epworth League," by Hon. J. A. E. Pyle, of Iuka; "Methodism—Some Incidents from Its History," by Rev. J. S. Oakley, of Holly Springs; "Devotional Work in the League," by Miss Vic Thompson, of Tupelo; "Literary Work in the League," by Rev. N. G. Augustus, of Crawford; "What the Church May Expect of the Epworth League," by Dr. S. A. Steele; "Claims of the Epworth League," by Rev. J. W. Chambers, of Brookhaven; "How May the Work of the Epworth League Be Best Promoted in Every Charge?" by Judge L. H. Estes, of Memphis; "The Dawn of a New Era," by Rev. H. Walter Featherstun, D. D., of Yazoo City. These all reached high-water mark. Add to these the thrilling address of Bishop Charles B. Galloway (whom we claim as our own), setting forth the wisdom of the League movement to develop the young life of our church, and showing their relation and responsibility to the nations yet unsaved.

And what shall I say of the sunrise prayer meetings, and the testimony and praise services, in which the young people participated with a zeal and enthusiasm that is rarely seen? It seemed as if the Leagues throughout the State had selected the prettiest girls to send as delegates to Grenada; and, as one after another they arose to testify for Christ, they impressed us with the fact that the young womanhood of Mississippi is in the advance column of church activity.

And the young men! Their faces fairly shone with ecstatic joy as they told of their devotion to duty.

A resolution was adopted looking to the circulation of the Epworth Era; another emphasizing the importance of using our own hymn book. One referring to the organization of a League in every charge in the State before the holding of the next State Conference was adopted by a rising vote.

The officers of the Conference were constituted a committee to arrange time, place, and program for next annual meeting.

Communications were received from E. A. Hollingsworth, chairman of Attendance Committee of International Conference, to be held in Chattanooga in June, and a Committee of Arrangements was appointed to look after transportation, etc., of Mississippi visitors.

The Conference sent greetings to Woman's Board of Foreign Missions, assembled in city of Meridian, and they, in return, sent cordial greeting to us.

During our stay in Grenada the Conference visited, in a body, the Grenada Collegiate Institute, and was present at the morning religious services, and enjoyed the delightful sacred music rendered by the college orchestra.

Dr. Murrah's sermon on Sunday, at eleven o'clock, on "The Profitableness of Godliness," was a masterly effort. Said Senator Walthall to me next day, "That was a fine sermon, and I was impressed with many things he said."

R. W. Bailey, of Hazlehurst, preached at the Presbyterian Church, and we heard fine reports from many present.

And then the love-feast at three o'clock, conducted by Rev. J. A. Randolph—what a time that was! One preacher, thirty-five years in the ministry, said it was the biggest thing he had ever witnessed. It was a veritable Pentecost.

The address, on Sunday night, by Dr. S. A. Steele, on the "Pioneers of Methodism in America," was superb. Every Methodist who heard him was proud of being a Methodist; and those who heard him, and were not Methodists, doubtless wished they were. We Mississippians love Steele. He was with us nearly all through the Conference, and his presence was an inspiration to us. Nearly the whole of the immense congregation shook hands with him Sunday night, thus evidencing their sympathy and co-operation in the great work.

The people of Grenada left nothing undone that could have been done for our comfort and convenience. The members of the Grenada League, led by their pastor, that noble fellow, T. W. Lewis, had charge of the arrangements. Carriages met every train and carried the delegates to their homes. The young ladies, with their handsome badges, labeled every delegate on arrival, and the Grenada printing office furnished programs, etc., free of charge. Of course, a resolution of thanks was offered in open Conference, and adopted by a rising vote.

More than two hundred delegates and visitors were present during the session. At the close of Sunday night services prayer was offered by T. B. Clifford, and the benediction was pronounced by J. A. Randolph.

This Conference I verily believe marks an epoch in Mississippi Methodism.

Some Points of Methodist Doctrine.

Nearly all my old books draw a pretty wide distinction between natural evil and moral evil. Original sin, in so far as it is generated, is a natural evil, and yet it is the fruitful source of all the moral evil known among men. Men come into the world destitute of original righteousness, and with natures inclined to evil, and that continually. There is no inherent good in them. The thing we are talking about consists in loss, in the loss of good, and not in the infusion of positive moral evil. God may, and does, withdraw himself, but he infuses, communicates evil into no being, either angels or men. He can not be the author of evil, either by creation or by infusion. By the death of Christ, through the merit of his blood, he has made a full and sufficient oblation and satisfaction for the sins of the whole world, both original and actual; and he has secured, unconditionally, initial life for all men, has lifted up the whole human race and put it upon a platform of second probation, and secured the gift and help of the Holy Spirit for every human being under the shining sun. This I understand to be the uniform teaching of Methodist writers from the first down to this day. If need be, I could point out these thoughts, more or less fully expanded, in one or more of the old books referred to in a former communication. They will be found in a very condensed form in Articles II., VII., VIII., IX., X and XX. of our Articles of Religion.

As I read our books, the Holy Ghost, as a prevenient gift, enlightens every man that comes into the world, and makes him know that he is a sinner, and that he stands in need of a personal Savior. He reproves, or convinces, the world of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment. If men, constituted and made free, moral agents by the grace of God in Christ, respond to this conviction and call of God to salvation, the Spirit leads them on in the way of life. The Word of God, a divinely inspired revelation of his holy will concerning us, and a clear guide to holy living, shines like a sun in the heavens on the pathway of the penitent sinner and on the path of the earnest seeker after holiness.

Genuine repentance for sin always issues in saving faith in Christ. Faith is the condition of personal acceptance and of personal salvation from sin. Personal salvation, from the beginning of it to the end of it, is conditioned upon the continued exercise of faith. Faith is the nexus, or bond, of union between the human soul and God. God forgives the sinner, wipes out his sins, sets him free from them, and says, "Go, and sin no more."

God regenerates the sinner, begets him from above, makes him a new creature—not by changing the constitutional elements of his nature, but by extracting something and inserting something else in its place, but by imparting new life, the life of God in the human soul. He is born of the Spirit of God, and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit, and it is spiritual and spiritually minded.

Thus I read the old books and the Word of God on this deep subject. This new creature is a son of God; a real, live, living, new-born son of God. He is in the kingdom, and an heir of glory, with a clear title to his inheritance with the saints above in his own bosom. If he should drop dead that instant, he would go straight home to God. This is my understanding of this subject.

I do not understand that any more original sin, or natural corruption, is left in this man than was born in him at first. If no more and no worse now than at first, I do not suppose he is any more hateful or offensive to God now than when he was an infant in his mother's arms. I can not possibly conceive how he would, or could, be offensive to God then or now. Surely the infant is not to blame for what it is, and the new-born man, forgiven and accepted of God, is not to blame for what was begotten in him by his father according to the flesh. That which is born of the flesh is flesh. He is not to be praised for that new and spiritual life begotten in him by the Spirit of God. All that is good in him is extraneous to him, and came from above.

I gather from the Word of God and from the old books that this new life, by the constant help of the Holy Spirit and a diligent use of the means of grace, may, and will, become mature life, but never a perfect life in the sense that Adam was perfect before the fall, or in the sense that unfallen angels are perfect. It may become—indeed, it must become—a perfect Christian life. The spirit, the principle, the bent, the animus of this new life is to attain unto perfection. The perfection of this life is subsequent to the beginning of it, and in this sense it is a "second blessing." The beginning was in order to the end, the completion, the perfection of this life.

Right along here my old books, specially the more scientific of them, do some very fine hair splitting—almost too fine for a dull mind like mine. One of them says regeneration is complete in itself, and is not sanctification begun. Another—several of them—says regeneration is sanctification begun. Laying them side by side, and taking their definitions and explanations, they all mean the same thing. Not one of them ever claims that we are so far freed from original sin, from the deprivations and imperfections of nature, as to make us absolutely perfect, or impeccable. They all hold that we need to strive against sin and to pray for the forgiveness of our sins as long as we live.

My books all teach that the world has never seen but one absolutely perfect man—the man Christ Jesus. He had no original sin, could not have, because he was not naturally generated, and he committed no actual sin.

All my books teach that men may be made perfect in love; all may, can, and ought to love God with all the heart, mind, soul, and strength, so that every act, thought and word will spring out of a heart of love, and be governed by the spirit and principle of love. This is Christian perfection. It is such perfection as is possible to, and is required of, beings hedged in and limited by the imperfections and natural deprivations that come to us by generation, by original sin.

These are some of the points of Methodist doctrine as I gather them from the books. I have set these things down in my own words, as I have read and understood my teachers. So far as I know, there is not one single original idea in these papers. I have not quoted from the books, but have sifted out what filtered into my mind while reading.

GILDEROY.

The Woman's Meeting at Meridian.

MR. EDITOR: Meridian, Miss., has recently enjoyed the honor and felicity of entertaining the Woman's Board of Missions of the M. E. Church, South. Seventeen years ago our General Conference authorized our women to organize themselves into a missionary society to work in behalf of women in a sort of sub-co-ordinate relation to our general Missionary Board. The success of the women has justified the wisdom of their authorization. Their recent deliberations in our city evinced most decidedly both their zeal and their skill in the conduct of missionary work. They have raised during the last year more than $33,000 for missionary purposes, supported more than forty workers in the fields, and have more than $20,000 in bank to their credit, while the Board of Missions of the M. E. Church, South, is in the same unfortunate condition. These women appropriate money after they collect it, and every member pays a dollar and twenty cents a year. They seem wise in counsel and heroic in execution. They have workers in China, in Mexico, and in Brazil. The work in each of these countries was carefully enquired into and favorably reported during their recent session. In the Scarritt Training-school, at Kansas City, they have a most valuable auxiliary, not only to the work of their own Board, but to the entire missionary operations of our church. Here are trained, not only nurses and other useful Christian workers for the home field, but here all candidates for any kind of work in foreign fields may have their capacities for service trained and tested, so that the church may not only send out much better equipped and more efficient laborers, but may be saved the costly and time-wasting experiment of sending out some well-meaning persons, who, upon trial, are found to be unfit for the work. This school, under Miss Gibson's management, is doing a much-needed work in a very commendable way. Five young ladies, who had taken courses in this school, applied, and were accepted for work in foreign fields.

The personnel of the body was in itself quite worthy of notice. The mother of Bishop Hendrick; the wife of Bishop Wilson, the widow of Bishop Wightman, the sister of Bishop Haygood, and many other elect ladies, a number of whom are already wearing a crown of glory, constituted a body of rare composition. Mrs. Wightman makes a good president, and, above all, is full with the zeal of burning love for the cause. Business went on with dispatch. Miss Haygood, from China, and Miss Bruce, from Brazil, were present, and added much to the interest of the session by their accounts of the work in those far off lands. Dr. Morrison gave a very interesting and favorable account of the work of the Woman's Board in Mexico. Bishop Galloway preached an edifying sermon for them on Sunday. Mrs. Butler has made the Woman's Missionary Advocate pay all its expenses from the start and earn eleven hundred dollars besides. Rome has long utilized the peculiar powers of woman to advance the work of the church. Without the sisterhoods Catholicism would die. I greatly misjudge the facts in this case if we have not here a newly organized form of power in Protestantism which is destined to occupy an important place among the mighty movements of modern times toward the regeneration of the world. Woman's work for woman will mightily aid in uplifting, purifying and transforming the heathen into Christians.

In the Living Present.

Miss Nightingale, serene in old age, abundant in labors of love, eloquently remarks in Young Woman: "Many women vociferously insist on rights, but have little to say about the right. Say and do the right, and the rights will take care of themselves."

Dr. H. K. Carroll, Methodist, religious editor of the Independent, says in the Methodist Review that, as a rule, Protestants treat the Roman Catholic Church unfairly. That the latter is a Christian church, emphasizing the doctrine of the Holy Trinity. The utterances of some of its benighted zealots ought not to be taken as the accepted expression of their church. But what of Ablegate Satolli's and Bishop Ireland's political aspirations and intrigues?

The aged wife of George Muller, Bristol, England, died recently. Though inexpressibly distressed, the venerable man of faith felt sufficiently composed to conduct the funeral service himself. His sermon was tearfully pathetic. Text: "For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain."

In Chicago ten churches have been abandoned by their former worshipers to the occupation of various secular trades, more or less reputable. One of these ten is now a dancing-hall; another a saloon. Of course, growth of city and change of surroundings necessitated said abandonment. In New Orleans a former Jewish temple is now a steam laundry; a former Protestant Church has been converted into a public hall, where balls, etc., are frequently held.

The Nation holds that drunkenness and irritable temper of the author of "The Raven" were not his worst faults. Had had no conception of truth and honor. Had known no barrier between right and wrong. One of his former employers, T. W. White, had denominated him an unmitigated rascal. The above paper furnishes proof of its assertions. Goethe remarks, that in a certain sense history is the final judgment.

A Methodist in Connecticut has given ten thousand dollars to the New Orleans University, an institution of the M. E. Church for colored people.

IOH DIEN.

CALLING THE ANGELS IN.

BY MARGARET J. PRESTON.

We mean to do it; some day, some day,
We mean to slacken this fevered rush
That is wearing our very souls away,
And grant to our goaded heart a hush
That is holy enough to let them hear
The footsteps of angels drawing near.

We mean to do it; oh, never doubt,
When the burden of daytime toil is o'er,
We'll sit and muse while the stars come out,
As patriarch sat at the open door
Of his tent, with a heavenward gazing eye,
To watch for the angels passing by.

We've seen them afar at high noontide,
When fiercely the world's hot flashings beat;
Yet never have bidden them turn aside
And tarry awhile in converse sweet;
Nor prayed them to hallow the cheer we spread,
To drink of our wine and break our bread.

We promised our hearts that, when the stress
Of life-work reaches the longed-for close,
When the weight that we groan with hinders less,
We'll loosen our thoughts to such repose
As banishes care's distracting din,
And then—we will call the angels in.

The day we dreamed of comes at length,
When, tired of every mocking quest,
And broken in spirit and shorn of strength,
We drop, indeed, at the door of rest;
And wait and watch as the days wane on—
But the angels we meant to call are gone!

Orthodox Methodism.

What constitutes loyalty to orthodox Methodism? May we not say, an acceptance and a defense of the doctrines of the Methodist Church, as promulgated by her founder, Jno. Wesley, and subsequently endorsed by the accepted writers of her theology, such as Chas. Wesley, Jno. Fletcher, Adam Clark, Richard Watson, and T. N. Rawlston?

Does the course of study, now ordered by the General Conference of the M. E Church, South, to prepare candidates for the itineracy and local ranks, teach that in regeneration there is such a cleansing of the heart from all inbred sin, that any other work of grace for that purpose is not to be believed or expected? If such doctrine is the teaching of the present Methodism, why are not ministers, who teach that the blessing of entire sanctification is a separate and subsequent work of the Holy Spirit (to be received instantaneously, by faith, and not by growth) arraigned before the proper authorities and tried for heresy?

Now, until this is done, is it right for any Bishop, presiding elder, or pastor to condemn, on his own judgment, any accredited Methodist minister for preaching what is called the "second-blessing theory of sanctification" as heretical, and forbid him the use of the pulpit of the Methodist Church, South, or accuse him of disloyalty to Methodism? If these second-blessing brethren are not in harmony with Methodist text-books of theology of the present day, let the proper steps be taken to try them for heresy, and give opportunity for renunciation, or expel them from the church; so the common people may learn just what Methodists, of the M. E. Church, South, do accept as true, and command to be taught, in order to be in harmony with standard theology.

I am a preacher in the M. E Church, South, since 1858 All the text-books commanded of me to study (if I understand them) teach what some brethen call the "residue theory." That is—that in regeneration the work of sanctification is begun, but not completed; that entire sanctification is by faith and received instantaneously when specially sought. I have known many precious saints who have professed to have received it in this way, whose subsequent lives adorned the doctrine they professed. I have yet to know of one soul, truly entirely sanctified, that claims that the blessing was received when regenerated.

It seems to me that this wrangling about how you get it is not wise. No true Methodist will object to anyone being entirely sanctified, so they get the genuine article. If it has been obtained at regeneration, glory to God! But, if on close examination, you find that somehow you missed it, and pride, anger, self-will, malice, envy and all the evil brood of a carnal heart yet dwells within, and ofttimes dominates you, suppose you try the "second-blessing" route—it can't possibly harm you.

What the Methodist Church needs is an army of consecrated, sanctified men and women who never make that prayer: "I pray thee have me excused," but whose constant prayer is, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do," and suffer, for thy sake.

Just as some profess to be converted, and are mistaken, so some who have professed entire sanctification are simply regenerated, and not a clear case of that grace. There is some spurious gold and silver money in circulation, yet the United States Treasury vault has plenty of genuine coin. "By their fruits ye shall know them."

Oh, for a Methodist membership, groaning to be made perfect in love in this life, so Christ can have one church without spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing, holy, and without blemish! (Eph. v, 27.)

After Eight Years.

After eight years of itinerant life as a Methodist preacher, I find myself in some things a little wiser, if not a better man. There are some things that I know now that I did not know eight years ago, which I thank God for, and some which I would be glad not to know.

I have learned more of the art and intrigue of men than I used to know, and have learned that all which "glitters is not gold." I know more to-day about Fletcher, Watson, Wesley, McTyeire, Porter, Fisher, Pope and Tigert than I did eight years ago. I know more now about the Word of God and his wonderous love to fallen man than I ever did, but I frankly confess that I know so little still, that I am ashamed of my ignorance, and not for the world would I set my judgment against or enter into controversy with the weakest of my brethren in the ministry on any deep subject, the "second blessing" not excepted.

I have learned that preachers, as all other men, are human, and, therefore, not infallible, nor will they ever be in this state of existence. When I was a boy I thought that whatever a preacher said or did was strictly right, but I find now that they need the same eye to guide, the same hand to lead, and the same grace to sustain them that other poor mortals need, and, unless momently kept by the power of God, they will fall and do fall just like poor Adam did.

I have learned that preaching and professing entire sanctification and living it are not exactly the same.

I have learned in the last eight years to more closely than ever observe a very important lesson taught me by my now glorified mother when a boy, and that was, never to meddle with questions that I know nothing about, and that when older people were talking children should keep silence.

I have long since learned that theories and dogmas do not convert. While some men are contending about terms others are sweeping on like a mighty current down to hell unsaved.

A Name to Be Immortalized!

While statesmen and politicians and poor folks are fuming and fussing over the present hard times, and still harder ones to come, my dear Brother, or most excellent Sister Methodist, you enjoy the power of immortalizing your name and memory in the history of Louisiana. "How, oh how?" By endowing a professorship, say the chair of English, in Centenary College. "Ah, well; 'tis true I have the money and could get along very well without it, but now I do not see this exactly as you do." Then, to be sure, you have not thought much about this matter.

Our Methodism is firmly established in Louisiana, and must, in keeping with its progressive nature, eventually be the mightiest religion in the State. "Well, what then." Why, then, Centenary College will be the mightiest power in Louisiana Methodism. "You reckon; didn't somebody tell me that the college was going down hill several years ago, and was almost dead?" There may be no telling what you have heard; the facts are that the college has encountered war, famine and pestilence, but is still as live as it has ever been. After Methodism in Louisiana shall have died (?), then Centenary will have ample time to make all necessary arrangements for her own funeral. You would run no risk by handing over a check for $10,000; but, rather than be hasty, suppose you attend the approaching commencement exercises and get better acquainted with the college and excellent people of Jackson, La. If so, you will likely decide that you have no other such opportunity of making such a wise and safe investment. A name to be immortalized June 5, 1895! The blank is open. Whose name will fill it?

An Interrogation Point Interrogated.

In the ADVOCATE, of May 2, is a paragraph under the caption, "An Interrogation Point," and signed "A Methodist," seemingly intended to disparage the results of the meeting in McCarthy Square, conducted by Rev. D. C. Rawls, on the ground that not a single one had applied for membership in any of our churches as a result of the meeting. I know nothing of the results of the meeting, otherwise than by hearsay; but some facts ought to be stated exhibiting another side to the question. The meeting was held outside of any church by a man who had no authority to receive anyone into the church, and no church into which to receive them. The pastors of the churches within range of the meeting took no interest in it, and gave the converts, who were mostly ragged, untrained, and ignorant, no encouragement to come into their churches. Two interrogation points suggest themselves: Where were the pastors? How could these people find the way into the churches?

Meeting of the Board of Missions in Louisville, May 3 and 4.

This was an open meeting, at which missionaries, visitors and reporters were allowed. An ideal meeting, full of enthusiasm, frank and open for every question, with harmony and the best of feeling. Few things would inspire more intelligent interest in missions than attendance on such a meeting of this great Board. The inside workings are seen, and many perplexities answered. The difficulty of meeting demands is better appreciated. Free discussion, and enlightened treatment of all questions arising, is certainly the true course. Let pains be taken to turn on the light. The church can be carried better that way. After all the discussion, very little change was made in the recommendations of the Committee on Estimates; but this does not show that it would have been as well to have adopted the committee's report without discussion. The discussions were intensely earnest and interesting, participated in by most of the Bishops and many of the members. Perhaps the two points on which the greatest interest was aroused were the Western work and specials in connection with the establishment of a mission in North China. The amount appropriated was about the same as last year. The Western work was granted about the same as last year. We believe a more liberal policy toward that field is in the line of the highest interests of the church. If there is never to be a satisfactory settlement of Methodist occupancy by federation, we need the territory to widen and strengthen our base for home, as well as foreign, operations. If such federation comes, it will not be to its advantage that we have followed a weak policy. It is not just to see a parallel in the occupancy of the West by us, and that of the South by the M. E. Church. There are many points of difference. It is not in the line of the compact that the M. E. Church occupies the South, while it is not in opposition to it that we occupy with them the new West, that has still room for all, and more than all can do. The occupation of the West by us has little or no political significance, which is more than can be said of the occupation of the South by the M. E Church. Beside, in the West, for the most part, we occupy territory not occupied by the M. E. Church, and many times not by any other church. For these and other reasons we would stand for a vigorous policy in the West. The progress with all churches is slow. As Bishop Keener said to us, "Notwithstanding all the mistakes, mishaps, misfits and division, there is still substantial gain." May the great Head of the church inspirit the workers and stir up their supporters!

It is interesting to study the divisions of our mission work. Of what may be termed the domestic work, under the charge of the General Board, in our opinion the Indian Mission Conference is the only one that receives anything like adequate aid.
